VIRGINIA BEACH NEPTUNE FESTIVAL

to come

A fireworks play off Virginia Beach's oceanfront will mark King Neptune's departure into the sea Oct. 6, but not before a grab-bag of events are packed into the last six days of the celebration.

• The Virginia Beach Civic Chorus will present a concert at 8 p.m. Oct. 3 at Princess Anne High School.

• The Youth Day Festival Parade will start at 9 p.m. Oct. 4 at Windsor Woods Elementary School, and head toward Mount Trashmore, where youngsters will enjoy a milk carton boat derby at 10 a.m. and a Youth Fair from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

• The Grand Coronation Day Parade will begin 9 a.m. Oct. 5 and head west on Virginia Beach Boulevard from Princess Anne High School to Dorset Avenue.

• Festival Bands' Field Show will be held at 1 p.m. Oct. 5 at Cox High School Stadium.

• Fireworks will announce the coronation of King Neptune during an awards ceremony at 7 p.m. Oct. 5 at Mount Trashmore.

• The Coronation Ball will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club Oct. 5 for the benefit of the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Association.

• The Dixie Squares will also present a Coronation Ball at 9 p.m. Oct. 5 at the Civic Center. Spectators will be admitted free.

• Log rolling and rowing championships will be presented by the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation from 1 to 5 p.m. Oct. 6 on Mount Trashmore Lake.

• The Neptune Festival Boat Regatta, sponsored by Tidewater Hobbies, U.S. Power Squadron and U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, will be held from 1 to 6 p.m. Oct. 6 on Chesapeake Bay.

• A festival concert-in-the-park is scheduled for 2 p.m. Oct. 6 at Red Wing Park.

• King Neptune will leave Virginia Beach at 8:30 p.m. at the Steel Pier followed by a fireworks display that will close the 10 day Neptune Festival.

The map on the wall behind Martha Burgess' desk looks something like a giant pin-cushion.

Clusters of red, blue and yellow pins, show the Virginia Beach school research staff where major residential developments are planned.

The pins are color-coded to show small, medium and large housing tracts, and that gives Mrs. Burgess an idea of where school-age youngsters will be living in the next decade.

It's her job to figure out how many youngsters new developments will generate in the future so the School Board can determine how to handle the new student population.

Sometimes it's a guessing game. "The character of the population is changing," she explained. "There are lots of new households with no children."

Mrs. Burgess noted that many young, as yet childless couples are purchasing three and four-bedroom homes. The school research staff is still puzzling over the statistics.

"People are waiting longer (to have children)," Mrs. Burgess observed, "and they are having smaller families when they do have them." And then, some single people are purchasing homes, too.

And while the Kempville-Green Run areas of Virginia Beach are experiencing a building boom, there are indications that residential construction may taper off in the future because of tight money.

Mrs. Burgess, who helps coordinate school planning with residential development, said some developers have money to continue residential construction in Virginia Beach, but others will not be able to break ground for more homes after they complete those now under construction.

"There's been a decline of 40 per cent in building permits over the last year," Mrs. Burgess explained, and it

Developer drops rezoning bid

Three petitions by Commonwealth Financial Corp. for zoning changes to allow construction of a residential housing development on 52 acres of land in Princess Anne Borough were allowed to be withdrawn by Virginia Beach City Council at its Sept. 30 meeting.

The petitions came before Council following a 90-day deferral from the June 24 meeting. The Planning Commission had recommended denial of the first two applications and made no recommendation on the third.

The Planning Commission's recommendations were based on the reasoning that the subject area had "inadequate facilities" to cope with a population increase. The commission cited "traffic, schools, and fire protection" as the major inadequacies.

Attorney Calvin Spain, appearing for Commonwealth Financial Corp., contended that the inadequacies were not as intense as the commission believed. A fire station in Seastack had been "overlooked" by the commission, he said. Also, Spain pointed out, General Booth Boulevard is set for widening.

Planning Director Charles C. Carrington told Council, however, that the widening of General Booth Boulevard was "some time away," and affirmed before Council that he opposed the zoning changes. Blackwater Borough Councilman John Baum also spoke out against the change, stating that neighboring schools would be affected by the additional students that would come with commercial development of the property.

In face of opposition, Spain said "If Council can't act favorably (for the developers), we would like to withdraw the petitions, instead of being encumbered by a denial."

Kempville Borough Councilman Henry McCoy disapproved, favoring outright denial. He called the proposed project "another wearing down process like Windermere," a town house and apartment complex in Kempville that Council recently okayed against a strong local opposition.

The first two petitions called for zoning changes from R-8 residential district to A-1 apartment complex district for parcels of land along the west and east side of General Booth Boulevard south of S. Birdneck Road. The third petition called for a zoning change from R-8 residential to B-1 commercial residential for a 2.3 acre parcel of land south of S. Birdneck Road and 115 feet east of General Booth Boulevard.

The motions for withdrawal of all three petitions passed 9-1 with McCoy voting the only dissent. At-large Councilman Patrick Standing was absent from the meeting.

In other action, Council:

• reappointed unanimously W.S. Fenner and Clark Fleming to three-year terms on the Personnel Board;

• reappointed unanimously George A. Woody to a four-year term on the Industrial Development Authority;

• appointed unanimously Councilman McCoy to fill the unexpired term of former Councilman F. Reid Ervin on the Tidewater Transportation District Commission;

• approved unanimously a motion to pay members of the Personnel Board $50 per meeting. The board, which meets only to hear appeals, has met 11 times in the past six years;

• and, approved unanimously bingo and raffle permits for the Sea Vacationer softball team, the Civitan Club of Virginia Beach, Old Donation Church and Weblin Place Recreation Association, Inc.

Residents turn out for festival

The moon hung brightly over the Atlantic Ocean, its glittering reflection promenading over the surf like a spotlight focusing all attention on the sea. A few yards offshore, a small craft, decorated as if it were a Christmas tree, cut through the waves.

In the early evening of Sept. 27, the ocean offered a fitting backdrop for the beginning of the first annual Neptune Festival, a celebration which originated with the sea but has since grown into much more than that.

An estimated 50,000 persons--mostly in families and groups of friends--jammed Atlantic Avenue and the boardwalk on the festival's opening night, looking for fun and satisfying their curiosity about what had been billed as an event to someday to someday rival Mardi Gras.

The original concept of the festival was to extend the tourist citizen past its traditional end on Labor Day and to promote feelings of community spirit through the city's diverse and sprawling boroughs.

Sure enough, festival promoters said many out-of-towners were present opening night, but the beachfront crowd was conspicuously different from its normal mid-summer counterpart. The gathering was one mostly of residents--so large in fact that it surprised organizers who ran short of seafood two hours before the feast was to end.

The remaining days of the festival emphasize the community participation aspect. Youth Day events and the coronation are scheduled for Virginia Beach Boulevard and Mount Trashmore, far back from the resort strip and close to the heart of residential Virginia Beach.

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the festival, have provided Beach residents with an opportunity to celebrate life and enjoy the fun of their city that attracts so many visitors.

Closed meets lose excuse

That age-old explanation (or excuse) of "we're not the only ones doing this" doesn't ring as true anymore for the Virginia Beach City Council when it attempts to rationalize its weekly closed sessions.

Returning from a recent meeting of the municipal league in Roanoke, the Norfolk City Council announced that it was opening up what previously had been executive sessions of the Council, except in case involving legal, financial, or personnel matters.

One Beach councilman remarked, "They're only doing what Virginia Beach has always done." Not quite. In addition to their regular closed meetings, Beach councilmen recently have met unannounced in private homes.

If the City of Norfolk manages to conduct its business in public without harm, then the Beach Council might consider making a similar move.

Changing moods of the festival

There were many sides of Virginia Beach's first annual Neptune Festival, and Sun photographers were there to catch the tempo and changing mood of the festivities. Above, crowds jammed the oceanfront for the Seafood Feast, and below, NBC newscaster Frank Blair speaks at the Sept. 28 memorial concert at the Norwegian Lady. But not everyone had a chance to join the fun. A young man, left, watches television while he mans the front desk for an Atlantic Avenue motel as festival crowds pass by.

News Briefs

Water bills current

Water billings in Virginia Beach are 99 per cent up to date and the city is now billing in the current cycle, City Manager Roger Scott reported to members of the City Council at its informal meeting Sept. 30.

A backlog of water bills had created problems for the city since it took over approximately 35,000 additional accounts from Norfolk when a water contract between the cities went into effect in July, 1973.

Since Virginia Beach took over billing for the system July 20, 1973, Scott reported the city has billed customers in the amount of $4,679,241, with 3.2 per cent of that amount currently considered uncollectable.

Takeover of the billing has "not created any massive loss," Scott said.

Arsonists convicted

The final convictions in the McGinnis Flint arson case resulted in suspended sentences and probation for two nightclub employees who helped the nightclub owner destroy his Virginia Beach resort strip establishment one year ago.

Kenneth R. Stephenson, 27, and Ralph M. Ireland, 20, were found guilty of arson and placed on three years unsupervised probation. Three-year sentences were suspended.

Two others received earlier convictions in the $100,000 McGinnis Flint blaze. Theodore Torok, former captain of the University of Virginia football team and nightclub owner, was sentenced to three years in prison for arson, but the sentence was suspended in favor of five years' probation. Edwin Michener, another employee, also was placed on three years' probation after he confessed that he set the fire.

Pickett raps increase

Virginia Beach Delegate to the General Assembly Owen B. Pickett has joined the flood of public reaction against Veeco's request for a $127 million utility rate hike as hearings continue before the State Corporation Commission.

In a letter to Commission Chairman Preston Shannon, Pickett said that "the tone of public outcry against the increase shows citizens have 'lost confidence' in Veeco as a monopoly institution" designed to serve public interest.

The commission is "the last thin line of defense" against Veeco's efforts to squeeze even higher utility rates from consumers, Pickett said.

Debate refused

Rep. G. William Whitehurst has refused to debate his Democratic opponent Robert R. Richards before the Nov. 5 congressional election.

In a letter to Richards, Whitehurst charged that his challenger has used "half truths, distortions, and outright falsehoods" during the campaign.

Richards responded that Whitehurst did not want to debate because he could not explain campaign contributions he received from Veeco and dairymen.

Schools

could indicate Virginia Beach schools, struggling to keep up with a student population that is growing by leaps and bounds, will get a breather a few years from now, but not yet.

To help schools keep up with development, Virginia Beach initiated a "voluntary" school site acquisition fee which is presently being challenged in court by the Tidewater Builders Association.

The city asks builders to pay a fee before it will approve residential density for proposed developments.

Fees are determined by projections of student population, school site needs and land costs. For a three-bedroom home, according to city planner Rhys Kear, the fee would be approximately $160.

In the suit against the city's school fees, developers called the assessment "invidious discrimination against the builder and the home buyer." The builders association contends that it is not right to insulate older residents from the impact of new development.

'The character of the population is changing. There are lots of new households with no children.'

A proposed school policy requiring the fees was not approved by Council in 1973 after the city attorney said it was unconstitutional.

Kear, however, said similar policies approved in other states have been upheld in court. In California, for example, he noted that some cities actually require developers to build schools if facilities are not available.

Guru leads seminar

The Prema Dharma Sala Temple of Cosmic Religion in Virginia Beach has scheduled a six-day seminar Oct. 9 to 14 in consciousness expanding.

The program includes classes, sunrise dedications on the beach, and meditative study of scriptures with Sadguru Sant Keshavadas. Cost for the complete seminar is $30.

NAVAL RELIEF

A three-week Naval Relief Course will be given by Rita Nunn beginning Oct. 16 at the Amphibious School Building, room 23, at the amphibious base. To enroll call 423-8830.

Even with the school fees, the school board must find room for its expanding student population.

Dr. James Mounie, assistant superintendent for research, planning and development, said that there are approximately 4,500 more students in city schools than the facilities can accommodate.

The school research staff will have exact enrollment figures ready for the School Board this week.

What the statistics do mean is that Virginia Beach is getting more students all the time with no place to put them.

Researchers were also surprised by a 3 per cent jump in enrollment this September when they expected only 2 per cent more students. Mounie said, "It is the first time the prediction came up short in three years."

What the statistics do mean is that Virginia Beach is getting more students all the time with no place to put them. The student increase, concentrated now in the city's "growth corridor" stretching from western Kempsville through Green Run, threatens to continue to overburden schools that are already overcrowded.

The schools have attempted to relieve overcrowding by using portable classrooms, eight-bell days, busing and year-round schools (the 45-15 program), but the School Board is expected to adopt a permanent student housing plan this year.

"The board is in the process of coming up with long-range construction plans," according to school Public Information Officer John Holgate.

But before the School Board can determine just how many new schools will be needed, it must decide whether to expand the year-round school program. The program, now on a two-year trial in four elementary schools, could be used to relieve overcrowded schools throughout Virginia Beach. The board is expected to make a final decision on year-round schools next month.

Builders feel it is unfair to insulate older residential areas from the impact of new development.

Under 45-15, each school can handle 25 per cent more youngsters, enabling the school system to accommodate 1,200 students in a facility designed to house 900.

Even with year-round schools, at least two new elementary schools are needed in the Kempsville area, Mounie said. The school system also has enough extra students to fill four new elementary schools if it doesn't bring the 45-15 program into other areas, he added. At a cost of $1.2 million each, that could mean that voters may find themselves swallowing another $5 million bond issue. School officials themselves are concerned about the response to another bond issue.

Voters approved a bond issue in 1972 for $12.6 million by a 16,510 to 10,532 vote after a strong campaign by schools. An earlier school bond issue for $18.4 million failed in 1971 in a 8,837 to 4,684 vote.

Whether it's year-round schools, bonds or a combination of both, the solution to overcrowded schools is bound to be controversial.

Joel Smith, president of the Princess Anne Plaza Civic League, doesn't think that the school system should expand 45-15 unless there is concrete evidence that it is improving the quality of education.

But instead, he said, the school board is looking at the program because it "needed a way to get more use out of schools."

Smith noted that the program is not coordinated between high schools, which are on the traditional nine-month schedule, and elementary schools, so families with students in both have trouble planning vacations.

And with inflation, Smith thinks bonds may have trouble getting approved unless parents strongly object to year-round schools.

On the other hand, Cecily Macdonald, education committee chairman for the Council of Civic Organizations, favors year-round schools.

Even with year-round schools, at least two new elementary schools will be needed in the Kempsville area.

A three-month summer vacation is too long, and Mrs. Macdonald thinks the shorter breaks four times a year are better for students.

And, she added, it may be the only way the schools can absorb increases in enrollment. "There is no way to build schools, even if you started to build, that would accommodate growth."

ANOTHER FINE PROMOTION BY THE VIRGINIA BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Tidewater Builders Association 1974 scholarship house is a two-story brick and frame colonial-style home in the Green Run area of Virginia Beach. The $47,000 home was constructed by DeMille Homes of Virginia Beach.

TBA builders to clip ribbons for 1974 scholarship house

The Tidewater Builders Association (TBA) will cut the ribbons at 3 p.m. Oct. 3 to its 1974 Virginia Beach scholarship house, a brick and frame colonial-style two-story home at 1400 Pear Tree Arch, Virginia Beach.

Profits from the sale of the $47,500 house, which will be handled by Larasan Realty, will go into the TBA scholarship fund.

The awards are made to students who plan careers in the building industry, and applications can be made through the TBA at 5665 Virginia Beach Blvd., Norfolk.

This year's scholarship house was constructed by DeMille Homes, and it is located in the Woodland Estates area of Green Run, Virginia Beach.

The house includes four bedrooms, two and one-half baths and a brick fireplace in a wood-paneled den. The kitchen features a self-cleaning oven, garbage disposal and dishwasher.

Vinyl flooring is used in the kitchen, foyer, utility room, family room and baths, while shag carpeting covers floors in the living room, dining room and bedrooms.

The 2,300 square foot home is all electric and is heated by forced air heat, which includes a central air conditioning system.

The scholarship house is DeMille's Cumberland Model which has a smoke detector alarm as a safety feature.

Flocked vinyl wallpaper covers walls in all bedrooms, where counters are made of marble and ceramic tile.

DeMille has been building homes in Virginia Beach since 1964, when the company was founded. The developer has built single-family and multi-family units in Princess Anne Plaza, Windsor Woods, Windsor Oaks West, Green Run, Stratford Chase and Baycliff. The TBA has sponsored a scholarship house every year since 1966. The scholarship fund presently holds $50,000 resulting from the sales of seven homes.

Rep. G. William Whitehurst will be guest speaker for the ribbon cutting, and Rev. Errol Ford of the United Presbyterian Church will give the invocation.

Refreshments will be served after the ceremony.

We're doing something unbelievable for the Grand Opening of our new Green Run Office of First Virginia Bank of Tidewater.

Industry fair spotlights Beach firms, production

The three-day Neptune Festival Industrial Fair and Exhibition will show visitors that Virginia Beach is more than an oceanside resort city.

The fair, which will run from 1 to 9 p.m. Oct. 4, 5 and 6 at the Hilton Inn Convention Center, Oceanfront and 8th Street, will turn the spotlight on nine Virginia Beach industrial operations which manufacture or distribute products.

"We want to show the other side of Virginia Beach," explained Kenneth D. Fraser, fair coordinator. "We actually do make things here at the Beach well as enjoy the sunshine and the ocean."

Fraser, technical sales and service manager for Cooper Bearings, praised the city's Economic Development Director, A. James DeBella, for his efforts to expand the Beach's industrial base.

DeBella, chairman of the industrial fair committee, worked with Fraser to plan the exhibition.

The fair will show that "industry does exist in the Beach as well as tourism."

Fraser remarked, "We do have a number of thriving industrial concerns."

He also noted that the fair will have an "international flavor," because several Virginia Beach firms have bases in England, West Germany and Spain.

Cooper's display will demonstrate how the U.S. Coast Guards ice breakers crack through frozen water using roller bearing from the Cope Split Roller Bearing Corp.

An England based operation.

Beach residents interested in racing motorcycles can see the latest product produced by Bultaco International, Ltd., with manufacturing plants in Barcelona, Spain. Daredevil riders from Bultaco's factory team will burdle paper bales in the parking area.

Sihl, Inc., a German chain saw manufacturer which recently opened its first U.S. plant in Virginia Beach, will show how to sculpt with a chain saw.

The company is also offering a chain saw as a door prize, and youngsters will have a chance to ride Fred Flintstone's car made by Stihl woodcutters.

Snark Products, Inc., a Virginia Beach firm which manufactured 25,000 lightweight sailboats in Virginia Beach, will display its models at the fair.

In another exhibit, Southeastern Paper Recycling Co. will show how recycled paper can be used. The firm will also demonstrate a small paper baler designed for office and shop use.

Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. will display new telephone models recently introduced in Virginia, while a sculptress from Hobby Industries, Inc. will show how dental compound can be transformed into custom-designed and handpainted plaques.

Peter Kwick Copies, Inc. will use a slides presentation to show visitors samples of the type of printing it provides, and Cavalier Sportswear, Inc. will demonstrate the screen-printing process it uses to imprint T-shirts with custom designs.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development.

Ceramic shop opens

Virginia Beach ceramics enthusiasts now have a new location to indulge in their hobby. Studio Workshop, which opened in May, specializes in ceramic sales and education.

The shop, located at 4244

Holland Road near Pocomantas Village, is owned and operated by Dot McLaughlin.

Currently Mrs. McLaughlin is engaged in the sales of greenware, tools and a variety of paints and firings, in addition to teaching ceramics classes.

Future plans include wholesale service to other shops in the area and a gift shop for finished pieces.

Studio Workshop is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, with additional hours from 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays. An open workshop, free to the public, is held every Thursday from 6-10 p.m.

No crying towel wanted at Cox

In August when the Falcons of Cox High School began preparations for the upcoming football season, memories of last year's 5-5 record were still fresh in the mind of Coach Al Habit.

During the days which followed, the enthusiasm that Cox might be more than just competitive in the Eastern District grew with leaps and bounds. It reached even to the point of some people predicting that the Falcons could be an outside shot to challenge the pre-season favorites Kellam and First Colonial.

It's not often that a coach would want to shed a winning label but one of the foremost things on Habit's mind is to do just that.

The pre-season tag of darkhorse was never to his liking and Habit wants to clarify how his team became saddled with such.

"We never should have been rated anywhere near that high. Heck, I knew that it would be rough even if things progressed at a normal rate," explained the coach.

The Falcons record is 0-3 and it now appears that Habit and company will be hard pressed to equal last season's break-even record.

But Habit doesn't want a crying towel. All he really wants to do is try and set things straight. "After all those good things that were said about us it's kind of hard to live up to them with a team as inexperienced as mine," concerned Habit confided.

The real picture at Cox, as told by the coach, is one of inexperience, injury and shortage of personnel.

"I don't want a crying towel and I don't want it to sound like sour grapes, but here at Cox we have the smallest student body of any school in Virginia Beach. Our enrollment is well below the others," he stated.

Habit's estimate of a student body at Cox of 1,360, which includes girls, is well below figures at the other Beach high schools.

While it is still too early to get accurate enrollment figures for the schools, a school official was able to give projected attendance estimates.

The forecast for Cox was 1,400, First Colonial 1,900 and Bayside, Kellam, Princess Anne and Kempsville over 2,000 each.

With the exception of Princess Anne, Cox is the oldest high school in Virginia Beach presently still in use and was built to accommodate fewer students.

Coach Al Habit

Giving some more information on the personnel shortage, Habit related how just 50 candidates reported for training camp in August and all but three had any real experience.

"We had only three starters return from last year's team," continued Habit. "We had to rebuild the entire offense and defense."

Numerous injuries have also played their part. The most serious injury was to Steve Zimmerly who was the leading scorer and ground gainer on the junior varsity last season. He had been counted on by Cox to help the running game.

Zimmerly returned to action against Maury and Habit thinks he will help the offense.

The defense has been the bright spot in a thus far dark season. All three Cox games have gone to the wire.

In the opening game with Princess Anne a scoreless tie existed for three quarters before the Cavaliers were able to score two late fourth quarter touchdowns.

And that's the way it's been in every game. Cox held the upper hand, leading Bayside 7-6, until the Marlins scored late in the fourth period to win 12-7.

Against Maury, Cox again was able to hold on until the last quarter.

Like the Princess Anne game, it was scoreless before the Commodores returned a punt 51 yards for a touchdown.

Habit thinks it was an illegal return because the receiver waved his hand over his head in the manner of a fair catch, then took off running with the ball, but the officials didn't call it back.

The second Maury score came with less than three minutes remaining and Cox dropped a hard fought game 14-0.

After the game Habit said that Maury Coach Jerry Saxio told him that it had been years since anybody hit Maury as hard as Cox had.

Habit is pleased with his defense but knows that the Falcons have not generated sufficient offense.

"We have stayed on defense too much," Habit said. "The offense has not been able to control the ball enough."

Habit has hopes that the offense found itself in the Maury game.

"There are eight new people on the offense and out of the entire 11, six or seven go both ways. They have to get used to working together. I think they jelled against Maury," a now optimistic Habit continued.

Already looking towards next year when 31 of the present 43 players are eligible to return, Habit insists that cries of "wait 'till next year" won't help now, especially with the schedule that confronts the Falcons.

Beach powers Kellam and Kempsville remain along with tough First Colonial. There is also a visit to Southeastern District contender Western Branch.

After taking a week off Cox returns to action Oct. 4, against Lake Taylor, with Granby rounding out the schedule, which Habit describes as the toughest anyone in the district faces.

Quarterhorse racers ask aid in search for a track

For years owners of racing quarterhorses in Chesapeake and Virginia Beach have been making trips to North Carolina in order to see results of their labors.

The local folk we have now joined in an effort to gain status in their own communities.

They have formed the Quarterhorse Racing Owners of Virginia as the first step in what they hope will lead to sanctioned quarterhorse racing in the southeastern part of Virginia.

The statewide organization already has a track at the State Fair Grounds in Richmond and another is under construction at Stafford and due to open in 60 days.

"It's a shame that there is no place for local people to run their horses without having to travel," said Frank Falk, a member of the racing board, who lives at 601 Head of River Road, Chesapeake.

The main aim of the local members is to build a track somewhere in Virginia Beach or Chesapeake.

According to Falk there are several businessmen in both Chesapeake and Virginia Beach who are willing to give financial backing to the building of a track in the area.

"We are trying to get a suitable site for the track and have it zoned accordingly," stated Falk. "So far finding the appropriate place is the big problem. Next in line is the task of getting more Beach residents into the organization.

While the majority of the members live in Chesapeake, Falk acknowledged that there were just as many people living in Virginia Beach who are involved in quarterhorse racing.

"We have some Beach members now, but the large part of racing owners in Virginia Beach are not presently with us. I don't know why they haven't joined unless they don't know enough about us," Falk related.

Cooperation between the two cities and interested persons is what Falk indicated the organization was trying to do in regards to building a track.

"There are plenty of good horses in both cities," he pointed out. "Some have gone as far away as Ohio to run and they do extremely well. The one in Ohio won a 30-1 shot. Virginia horses are becoming very well known. I think it's time the local residents had a chance to display their horses to area folks."

Midget has mighty "foot"

The Thoroughgood Roadrunners of the 90-lb., Virginia Beach Community Midget League may have a future proponent among them.

It has been reported to The Sun that 10-year-old Rob Sessions of the Roadrunners booted the football 55-yards in a game against the Arrowhead Rams Sept. 28, at Princess Anne Park.

An offensive coach told The Sun that the ball traveled 37-yards in the air from the line of scrimmage, which was the Roadrunners over five yardline, and then rolled to the Rams 20 before stopping.

Young Sessions was reported to have been five yards deep in his end zone when he punted the ball, which would make the total distance the ball traveled 65-yards. Outstanding in any league.

Cox band

The Cox High School Marching Band will be the featured performers at Ft. Story's Annual Sports Day football game between the 79th Transportation Battalion of Ft. Eustis, to be played at Ft. Story's Thomas Nelson Field.

The public is invited to attend the Annual Sports Day affairs at Ft. Story on Oct. 3. Game time is 2:30.

Kempsville knocks off Kellam, PA wins fourth

Kempsville and Princess Anne are sitting at the top of the Eastern District standings with identical 4-0 records. But how the two got there is completely different except that both kept winning.

Kempsville shocked the entire Eastern District when the Chiefs pulled what must be termed an upset win over pre-season favorite Kellam Sept. 27, 17-14.

And what is more surprising is that the Chiefs did it with half of their ground game sitting on the bench.

Fullback Bobby Harrison was unavailable for duty because of an injury which sidelined him.

Harrison had been a work horse in the Chiefs backfield blocking for the outstanding runningback Mike Crabtree and rushing for touchdowns the big yardage himself.

Princess Anne on the other hand had little trouble remaining unbeaten with a 28-0 route of Granby.

Cavalier quarterback Sam Eure and running back Aubrey Graham have made the Princess Anne offense a consistent scoring threat.

The match-up between Kempsville and Princess Anne is set for Oct. 25 at Kempsville, but one week before that the Cavaliers take on Kellam.

And where now does all this leave Kellam?

For the present, the Knights will have to be content to try and keep on the heels of the leaders and not loose again.

Kellam tries to rebound Oct. 4 against Bayside and then entertain John Marshall of Richmond, before they meet Princess Anne.

Kempsville, which was tagged the possible darkhorse of the district during summer practices, plays two consistently strong teams in the next two weeks.

The Chiefs meet rebounding First Colonial Oct. 4, and then take on always rough Maury Oct. 11.

The Kempsville defense did an outstanding job containing the powerful Kellam attacks even though they did give up their first touchdown in 11 quarters.

The real offensive spark for the Chiefs was quarterback Rocky Byers, who calls most of his own plays and checks off at the line of scrimmage. He kept the bigger Kellam defense off balance with counter plays and bootlegs.

But it was the foot of Bobby Tata which provided the margin of victory. Tata opened the scoring with a 26-yard field goal which proved to be the difference, as both teams pushed across two touchdowns.

Football winner

The winner of this week's contest was Dennis Weber of Temple Court in Virginia Beach. Dennis wins $20 in gift certificates to be used at sponsoring stores on the page. The second place winner was Glenn B. Benet from Balboa St. in Virginia Beach. Third place went to Earlene Foc of Ohio Street in Chesapeake. Congratulations to the winners.

Jim Boyd, assistant Principal at Lynn-haven Junior High, puts his weight behind an iron shot. Boyd's efforts won him closest to the pin honors on what turned out to be a lucky 13th hole at the Red Wing Golf Course. The educator appears to be having a good time as he swings into action.

Rowland wins Red Wing golf

The Red Wing Invitational Amateur Golf Tournament held in conjunction with the Neptune Festival at Red Wing Golf Course in Virginia Beach Sept. 27-29 was won by Bob Rowland of Portsmouth with a three day 54-hole score of 214.

Rowland's total was two under par for the course and was accomplished with rounds of 70, 71, and 73 in the championship flight.

The runner-up was Barry Bulifant from Newport News who had rounds of 74, 73, and 77 for a three day total of 224.

Another Portsmouth entry, Murray Rudstill, combined rounds of 71, 77, and 77 for a final score of 225 and third place.

A Virginia Beach resident, Fred Lucamp won top honors in the Second Flight with Harrell James of the Beach finishing third in the same flight. Bill Decker and Ernie Shipp of the Beach were first and third respectively in the Third Flight, while Tom Mitchell and Tony Radovich finished second and third in the Fourth Flight.

The Fifth Flight was dominated by Virginia Beach entries with first, second and third places all being won by locals. Jim Hintz was first, followed by Elkan Lakman and Jim Hardy.

Second and third places spots in the Sixth Flight went to Vince Lukas and Jay Bland of the Beach. Tournament Director, George Wooten, termed the event highly successful and had high hopes that the tournament will return stronger than ever next year.

Individual honors went to Jim Bulifant who won a golf bag for his closest to the hole shot on Sept. 29.

Rowland also won the longest tee shot on the Sunday with a blast off the tenth hole.

Closest to the pin honors went to Jim Boyd on hole number 13.

After the opening round of Friday, the field of 82 entries was broken into seven divisions based on first round scores.

There was the Championship Flight and six others. First place in the Championship Flight was worth a trophy and $200 in merchandise. Second and third place finishers received $100 and $50 in merchandise respectively.

The first three spots in the other six flights all received $100 for first, $50 for second and $25 for third, all in merchandise.

The day is done for these golfers and now they stroll slowly along the path which leads to the clubhouse. Perhaps they are thinking about their games or just enjoying the shirtsleeves weather conditions.

Patrons swamp N.C. visitors in Hurricane Classic

The Virginia Beach Tennis Patrons showed their North Carolina guest, the Raleigh Racquet Club, little hospitality as the Virginia Beach club completely dominated the Hurricane Invitational Tennis Tournament.

The local team swept the singles matches taking all eight sets and dropped only the number one doubles, halting a shutout of the visitors.

Chuck Lake won the number one singles match with a 10-8 victory over Robin Gardner of Raleigh.

The number two singles match was also close with Bob Furniss besting Dr. Sydney Martin of Raleigh, 10-8 also.

Playing in the number three singles match the Patron's Roy Bahls blanked John Gonella 8-0. The Tar Heels captured the number one doubles when Dr. Martin and Robin Gardner combined to defeat the Beach entry of Ed Barnes and Billy Edwards, 6-4 and 7-5.

John Maragon, director for the event, said he was very pleased with the tournament and that the only disappointment he had was

When rain forced the matches from the outdoor courts to the inside ones at the Indoor Tennis Center.

This move forced the number of games to be cut from 10 to eight because of the fewer available courts and a time element which was involved.

In the number two doubles the beach entry of George Dragos and M. Lawless won 6-4 and 7-5 over Doug Long and Sterling Gentle.

Maragon called the Raleigh Club a much stronger tennis squad than their showing which he attributed to the fact that the team was not at full strength.

Coaches Corner

In what area has your team made the greatest progress?

Terry Morton

Bayside

"There has been a lot of improvement each game in not making mistakes, but we are not there yet. One week it's one thing, the next another. But progress is being made. We need to stop making that one big mistake."

Ed Booth

Kempville

"It's got to be defense. Last year we were very weak especially on pass coverage. This year the defense is much more stable and not blowing things or making many mistakes."

Johnny Coats

Kellam

"The ability of several players to go both ways. Mike Haywood, Danny Hill and Gary Woodhouse have made the adjustment now and are coming on stronger each week. Gene Bunn also sees double duty. As they get better, we get better."

Frank Webster

First Colonial

"We have only given up three touchdowns in three games and that includes playing against undefeated Princess Anne and Kellam. The defense has made great progress."

Al Habb

Cox

"The offense is starting to get together. We haven't scored, but we are moving the ball better. The defense was strong from the start. So now if the offense can just keep improving we might surprise someone."

Ralph Cahagan

Princess Anne

"Our offensive line was really inexperienced when we started. All the boys but two were just up from the JV's. Now the blocking is great. Cleve Liverman at tackle, Steve Edwards at guard and David Pate at end have learned very fast."

Youth day Festival set Oct. 4

When Virginia Beach youngsters are out of school Oct. 4, it will be more than just another day off.

The Neptune Festival has set aside a special day for kids, starting with a parade that will leave Windsor Woods Elementary School at 9 a.m.

Youngsters may dress up for the parade themselves, design a costume for a pet or decorate a bicycle or a go-cart for the march to Mount Trashmore park.

Best entries in the parade will receive certificates and ribbons. Youngsters may register for the parade at any city library or at the Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

Following the parade, Virginia Beach milk carton boat builders will launch their craft in Lake Trashmore at 10 a.m. for the Neptune Festival's milk carton boat derby.

Boat classes will range from 100-carton boats for younger children to 200-carton entries for the 16- to 25 age group. Groups of six or more will try their luck with as many cartons as they can assemble into a boat.

The fastest moving craft will win prizes, along with awards for the most original design and for the boat with the largest number of milk cartons which crosses the finish line.

All competitors will be required to wear Coast Guard-approved life vests. After the race, the Neptune Youth Fair will get off to a sticky start with an ice cream contest.

Prizes will go to youngsters who can polish off the most ice cream.

Youngsters or groups which want to participate in the competition should contact Youth Fair chairman Sherri Schwitters at 497-9437.

At 1 p.m. young hot-rodders can hop aboard their tricycles to warm up for the Neptune Trike Race at the fair. Qualifying races will be scheduled for youngsters in four divisions; from age 5 and up.

A marionette show at 2 p.m. will close the Youth Fair.

In addition to scheduled events, decorated booths will be selling snacks and balloons at the fairgrounds on Lake Trashmore.

"Our chief concern was to get Virginia Beach people involved," the festival director said, and she believes that the opening night of the 10-day celebration accomplished that.

"We hope eventually to extend the tourist season," Mrs. Abourjille explained, "but this was a trial run to kind of keep it in the family."

Organizers were especially gratified by the response to the Neptune Festival because the publicity budget was limited and no heavy campaigns were laid out before the public.

Most advertising was regional, and only one ad ran out-of-state, Mrs. Abourjille said.

"We're glad they (festival participants) heard about it," she remarked, adding that the event should attract 75,000 next year. "We came awfully close to it this year."

And for persons who were disappointed by a shortage of food, there were four bands and three folk dancing groups to make up for it.

The greatest attraction was Bill Deal and the Rhondels, a Virginia Beach rock group which put on a smooth show using a Department of Parks and Recreation portable stage.

An audience of 2,000 encircled the stage, and some young people were perched on the roof of an adjacent motel for a bird's-eye view.

Godfrey Grier and the JazzKings sent strains of Dixieland for an appreciative crowd, and country and western fans clustered around Charlie and Doris Taylor.

Before the parade the Hawaiian Islanders performed for bystanders, and folk dancing buffs had a chance to watch Bavarian dancing and square-dancing along the boardwalk. Barbershop quartets completed the roster of entertainment following the parade.

Rose Hall, which is up for sale, will be one stop on what may be the last tour for the historical society.

Carol Robinson, a school nurse at Kellam High School, administers first aid to a student with a bad hand injury.

Beach school nurse sheds Band-aid image in new role

Most students and parents picture the school nurse as the lady who takes temperatures, bandages fingers and gives an occasional aspirin to ailing students. However, today's school nurse is changing her image, according to Elinor McElwain, coordinator of the Virginia Beach school system's school nursing program.

"Although she still takes temperatures and bandages fingers, new goals and increased responsibilities have altered her role within most school systems," Mrs. McElwain said.

"Most school nursing programs today are geared toward the screening of students and establishment of permanent health records. The nurse looks for things that should be treated and first aid is secondary," added Mrs. McElwain.

In the Virginia Beach school system, the 37 school nurses work primarily on establishing school health programs and formulating health policies. They are directly responsible to the principal of the schools to which they are assigned and have myriad responsibilities.

They coordinate the overall health program, act as liaison with the school, home, the health department and other agencies in the community, plan screening programs and effective referral and follow-up procedures, assist teachers in assessing health needs and procedures to follow in case of student illness or injury, and provide health counseling for pupils and/or parents.

The nurses schedule general health, vision and hearing screening programs at the earliest possible date at the beginning of the school year. In the general screening which covers all students in grades 1 through 10, special education and new enrollments, the nurses check the students' heights, weights, throats, teeth, hair (for pediculosis), skin and general appearance. They check the vision of students in grades 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 and the hearing of those in grades 1, 3, 6 and 9. The nurses also give first and 6th graders a PhonocardiScan (heart sound test).

Students from other grades are checked throughout the school year for vision and hearing problems upon referral by teachers, guidance counselors or administrators. Accurate records are kept on all screening results of each student.

If a student is found to have a problem which might have an effect on his school work or limit his activities, the school nurse informs both the parents and the teacher. After she has discussed the health problem or defect with a parent, the nurse checks the student at a later date to assure that the problem has been corrected. If it has not, she attempts to find out why and if the parents are unable to afford the proper correction such as glasses, hearing aids or dental work, she refers them to the proper agency or agencies for assistance.

Mrs. McElwain explained that dental work, particularly for a young child, is the most frequently neglected problem.

"Parents figure that the baby teeth will be replaced with permanent ones. They don't stop to realize that the molars aren't replaced until the 6th grade and bad teeth can cause problems with eating, etc.," Mrs. McElwain commented.

The school nurse also discusses any health problems which might affect a student's classroom behavior with his teacher, and she explains how to handle emergency situations. In some cases, she may recommend preferential seating for students with vision or hearing defects.

The school nurses are also available to give talks or show movies on a variety of health subjects upon the request of a classroom teacher. Dental health, personal hygiene and nutrition are the topics most frequently requested for classroom sessions, Mrs. McElwain explained.

Although prevention rather than treatment is now being emphasized in the school nursing program, the school nurse still takes care of any first aid emergencies in the schools. If any first aid is needed when a child becomes ill or is injured, the parents are contacted immediately.

No medication is given by the school nurse or any other school personnel unless it has been prescribed by a doctor and the proper form has been filed in the student's record.

In the Virginia Beach school system, nurses are assigned to all of the secondary schools, while elementary school nurses cover two to four schools each.

Society gives history buffs last chance to visit homes

The third and probably last Historic House Tour of the Princess Anne County Historical Society will embark from Pembroke Hall Oct. 9.

The tour, which will feature eight of the most historic houses in the Beach area, will be conducted from buses which will depart from the northeast parking area of the mall adjacent to Constitution Drive at 9:30, 10, 10:30 and 11 a.m.

Of the eight houses to be visited, four are privately owned (the Manor House at Bayville Farms, Oak Hill Farms, The Hermitage and the James House).

Also on the tour are Pembroke Manor, Upper Wolfenare, Rose Hall (the Francis Land House) and the Adam Thoroughgood House.

A picnic will be held on one of the lawns, weather permitting. Tourists should bring their own lunches. Soft drinks will be provided.

The tour will probably be discontinued after this year because "there just aren't any more houses available," according to Mrs. F. Kimberly Turner, co-chairman of the tour.

"Most of these houses are privately owned," says Mrs. Turner, making the prospect of conducting a tour "difficult. You can't ask people to open their houses up year after year."

The Rose Hall House may not be open for tour much longer. The 18th century home is for sale and in danger of destruction.

The Princess Anne County Historical Society is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of buildings, monuments and markers in the area.

Tickets for the tour can be obtained by contacting either Mrs. Stanley Piskorski at 52 Constitution Drive, Virginia Beach, 23462 (phone 499-5672), or Mrs. L.C. Brennan, 5001 Holly Road, Virginia Beach, 23451, (phone 428-6473).

Tickets cost $7.

Houses to be visited on the tour are:

- Bayville Farms, built on Pleasure Creek in 1826 by Peter Singleton II, a descendant of Adam Thoroughgood. The present owners, the James Hoge Tyers, built a small guest house on the grounds of the old kitchen, but the building is still a faithful replica of the small 17th century house.

- Oak Hill Farm, a brick house on Lynnhaven Bay built prior to 1830. The house, believed to have been built on the foundation of an earlier home, faces old Pungo Ridge Road. Beautiful lawns sweep down to the bay in back. Dr. Levi Old Jr. is the present owner.

- The Hermitage, originally a large plantation on the western branch of the Lynnhaven River, is believed to be on John Thoroughgood's portion of the Grand Patent made to Adam Thoroughgood, his grandfather. Following five generations of Thoroughgoods, the house has changed hands several times. The original house was small, but many additions and changes to the building have occurred over the years.

- The John James house, built by James in 1783, stands a full two stories and a half. Once called Ornate work makes an interesting design on the window of the Adam Thoroughgood house, featured on the Princess Anne Historical Society tour.

"Catalpa Hall," because of the great catalpa trees that surrounded the house, the home was renamed "Locust Hall" when locusts evidently overran the catalpas. The locusts have departed and the house is now "Red Hill Farm." The plantation is currently owned by a frozen food company.

- Pembroke Manor, built in 1764 by Capt. Jonathan Saunders. The building is an exceptionally fine Georgian House with high ceilings, a wide center hall and a sweeping staircase as reminders of the elegance of colorful days. Many structural changes have occurred over the centuries, but the building still appears remarkably the same as it did when built.

- Upper Wolfenare, believed to have been built prior to 1759 and now owned by the Princess Anne County Historical Society, which is restoring it. The house once had an underground escape tunnel, which has now caved in. Highway construction has all but obliterated the topography of the land surrounding the house. Also, dirt and sand, tossed up from a nearby borrow pit, has covered the foundations of old outbuildings.

- The Adam Thoroughgood House, built by Thoroughgood in the 17th century on a portion of his Grand Patent of 5,300 acres. The beautiful house is fully restored and receives approximately 40,000 visitors a year.

- Rose Hall, the finest of Virginia Beach's gambrel-roofed houses, built in 1732. However, since the departure of owner Colin Studs in the 1950's the house has fallen into disrepair. The entire Rose Hall estate of 35 acres is now for sale. The owners thus far have refused to sell the house as a separate parcel, deeming it to possible destruction in favor of a shopping center.

At Virginia Wesleyan

Concert series opens Oct. 4

A trio of distinguished Tidewater musicians will inaugurate Virginia Wesleyan College's fall concert series with a special performance at the college on Oct. 4 at 8 p.m.

The Oct. 4 concert will feature Dora Short, violinist; Janet McCarron Kriner, cellist; and Harold Protzman, pianist. Their performance, which will be open to the public at no charge, will be held in the college's Science Auditorium.

Mrs. Short, a native of Tidewater, is first violinist of the Feldman String Quartet and formerly a concertmaster with the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra. This year she will begin teaching chamber music and conducting a chamber orchestra at the Julliard School of Music in New York.

Mrs. Kriner, a graduate of the Philadelphia Musical Academy, is also a member of the Feldman Quartet. She has received the Plattigorsky Award as the outstanding cellist at Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Music Festival and has taught at Hampton Institute, Norfolk State College and Old Dominion University.

Protzman is currently assistant professor of music at Old Dominion University. Guest pianist for more than ten seasons with the Feldman Quartet, he is resident pianist for the Norfolk Chamber Consort. He is a judge for the National Guild of Piano Teachers and a member of the Guild's Hall of Fame.

The trio will present selections by Haydn, Arensky, Copland and Mendelssohn. Included will be Haydn's Trio in E Minor, No. 7 and Copland's Vitebsk. The second featured artist in the concert series will be pianist Joseph Villa. Villa's presentation at 3 p.m. on Oct. 13, will be the initial piano recital on Virginia Wesleyan's new Steinway Concert Grand piano, the gift of an anonymous donor.

Villa, who began playing the piano at age 4, made his first public appearance at the Julliard School of Music when he was 10. At the age of 18, he began appearing as assisting artist in sonata recitals with violinist Joseph Fuchs, both in

New York City and on tour. As a composer, he has written for piano, violin, cello and voice. A winner in 1968 of the Kosciuszko Foundation's annual Chopin Competition, Villa also won the competition to perform Liszt's Second Piano Concerto in A major with the Julliard Orchestra in 1970. The 25-year-old artist made his New York debut in 1972, performing an all-Liszt recital.

Other artists in the Virginia Wesleyan series will include a voice recital by Dr. R. David Clayton, assistant professor of music, in November and a concert by a faculty quartet from Norfolk State College in December. All events will be open to the public at no charge.

Antique tours, programs on Got a taste for antiques?

The Virginia Beach YWCA is planning a tour Oct. 15 and 16 that should whet the appetite of any antique buff.

A tour group will explore the Pierre and Henri Dupont estates in Wilmington, Del., including visits to the Gardens at Winterthur and a trip to the Winterthur museum.

And instead of taking a trip to Versailles, France, to see the famous palace gardens there, the YWCA plans to throw in an evening tour of the Pierre Dupont Longwood Gardens copied from their Versailles prototype.

The tour will cost $38 per person, including transportation, motel room, tickets and a sandwich stop. Individuals must purchase other meals.

For persons who want to look at antiques closer to home, the YWCA has also scheduled four programs at the Bayside Presbyterian Church, Independence Boulevard and Ewell Road, all starting at 12:30 p.m.

On Oct. 7 Sandy Tickle of Reincarnation Antiques will be guest speaker, and lore concerning stained glass will be the topic Oct. 14, when Jim Agies of Bay Bridge Antiques will lead the program.

Tommy Brewer of Brewer's Antiques will be guest host for the Oct. 12 program, and Doreas Helfant of the Lee Michele Gallery of Fine Antiques and Collectables will speak on glass and porcelain antiques on Nov. 11.

Cost of each program will be $1.50.

Another YWCA tour will take antique hunters through the Years Shop, Chesapeake; Village Antique Shop, 4379 Princess Anne Road, Virginia Beach; Melton's Antiques, Chesapeake, and Wayside Antiques, 320 S. Military Ave., Norfolk.

Cost of the tour will be $1.50, and the YWCA may provide a bus for an additional 50 cents if the tour attracts enough treasure hunters.

The antique program series also has something for Christmas shoppers, who can visit the Glass and Pottery Factory in Lightfoot, near Williamsburg, on Nov. 7 with the YWCA. Cost is $4.

Gwen Redimer will present a program on blood pressure at the club's October meeting.

GARDEN CLUB

The annual Holiday House was approved at the September meeting of the Thoroughgood Garden Club. The president, Mrs. A.J. Cartwright, appointed the various chairmen and workshops for the House preparation.

The speaker for the meeting, Mrs. A.H. Gallagher, president of the Tidewater District, Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc., gave a lecture and open discussion on the rules surrounding the garden club awards.

Ribbons for flower arrangements were won by Mrs. K.R. Burchett, Mrs. J.R. Courtney, Mrs. V.J. Johnson, Mrs. H.O. Pexzella and Mrs. R.M. Reed. The hostess, Mrs. W.J. Flynn, was assisted by Mrs. Pexzella and Mrs. J.M. Barry.

GARDEN CLUB

Mrs. D. R. Taylor of Portsmouth was guest speaker at the first meeting of the fall for the King's Forest Garden Club. Mrs. Taylor projected 100 colored slides of wildflowers that she and her husband had photographed starting with the Shadash in February and continuing on through the seasons to the Witch Hazel in the fall. The presentation was made at the Thales Presbyterian Church.

Final plans were discussed for the King's Forest Garden Club booth at the Pembroke Mall Annual Charity Bazaar, Oct. 10 to 12. A number of handcrafted items were displayed at the meeting. Proceeds from the sale will be used on upcoming club projects.

The 1974-75 yearbooks were distributed to the 25 members present. Mrs. J. E. Ashely, Mrs. W.R. Watson and Mr. B. Witham Jr. were hostesses for the meeting.

Riverton Garden Club judged the "Fall Is Approaching" arrangements.

DAR MEETING

The Borough of Norfolk, Daughters of the American Revolution, held its September meeting at the Commodore Club with Mrs. A. Morrison, Regent, presiding.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. L. Davis, Mrs. F. Harris and Mrs. S. Perry. Delegates to district meeting were Mrs. J. Welch Jr. and Mrs. Claude E. Jordan Jr.

The speaker for the day was David Sieg, whose topic was "Our Constitution." Sieg is an instructor in government at Tidewater Community College.

Hard water hurts you.

Given time, hard water minerals can do enough damage for you to declare your home a disaster area.

Rest assured help is nearby in the body of a neighbor who is ready and willing to help—your soft water appliance dealer.

Read this ad and learn how he can save you a bundle!

Hard water minerals cause trouble wherever they go. You're in a hard water zone or else you wouldn't be reading this ad. Keep reading and we'll give you plenty of reasons to seek help from your local soft water appliance dealer.

Hard water minerals can kill appliances.

The average person uses about 50 gallons of water every day. Most of it is heated. This means the inside of your hot water pipes, water heater, washing machine, dishwasher, steam iron, hair curler set and other appliances receive a mineral bath with every use.

Eventually they'll start to slow down. Pipes and coils will clog. Plumbing will corrode. You may have to replace them all before you planned to.

Hard water minerals can ruin clothes, dishes.

Soaps and detergents aren't able to overcome the effects of hard water minerals. Soap creates gummy, insoluble "curds" in hard water. Clothes washed in this water come out looking gray, stiff and unclear.

Independent laboratory tests indicate that in extremely hard water, you waste one-third the cleaning power of your soap. That's pretty expensive.

Detergents aren't as effective in hard water, either. Hard water minerals tend to reduce the cleaning power of the detergent.

Your dishwasher won't do its best job with hard water. During the drying cycle, spots of hard water minerals can dry on your dishes or flatware and be almost impossible to remove.

Hard water minerals hurt you.

You're not immune, either. Hard water minerals prevent your soap or your shampoo from getting you completely clean. You can tell even right after washing. Your skin feels dry, itchy; your hair looks dry, lifeless, hard to manage. If it happens to you, it's probably traceable to the minerals in your water.

As for you shavers, we ran a test that proved hard water minerals made it tougher to get a comfortable shave.

Treat your water right.

The solution is to eliminate the hard water minerals. It's as easy as a phone call to your soft water appliance dealer. First, he'll test your water to verify its hardness. Then he'll help you select the correct unit for your needs.

A soft water appliance will remove the hard water minerals before they can do damage. With soft water, you'll protect your pipes and appliances from limestone build-up. It could add years to the life of your appliances and water pipes.

Soft water treats your clothes right. Colors will remain brighter; fabrics and fibers will last longer and stay softer.

There's a softer you, too. Soft water helps you get really clean—your skin will become softer, look healthier. Your hair will look bright and shiny.

All in all, you'll probably save enough to justify the expense of water softening equipment many times over.

Call your soft water appliance dealer now.

Many different soft water appliances are available. You can find one that will be perfect for your needs, space and budget. Many different convenience features are offered. Nowadays, a water softener is as easy to install as a washing machine.

Let your local soft water appliance dealer advise you. You'll find his name in the Yellow Pages under "Water." Remember, we'll be around to help keep your soft water appliance working efficiently. After all, our water softening products are made by the same people who make your favorite table salt.

Catalog an aid for contemporary Judaism Keeping kosher in a modern society

NEW YORK — The labels on some food items in the supermarket bear the imprint "kosher" or "pareve."

Just what do those terms mean?

To the Jew who observes the dietary laws prescribed for centuries as part of his religion, such markings mean that it is all right for him to use the products, under certain conditions.

To the non-Jewish customer there is no special significance to items marked kosher or pareve although he may have wondered on occasion what the terms meant.

Because many Jews, particularly younger ones just setting up housekeeping, may not be fully aware of the fine points involved in keeping kosher, the Jewish Publication Society of America has issued a do-it-yourself kit for Jews. Called "The Jewish Catalog," the volume is described as "a guide or manual to the range of contemporary Jewish life." It was compiled and edited by Richard Siegel and Michale and Sharon Strassfeld, young Jews who obviously gained a great deal of spiritual insight as well as enjoyment in putting the book together.

They explained that they had tried to show as many approaches to Judaism as they could in their catalog, which they designed to help people accommodate to the fast pace of changes in society and the environment.

"The orientation is to move away from the prefabricated, spoon-fed, nearsighted Judaism into the stream of possibilities for personal responsibility and physical participation," they wrote. "This entails a rethinking of the control of the Jewish environment to the hands of the individual."

With this for an introduction, the catalogers moved on to various aspects of Jewish life, including the practice of keeping kosher, which is a must in Orthodox homes and is being pursued increasingly in Conservative and Reform Jewish families.

First several kosher terms are defined. Kashrut pertains to laws relating to kosher food, while kosher itself means "fit" or "proper" and refers to food that is permissible under dietary laws. It also refers to the required practice of serving meat and milk dishes at separate meals.

Treif, another term, applies to any food that is not permitted under dietary laws or any utensil that may have become "unfit" for use. For example, different dishes and utensils are used for everyday milk and meat dishes. Two additional sets are used only during the observance of Passover when special foods are served. If the "wrong" implements have been used or milk and meat have been mixed, the utensils become treif and must be kashered.

Kashering is an involved process in which the treif item must be scalded or scorched before it can be used again. Moreover, the process of soaking and salting meat to remove the blood is called kashering.

The authors of the catalog went into some detail in their research on kashering, going so far as to recommend that to kasher an oven it must be cleaned with a kosher cleaner and then gone over with a portable propane blowtorch.

If the stove is fueled with gas, it is necessary to insure against any leaks, and it is advisable to use a welder's mask and gloves for "stoves have been known to blow up in people's faces."

An alternate means of kashering an oven is to clean it thoroughly and then heat to its highest degree for half an hour.

Pots, pans and other utensils may be boiled in water, with care being taken to use separate containers of sinks for kashering meat and milk dishes and other items.

As for pareve, any food bearing that label is considered to be neutral — neither milk nor meat. Fruits and vegetables are included in this category, and they may be served with either milk or meat dishes, which are called milchik and fleishik.

Wh: fish is regarded as pareve — neutral — it must not be cooked with meat, though it can be served or prepared with milk and milk dishes.

Most domestic fowl are kosher, while wild birds and birds of prey are treif. Among the forbidden winged creatures are swans, vultures, storks, owls, eagles and ostriches.

To be kosher, fowl and birds must be ritually slaughtered by a qualified slaughterer.

known as a shohet. An animal killed any other way or that dies naturally is not kosher.

Eggs are kosher only if from kosher birds. Any eggs containing blood spots must be discarded, for that means a mixture of blood and meat is present.

As for meat, all animals that chew their cud and have split hooves are kosher, including cattle, sheep, goats and deer. Pigs, horses, donkeys and camels fall into the treif category.

Church marks Beach history

The Old Donation Church, located on Witchduck Road and owned by the Episcopal Church, is one of Virginia Beach's oldest buildings. The structure, built around 1733, is listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The churchyard includes a cemetery with headstones dating from 1768. The church was restored in 1916 after a fire almost destroyed it. Additional structural renovation was completed in 1967.

Tie Breaker Missouri vs. Wisconsin

Castle building-- it's a sandy job

A small city of sand, with castles ranging from prehistoric cave-style to space age sweeps and arcs, sprouted up on Virginia Beach's oceanfront this week as the Neptune Festival's sand castle competition lured would-be architects up to their elbows in sand.

Turrets, towers, bridges and moats stood out on foot-high mounds and sandy monsters that threatened to topple over on the construction crews lobbing wet sand even higher.

For about four hours Sept. 28 the beach architects, including some professionals who competed in their own division, concentrated on building efforts while a small army of well-wishers offered friendly advice.

And while builders struggled with buckets of water, shovels and an occasional can of spray paint, a band entertained the crowd on the boardwalk. Competition areas marked by flags stretched between 8th and 10th Sts. along the beach.

Not everyone building sand castles joined the competition. Digging seemed to be contagious, and castles cropped up outside the official sand building pits.

Some youngsters dressed in blue jeans and T-shirts who hadn't expected a sunny day after rain clouds threatened to make the sand castle competition washout, decided to frolic in the surf still dressed.

Competition was fierce for the top prizes in each age category of the Sand Castle Classic.

First place adult winner, a team of students from the University of Virginia architectural department, won a weekend trip to Bermuda.

Beau Hunt, 5, took home a bike when he edged out other entries in the preschool category. Wistic and Gigi Cook, 5, twin sisters, and a friend, Siobhanna Cooper, 5, came in second, while Ashlie Harden, 4, placed third.

In the 8 to 11-year category, Pam Koski, 9, walked off with a bike, while Mark and Molly Lowe came in second. Chamie and Christina Grandy claimed the third place award.

Amy Walsh and Andy Moore, a couple competing together in the age 12-to-17 category, both received 10-speed bicycles for their sand building efforts, while Sara Ceras and Leslie Marshall combined efforts to take second place. Another team, Brian Baines and Bruce Dosier, won third place ribbon.

A Volkswagen made of sand won top prize in the professional castle-making competition for Langley McDonald & Overman, a Virginia Beach architectural firm.

The award was a silver sand bucket, and architects and engineers who worked up a thirst during the afternoon joined in a black-tie, bare feet champagne party at the Hilton Inn.

Sam Snapp finds that sand construction can be a delicate job as he puts finishing touches on a team product.

Charles Carver, 12, of 212 54th St.,

Virginia Beach, burrows head first into a tunnel on his castle entry.

Karen Parker, 8, of 112 Whiting St., Virginia Beach, dribbles more sand on her castle near the water line.

$4.25 million earmarked

Beach eligible for HUD grant

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Virginia Beach could be on the receiving end of a $4.25 million three-year federal grant if Congress appropriates funds for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) community development program.

Les Lilley, federal grant coordinator for the city, said Virginia Beach will be eligible for the funds which are designed to improve living conditions of low and moderate income groups.

Of the grant, $613,000 would be earmarked for fiscal year 1975, with $1,452,000 available in 1976 and another $2,215,000 in 1977.

"These are preliminary figures," Lilley said, and he warned that they could change if Congress cuts the HUD appropriation.

HUD also has projected expected community development grants through 1980, but Lilley would not release those figures because he said they were "too speculative."

The community development program was created when HUD consolidated five existing programs into one. The HUD program, signed into law by President Gerald Ford Aug. 12, combines urban renewal, Model Cities, neighborhood facilities, water-sewer grants and open space acquisitions.

In the past, Lilley said Virginia Beach "hasn't received a great deal of money" under HUD programs. What money was received was used to extend the city's water and sewer system.

Although Lilley said he did not know how the money might be used by the city, there is a possibility that the community development grant could be used to build sewers in Seafair and Doyleway, two lower income areas which claim they have been neglected by the city.

Any community development projects undertaken by the city must meet federal guidelines, Lilley reported. The program is designed to eliminate slums and blight and to eradicate conditions detrimental to health, safety and public welfare.

HUD also hopes to lessen the isolation of lower income groups in communities by making more housing available to low income families while it revitalizes deteriorating neighborhoods to attract higher income residents.

Virginia Beach could apply for the money as early as Dec. 1, but Lilley said he thought it would take much longer to prepare the city's grant request. No deadline has been set by HUD.

"We really haven't geared up for it as yet," the federal grant coordinator explained. "With the Neptune Festival, the next couple of days are going to be hectic."

Meanwhile, Lilley said he has been setting up preliminary meetings with city staff members, including a HUD slide presentation that explains the purpose of community development program.

TO ALL TELEPHONE COMPANY SUBSCRIBERS

NOTICE OF HEARING

DOCKET NO. P-55, SUB 742
DOCKET NO. P-100, SUB 34

BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the North Carolina Utilities Commission has instituted an investigation into the intrastate toll rates and charges, intrastate WATS rates and charges and intrastate inter-exchange private lines rates and charges of all telephone companies under its jurisdiction. This action was made necessary as a result of the Commission's review of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company application for increased rates in Docket No. P-55, Sub 742, wherein Southern Bell proposes to increase its intrastate toll rates, intrastate WATS rates and intrastate inter-exchange private line rates, which if approved in whole or in part for these services in North Carolina.
The Commission is of the opinion that it is in the public interest that uniform intrastate toll, WATS and inter-exchange private line rates be maintained for all telephone companies under its jurisdiction. Accordingly, on August 5, 1974, in Docket No. P-55, Sub 742 and in Docket

No. P-100, Sub 34, the Commission instituted an investigation into said intrastate toll, WATS and inter-exchange private line rates making all telephone companies under its jurisdiction parties to the investigation and set the matter for hearing on January 2, 1975 at 7:30 a.m. in the Commission Hearing Room, Ruffin Building, One West
Morgan Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. The Commission's investigation is for the purpose of determining if changes should be made in the present intrastate rates for these services, and if so, if the charges should be made applicable to all telephone companies under the Commission's jurisdiction.
The proposed rates and present rates are as follows:

Obenshain out to end voter apathy

By ROBERT MAHONEY
Special to the Sun

WASHINGTON - Richard D. Obenshain of Richmond, newly-elected national co-chairman of the Republican party, said he will travel to the Midwest in this month to counteract voter apathy caused by Watergate.

Obenshain, former chairman of the Virginia Republican party, said he plans to "fire up the troops" in an 11th hour drive to motivate Republicans to get disillusioned voters to the polls in November.

He attributed voter apathy and Republican disinterest to "the call that has hung over the country because of the Watergate-related episodes".

Conceding that Watergate "has infected the entire political process," Obenshain contends that this political disease has affected Democrats as well as Republicans.

"Politics is at a very low ebb," he said, "but there has been a marked change in mood and atmosphere since Jerry Ford became President".

Obenshain, however, is optimistic about the prospect of revitalizing public interest in politics: "As we get more away from Watergate, the normal enthusiasm for politics will be restored. By 1976, Watergate will be a thing of the past."

Obenshain said he will be traveling throughout the Midwest campaigning for GOP candidates and motivating Republican campaign workers to get them elected.

He said he will campaign in Kansas for the reelection of Sen. Robert Dole, a former GOP national chairman. He also will be in Missouri and Illinois campaigning for various candidates.

Obenshain also said that the Republican National Committee has received numerous letters from GOP candidates requesting that President Ford campaign for them. He said Ford plans to campaign for several GOP congressional candidates but declined to say which candidates had been selected to receive presidential support.

During his Midwest trip, Obenshain intends to meet with local and state party officials to discuss the importance of precinct organization.

"The task of precinct organization is not inherently glamorous, he admitted, "but it is the essential ingredient political success."

Obenshain, 38, an attorney in Richmond, said his party will make a determined effort to attract young people into its declining ranks.

Describing young people as "discerning and open-minded," Obenshain said they are "looking for integrity and substance and not just attractiveness in political candidates."

He said young people can be persuaded to register as Republicans because of the party's philosophy of government economy.

"Young people are buying homes, cars, and groceries, therefore, they are very attuned to the economic problem," Obenshain said.

"They should be attracted to the GOP philosophy of frugality in government and of giving more of the function of government back to the local and state level where they can keep a better eye on it."

Seafood Feast attracts crowd

Hungry crowds quickly cleaned out seafood stands along Virginia Beach's boardwalk during the opening of the first annual Neptune Festival. Early in the evening of Sept. 27, hundreds of persons swamped the few booths still selling food.

Parade marks coronation

Top marching bands from high schools throughout Virginia will make the Grand Coronation Day Parade and Field Show one of the most spectacular events scheduled during Virginia Beach's Neptune festival.

The parade, starting at 9 a.m. Oct. 5, will begin at Princess Anne High School stadium and travel west on Virginia Beach Boulevard to Dorset Avenue. Official reviewing stands will be erected at Pembroke Mall.

The parade promises to be one of the best of the year because it will double as the Virginia State Senior High School Marching Bands Championship competition, the Military Marching Bands Award competition and Special Guest Units Awards competition with nationally prominent band directors sitting as judges.

High school units throughout the state will compete in the parade and again at the Field Show at 2:30 p.m. at the Cox High School stadium on Great Neck Road.

WATER SAFETY

Registration is open through Oct. 15 for Red Cross classes in both senior life-saving and water safety instruction, sponsored by the Norfolk Jewish Community Center. The life-saving course will begin Oct. 16 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The water safety instructor's course begins Oct. 17 from 7 to 9 p.m. For further information, call Jim Stout at 489-1371.

The units will be judged on music, marching, non-playing performance and general effect. Manoeuvring and show design will be judged only during the Field Show.

A shining cross marks the site of the first landing at Cape Henry, where a twilight worship service was held as part of the Neptune Festival Oct. 6.

Flares salute King Neptune's return to sea

As King Neptune sailed away under a barrage of fireworks that marked the end of Virginia Beach's 10-day autumn festival, the people responsible for it all were euphoric.

"I can't believe the size of the crowd," grinned Frederick Napolitano, president of the First Annual Neptune Festival that even stunned its own promoters with its success.

He gazed happily at the colorful shower of fireworks filling the sky at 5th Avenue near the boardwalk, where several thousand persons gathered for the close of the celebration Oct. 6.

King Neptune, Virginia Beach businessman J.P. Sadler, had boarded a decorated military vehicle well disguised as a fluffy float for the king and his bevy of princesses.

The crowd surged around the vehicle as it lumbered aboard a Larc, an amphibious landing craft, and the king set out to sea.

Then the crowd turned its attention to the fireworks display, which drew appreciative murmurs from the audience all the way from the Steel Pier to 14th Street.

"It's better than we expected it to be," admitted Napolitano in a Sun interview the day after the festival closed. "The crowds were larger than we anticipated. People really came out to participate."

The reception Virginia Beach residents gave its first autumn celebration left no doubt that the festival will be repeated next year, probably at the same time, give or take a week.

Recycling beaches

Channel dredging next year's sand

Sand that once clogged shipping lanes in the Chesapeake Bay will find its way to the Virginia Beach resort strip in time for next year's tourist season.

The city will be the beneficiary of a dredging operation that is clearing Thimble Shoals Channel, one of the major shipping lanes in Chesapeake Bay.

Thousands of cubic yards of sand will be pumped into a storage area at Ft. Story starting Oct. 17. It will be hauled to the Virginia Beach's eroding beaches by truck during the winter.

Assistant City Engineer

George Relyea said that Ft. Story will serve as a sand stockpile, which Virginia Beach can use as it replenishes its shoreline. He added, "We wouldn't try to haul it all this year."

The Army Corps of Engineers planned the sand pumping project, and a corps spokesman remarked, "In a sense we're recycling sand we would have to dredge anyway."

Although recycling is a "logical approach to the whole thing," he added, it is a difficult job "engineering wise."

A dredge will work in the channel and pump sand to a barge moored to a floating pier just off Ft. Story.

The dredge began working the channel Oct. 1, but most of the material it cleared so far is not good beach material, a corps spokesman reported, and it will not be pumped to Ft. Story. The dredge is expected to start pumping up sand this week.

The Army Corps of Engineers dredges the Thimble Shoal every two years, and it is studying the possibility of pumping sand directly to the Virginia Beach oceanfront in the future.

Vepco in for shock

Approval of a $97.7 million temporary rate increase for the Virginia Electric and Power Co. (Vepco) has rekindled protests from members of a Virginia Beach consumer's organization who say they still "have a few aces up our sleeves".

For Sherry Sawyer, 5601 Hatteras Road, and Jackie Gridley of 908 Sunnyside Drive, the fight is just beginning.

Both women are part of a loosely-knit statewide group protesting a recent Vepco rate increase that is expected to add $6.60 to the average monthly household electric bill.

Mrs. Sawyer, who has three children and is expecting a fourth in December, got on the phone

In line for city sewers

Bellamy Manor: 'You can smell the septic tanks'

By NEAL SIMS
Sun Editor

Residents of Bellamy Manor, a subdivision in the Kempsville Borough, are the latest to take their sewage woes before the Virginia Beach City Council.

Armed with photographs of the area after a rainstorm, J.H. Holland, 5100 Bellamy Manor Drive, called the lack of sewage facilities there "the most serious problem in Virginia Beach."

Holland told the Council that after a rainstorm, "you could stand on my porch and smell the septic tanks."

Bellamy Manor -- like Baylake Pines, Doylesway and Birdneck Point -- is one of 55 areas in Virginia Beach slated for sewer projects in the city's five-year Capital Improvements Program (CIP).

Under the current CIP, which is revised annually, Bellamy Manor's sewer project is scheduled for completion in fiscal year 1976-77. Construction plans for the project at a cost of $50,000 have already been completed. Preliminary estimate of the project's total cost is $878,400, but City Manager Roger Scott said that estimate was made before the construction plans were completed.

Speaking at Council's Oct. 7 meeting, Holland said, "It's a disgrace to Virginia Beach to have something like this exist. There's property out there now that could not be re-sold."

"It's usually a pleasure to live in your home, but it's not out there now," Holland continued. "We feel absolutely at a loss that the City of Virginia Beach won't help us."

Scott pointed out that the city has authorized $5 million per year to be spent on sewer projects under the current CIP. Prior to the increase in bonding capacity granted to the city this year by the Virginia General Assembly, the Beach had been limited by its city charter to a total of $4 million per year on water and sewer projects.

Council had authorized 75 per cent of that amount -- or $3 million per year -- to be spent on sewer projects. Scott told The Sun that as soon as the bonding limit was expanded the amount allocated for sewers was immediately increased to $5 million.

He said there was a "good chance" that the Bellamy Manor project may be accelerated and perhaps scheduled for completion prior to the 1976-77 date called for in the current CIP.

In that same meeting, Council authorized the city manager to accept the low bid of $474,708, submitted by M.S. Newsome, Inc., to proceed with a similar project for sewers in the Chesapeake Beach area. There are many projects programmed, Scott said, and the city is taking care of them as fast as the $3 million to $5 million per year in expenditures will allow. "We just haven't gotten to them all yet," he said.

In other business before the Council Oct. 7:

- A public hearing before the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation Advisory Committee on recommendations for facilities to be installed in the new 66 1/2-acre Bayville Park was announced for Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. at Hermitage Elementary School, 1701 Pleasure House Road.
- A public hearing on the city's master street and highway plan, including Old Donation Parkway, was scheduled for Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in Council chambers.

A grant of $212,000 from the U.S. Army Department of Civil Preparedness for the city's Public Safety Building, now under construction, was announced.

Grants of $250,000 from the U.S. Department of the Interior and $125,000 from the Virginia Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for Bayville Park were announced.

Lynhaven Borough Councilman John Griffin was unanimously appointed to fill the unexpired term of former Councilman D. Murray Malbon on the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission. The term runs through June 30, 1976.

Prior to the formal meeting, Council met for 33 minutes in executive session, closed to the public and the press, to discuss what the agenda listed as a "legal" matter.

NEWSPAPER WEEK 1974
OCTOBER 6-12

The media-open forum for ideas

There's a big flap these days about "access to the media". This translates to: How easy is it for you to have your ideas disseminated to your fellow citizens through your local newspaper, radio or television station, or other on-going news medium?

There are those who insist you should have a governmentally-guaranteed right to get your thoughts into print or on the air.

At the risk of seeming to over-simplify, how about a governmentally-guaranteed right to have a picnic? That is, just as every American should have an opportunity to communicate his or her ideas, certainly we should all have an opportunity to picnic when we want to. And we can, without government having formalized this "right".

You might not be able to find a picnic table available for your use just when and where you'd prefer. But if you look around, you can usually locate one that's empty, and if you can't find a table you can always spread a blanket on the ground.

The same is true of the media. There are lots of ways to express yourself in the established media, and if they're all filled at the moment (which is most unlikely) you can always use some other means of getting your message out — from a bumper sticker to using the mails.

You can write a letter to the editor. If you avoid libeling people, and don't lace your arguments with false information, chances are very good your letter will be printed. You can go to a public meeting, make a statement, and expect your comments to be reported. You can buy an ad. You can buy billboard space, or put up a sign in your front yard. If you picket, you'll probably be interviewed and maybe even photographed.

You can phone in to a radio talk show, or ask to be interviewed on a television news or public affairs show. You can ask your pastor to tell your story in the church bulletin, or your union to make available space in the union newspaper.

There are many ways you can express yourself, not the least of which is to start your own newspaper (not recommended, but we'll defend to the death your right to do it).

If government attempted to guarantee your access to either the picnic table of your choice or the news medium of your choice (there being others who'd inevitably want the same access at the same time) consider the chaos. It isn't necessary, or feasible, or even desirable.

On the festival march

A kiss from Miss Virginia Beach Joan Grady, unicyclists and bands and more bands.... it was just a small part of King Neptune's Grand Coronation Day Parade, which included more than 5,000 participants. Marching units trekked to Virginia Beach from all over the state to compete in the Virginia State Senior High School Marching Bands Championship. The Oct. 5 parade traveled along Virginia Beach Boulevard before reviewing stands at Pembroke Mall.

News Briefs

Child rape victim

A 4-year-old rape victim identified a 15-year-old Virginia Beach youth as her assailant following a Sept. 27 incident which allegedly took place in the woods behind Plaza Junior High School.

The girl, who was also reportedly kicked in the back and stomach, was treated as an outpatient at Boone Clinic, but was later hospitalized when she complained of abdominal pains.

The child identified the rape suspect from police files. The youth had not been in school the day the assault occurred.

Drug brings jail term

Prosecutors in a heroin possession case are hoping that a stiff sentence meted out recently to a Virginia Beach man will deter other drug-related offenses in the city.

Deputy Commonwealth Atty. Paul Sciortino, who successfully prosecuted Eric W. Hemming, 23, convicted of heroin possession, said the four-year jail sentence delivered by Circuit Court Judge Philip Russo will not go unnoticed by drug users and dealers in the area who follow drug-related trials.

The judge previously had given Hemming supervised probation when police found 500 LSD capsules in the defendant's car. Only two months later, Hemming was arrested for possession of heroin.

Schools swap land

The Virginia Beach School Board has agreed to pack up a school warehouse to make way for a major east-west thoroughfare parallel to the south side of Virginia Beach Boulevard.

In addition to relieving boulevard traffic between Newtown Road and Independence Boulevard, the extension of Cleveland Street, will make it possible for Fine Salzberg, Inc., to develop a proposed office park along the new highway.

The developer has agreed to relocate the school board warehouse near Witchduck Road and Cleveland Street to another site.

Brothers expelled

Two Plaza Junior High School students charged with assaulting a teacher on the first day of school, have been expelled by the Virginia Beach School Board after an unusual public hearing.

Attorney Constantine Spanoulis pleaded the case of the boys, William Witt, 15 and his brother, Charles, 14, who allegedly assaulted a teacher, Charma Lane, when she caught the younger boy smoking on campus.

The attorney said a decision to expel would mean the end of the boys' formal education, and he urged the School Board to give them a second chance. However, the board unanimously agreed to expel the youths based on recommendations from Supt. of Schools E.E. Brickell.

Beach outgrows old jailhouse; bond faces voters

Steve M. sat at the cold steel table and considered the cards in his hand while he took a long drag from his cigarette.

Three other young men, all shirtless and dressed in blue jeans, sat at the table with cards, and a fifth lounged against the bars of the cell in Virginia Beach's City Jail.

For the next three months until his trial date, Steve will not see the light of day. For the next 90 days, the only time he will be out of his cell and the adjoining small room will be to shower in a drab closet-sized recess down the hall.

And although Steve may not be guilty of anything except poverty, he will be incarcerated in jail conditions far worse than facilities used for some convicted felons.

Virginia Beach Sheriff S. J. "Joe" Smith is determined to improve Virginia Beach's jail conditions, and he has a chance to see the wheels of change work if voters approve a $5 million bond for a new corrections facility Nov. 5.

With inflation pinching the pocketbooks of voters, Smith admits that "it's the worst possible time to try to get a bond passed."

But he said the City Council placed the issue on the ballot to give voters a chance to approve the bond if they feel strongly enough about a new jail.

With inflation pinching the pocketbooks of voters, Smith admits that "it's the worst possible time to try to get a bond passed."

And once citizens understand the critical need for a new jail, Smith hopes they will vote "yes." He explained that construction costs for the jail mount with each passing year, and a new jail will be needed whether or not the bond is approved. If it fails, the sheriff said, "it will be up to Council to find a way."

But with a zero campaign budget, Smith said it's difficult to spread the word about the proposed jail. He believes the most convincing evidence for the bond issue is a tour through the jail itself.

Smith escorted a Sun reporter through the three floors of jail cells, and down a labyrinth of narrow

This is the first article of a three-part series in which Sun Staff Writer Mary Rode examines the issues to be decided in the Nov. 5 election. The first part focuses on the bond referendum to finance a proposed new jail for the City of Virginia Beach.

gray corridors which occasionally broke into shades of beige, brown or red brick, closely matching the reddish brown paint on the cement floors.

In one cell block, a man sat listlessly with his hands dangling through the bars of his cell. Four gray metal light fixtures sent stark shadows running down the wall, but each cell itself was a darkened cubbyhole.

Ideally Smith said there should be only one man in each cell, but there are times when Virginia Beach must jam as many as four persons into a room. Normally two or three persons share a cell.

This week 98 persons filled the jail's 55 cells. One row was reserved for women and female juveniles, and Smith briefly explained that one improvement in the proposed prison would be completely separate facilities for men, women and juveniles.

There were three women in one cell area, while two girls sat at a table together in the next room. Down another flight of cement stairs seven men were working in the kitchen, standing over kettles of steaming food and doling out portions onto trays for the inmates.

As we passed an open door, Smith waved to four guards who were hunched over lunch on a small table in a room barely large enough for it. "There's not even room for the men," he remarked.

There was no room to pass through the kitchen, so we waited for the kitchen workers to finish a load of trays before exiting from the locked door on the other side of the kitchen.

Back in his own small office, the sheriff unrolled blueprints for the new jail which will have 200 cells, exercise yards for men and women, a library, 60-seat dining hall, two multi-use rooms that double as classrooms and a larger room that would be used for indoor recreation and as a chapel.

Smith insists that the plans for the prison simply meet criteria laid down by the state and federal government for correctional facilities which hold persons for more than 30 days.

An exercise area must be available, and Smith said the penal institutions also are required to give inmates educational facilities, a place to attend religious services, medical facilities and individual cells when possible.

The 27-year-old Virginia Beach jail does none of these, he reported.

Instead of outside exercise, persons spending time in jail get high doses of Vitamin C with their food, Smith said, because they are never exposed to sunlight.

No organized educational program is underway except tutoring provided to juveniles, and the closest thing to religious services on Sundays are Scripture readings by laymen.

A doctor and paramedic staff must work out of a cell themselves.

The jail proposal also includes an area where inmates may meet visitors. In Virginia Beach's existing jail, visitors must stand in the cell block corridor.

The cafeteria-style dining room which would be reserved for inmates who do not abuse the privilege, could save the institution as much as one-third on food costs and 40 percent on bread, Smith estimated, because inmates would take only what they wanted to eat instead of flushing unwanted food down the toilet and "clogging up the plumbing," a common occurrence now.

The jail plans have been checked by state corrections officials to "carve out the fat," Smith said, although they still must go before an official corrections board. He emphasized, "There are no frills."

"Some people think this is going to be a palace," Smith added, "and believe me, it isn't."

'There are no frills' Smith said. 'Some people think this is going to be a palace, and believe me, it isn't.'

He emphasized that the plans included only necessities for a positive corrections program which is badly needed but impossible to conduct now. He said the crowded jail actually encourages inmates to repeat offenses after they are released.

"All we are now is custodians," Smith remarked. "That's all we can do."

Sixty-seven percent of the persons in jail are repeat offenders, and Smith strongly believes that first offenders should not be incarcerated with them. That's one of the advantages of the proposed cor-

If a person does not return to jail, it's to the benefit of the taxpayer, who winds up shelling out $14,000 a year to keep one person behind bars.

rections facility, he noted, because it would separate inmates into categories based on age, sex and status, whether the inmate is awaiting trial, sentencing or if he is already sentenced.

Smith noted that 91 of the 98 persons in jail now have not been convicted yet. They are in jail because they cannot pay bail or choose not to do so.

Some wait months for trial on charges ranging from burglary to drug-related offenses, Smith said. Most of the crimes are not serious, and the sheriff doesn't think that "locking people in a cage" is the answer.

Most of these people have not even been convicted," he explained, and it's the duty of the corrections officials to make sure their rights as citizens are not violated.

Once inmates are convicted of a crime, Smith said, "it's a whole new ballgame."

But the sheriff believes that many convicted of less serious crimes, especially if they are young and first offenders, can be returned to the community as productive citizens quickly -- if the jail had proper facilities to bring in programs offered by Virginia Beach agencies such as drug rehabilitation clinics and Alcoholics Anonymous programs.

His goal is to "change" the prisoner. "If you can change 5 or 10 percent," Smith explained, "you can go a long way cutting crime down."

And if a person does not return to jail, Smith observed, it's to the benefit of the taxpayer, who winds up shelling out $14,000 a year to keep one person behind bars.

But with his limited facility, where there is not even room for visitors to sit down and talk with inmates, Smith feels it is impossible to do anything but be a watchdog.

The sheriff is convinced that Virginia Beach residents want more than that. "Virginia Beach is tired of hearing the word 'jail,'" he emphasized. "They want to hear the word 'correction.'" to the White House as soon as the State Corporation Commission approved the increase.

Vepco

After four calls resulted only in advice to contact her senator, an action she took long ago, Mrs. Sawyer decided to travel to Washington herself to protest Virginia's electric rates personally.

"I do know this," she said in a Sun interview this week, "I'm going to go to the White House in person. Whether I go up there with half of Virginia or not, I don't know. There could be a massive march in the wind."

Mrs. Sawyer's determination to call for federal help resulted from failure of state and local officials to put a lid on Vepco's constant requests for increases, she explained.

"I want federal intervention," Mrs. Sawyer said. "People are being taken to the cleaners, washed, dried and pressed" by Vepco. "It's time our President went to our governor, and attorney general and found out what's going on."

Mrs. Gridley told the Sun she would also like to see the President look into the Vepco financial situation.

She said consumers will have to go to "bombard Washington D.C." and confront President Gerald Ford with the skyrocketing utility rates and ask him, "Is this how we fight inflation?"

"People cannot have these high prices thrown at them," Mrs. Gridley emphasized. "The utility rates not only will hurt the poor and elderly, she said, but in these times of inflation they also will be very, very hard on the middle class."

The Virginia Beach woman believes that Vepco doesn't need the increase and that the company is not being operated properly.

"Why should the average hardworking, everyday consumer be forced to pay an outrageous utility rate," Mrs. Gridley asked, "while the stockholders collect dividends?"

If Vepco wants to expand its facilities, she said, "let the stockholders shell out the money."

Vepco's rate hike is simply "more frosting on the cake for the utility," Mrs. Gridley remarked, "and consumers receive the crumbs."

She urged consumers to "stand up now and fight Vepco. We're going to have people freezing to death this winter because they're unable to pay Vepco's bills."

"The Vepco situation has gotten from bad to worse," she said, "and I don't think it can get worse unless people begin starving to pay Vepco's bills."

If the utility is in real financial trouble, Mrs. Gridley said she thinks Virginia should revoke its charter and let another power company service Virginia, or the state should take the charter over itself.

Some people think consumers can't tackle a large utility, Mrs. Gridley observed, "but I think we can drive them (Vepco) completely out of the state of Virginia."

She added that some people are afraid Vepco will cut off electric service if they oppose rate hikes.

Mrs. Sawyer also believes that consumers wield some clout if they band together to fight Vepco's rate increases. The effort to stop the rate hike has failed so far, she explained, because "we didn't reach the majority level. People did not take the interest they should have."

Some people think its futile to fight Vepco, she said, "but they can be beaten," she insisted, if enough people protest.

"We scared Vepco during the summer," Mrs. Sawyer added. She said company officials called her from Richmond in an attempt to meet with consumers and stop the protest.

The group sponsored protests, circulated petitions and conducted a candlelight blackout, she said.

A few supporters discouraged by the SCC's decision to approve $97.7 million of Vepco's $127 million request.

"But it might be just a temporary depression," she observed. What is significant, she added, is that "it's the first time the public has ever stood up to Vepco."

After the rate increase goes into effect, Mrs. Sawyer thinks that consumers might be even more willing to fight the utility.

"It's just like a bully picking on a child. The child may be timid, but if he's punched hard enough, he'll fight back," she reasoned.

The SCC decision does not mean the end of consumer protest, Mrs. Sawyer said. "I don't feel like we're defeated," she explained. "We may have lost some ground. It's not over by any means."

In the end, she pointed out, Vepco might have to return the increase to users at 8 per cent interest if the utility fails to justify the hike.

In April the SCC will reopen hearings to determine if the increase should be incorporated into the Vepco rate structure permanently. If the utility fails to prove it needs the increase, the rate could be rolled back and consumers might receive a refund.

Mrs. Sawyer also questioned the amount the new rate increase will cost consumers each month. "I have heard it will be around $6.50," she said, "but when Vepco talks about the 'average household,' it talks about some old lady living on the third floor of an apartment building that's dilapidated."

She said her utility bill now ranges between $70 and $90 every month, compared to $40 she used to pay in June in a house that's larger than the one she lives in now.

"We are appalled at this," Mrs. Sawyer said. "This business of paying $100 a month is for the birds, and I don't even use my appliances that much."

Mrs. Gridley also criticized the fuel cost adjustment which allows Vepco to pass price increases directly to the consumer without going through SCC.

She reported that she paid a higher electric bill in September than the previous month, although she used less electricity.

"They get you one way or the other," Mrs. Gridley remarked. "No matter how much you cut back, they get you."

Neptune

The festival board will meet this week to iron out details for the project's second year. Napolitano said he would "recommend strongly" that the festival hold to the same date—the fall end of September and beginning of October.

"The weather was good," he reported, and the summer tourist season was over. By the time the festival began, Beach residents were settling down to a relaxed pace of living. The timing was right for an autumn celebration.

Even the school children had a holiday and joined in a day of events of their own, Napolitano remarked. "Everything was right."

Festival Executive Director Frankie Abourjille also said she anticipates that festival will continue next year at approximately the same time of year.

The festival staff researched Beach weather for the past 100 years before deciding on the Sept. 27 to Oct. 6 time frame, she noted, and weather is usually mild enough for outdoor events that make up the bulk of the festival schedule.

And with the Jewish holidays in mid-October and the state fair in early September, she said, "we're pretty much boxed in."

The festival drew upon the efforts of "thousands of volunteers," Mrs. Abourjille reported, and she said workers were "extremely pleased with the response of the general public." Participants "enjoyed themselves, and overlooked the lack of facilities."

"We made some mistakes," Napolitano admitted, but "nothing very obvious except for the Seaford Feast," the festival kick-off which attracted 40,000 more persons than anticipated.

"Every day was an education," Mrs. Abourjille said, but she predicted that next year's festival organizers will be able to capitalize on this year's errors. Then, she added, "I'm sure we'll be able to do a far better job. This year gave us some idea of what to expect."

Top on the list of proposed changes, Mrs. Abourjille said, is extending the Seaford Feast, which didn't have nearly enough food for everyone who turned out to nibble on their favorite catch.

"It was extremely difficult to anticipate," Mrs. Abourjille reported, "and we missed it by a long shot" when planners expected a mere 10,000 to show up for the meal.

The feast will probably be "one of the highlights" of next year's festival, she added.

Promoters were also not sure of Beach residents' staying power for a 10-day celebration, but they were gratified when the oceanfront was mobbed for Neptune's farewell.

"It was good to see the turnout," Mrs. Abourjille said. "We had a feeling that after 10 days only a couple hundred would show up, but a couple thousand were there." She said the fireworks attracted quite a few persons because the displays are "always popular with families."

Napolitano said the events should attract even greater crowds next year just because people will hear about this year's festival. "People are already asking us what we're going to do next year," he said. "The trend will be to offer family-oriented programs, and as many free events as we can."

The festival's advertising budget will still be slim. "We had a tremendous amount of help from the media," Napolitano reported, and he indicated that the festival would be organized along the same lines next year.

"We want to try to get things out earlier," the festival president added, like the brochure listing festival events. He explained that many proposed events were not "firmed up" until the last minute, so the brochure was late.

Hopefully, Napolitano said, organizations will realize that they should start planning Neptune Festival events now for next year. And he's predicting that they will. "All these things will fall into place." Overall, he said, "we accomplished what we were after, and that's to get the city of Virginia Beach together."

"There was a tremendous number of tourists in the city," Napolitano said, and it helped the hotel and motel establishments. The industry probably will enjoy a surge in the fall. But, Napolitano said, "that's a secondary thing."

What is important is that the festival was a success. "We've built a good enough base," Napolitano asserted, "that within the next three years, this festival can grow to be a really fabulous thing."

Beach calls hearing for park in Bayville

The Bayville Park area of Virginia Beach will soon have its first community park, but not before residents have a chance to tell the city what kind of recreational facilities should be installed.

A public hearing on the 66-acre park is scheduled at 8 p.m. Oct. 10 at Hermitage Elementary School before the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation Advisory Commission.

Under the proposed park development plan, Bayville Park would be similar to Red Wing Park and Princess Anne Park. It would include picnic shelters, tables and grills, a rest room, baseball fields with backstops and a roadway with a parking area.

The park will be the first large community park in the area, according to Janet Anderson, secretary to the city parks and recreation.

The only city parks in Bayville now are small neighborhood parks, she reported.

Neptune Festival Closes With Full Weekend

Starting off the weekend activities Friday, Oct. 4, was the Milk Carton Boat Derby held in Mt. Trashmore Lake. City kids had the day off from school and they showed up in abundance to cheer on classmates who had built boats from spare plywood and empty milk cartons.

Getting off the starting line was sometimes a problem, particularly if you had neglected to add a rudder to your cardboard craft. Contestants often tangled as they battled for an inside track.

Winners included Virginia Beach's Kenny Yerkes, 12, of 2317 Hood Lane, who took top honors in the first event for the 9-12 age group.

Saturday's big event was the Southern Fall Derby Rally run at the Mt. Trashmore track. The event attracted 81 racers from eight states and the District of Columbia, and winners of the two classes were from Ohio and North Carolina.

City derbyists included Cindy Sandidas, 15, of 5304 Locke Lane, who placed fourth in the winners class, and 14 year old Randy LaBelle, of 3712 Forest Glen, who drove #36 but unfortunately not to glory. LaBelle was one of many who eventually yielded to the top winner in the Winner's Class, James Albertoni, of Suffield, Ohio.

Patriots 'high' after win over Chiefs

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

Ron Zollicoffer, end, First Colonial

This 6-1 165 pound sophomore end was instrumental in engineering the Patriot's 22-13 upset win over previously unbeaten Kempsville last weekend. Zollicoffer caught two touchdown passes from quarterback Tracy Moon of 29 and 48 yards. On the first scoring strike, Zollicoffer said, "Moon told me to run a hook-in pattern but I saw the safety go for the fall, so I went to a post and just took it in. I was just happy we won the game. Our defense played tremendously. Russ Meyer did a great job on defense." Zollicoffer now leads the city in touchdown receptions with five.

Margo Dixon, halfback, Kellam

The Knights shook off a disappointing loss to Kempsville Sept. 27 by clobbering Bayside Friday night, 34-0. But the Martins had battled Kellam to a scoreless tie in the first half, and it took this 6-0 155-pound back to break the ice by rambling 35 yards to inside the Bayside five yard line halfway through the third quarter and then plunging over for the score a minute later. Inspired Kellam went on to chalk up 28 additional points in a flurry of scoring before the final gun.

Bobby Stubbs, defensive guard, Cox

This junior defensive stalwart, a 6-3 225-pound left guard on Cox's eight-man defensive line, has proven himself, in Coach Al Habit's words, "a tremendous college prospect. He's a hard-working kid and one of the hardest hitters on the team." Stubbs was instrumental in checking Lake Taylor's grinding offense in their Oct. 4 game, making a dozen tackles in a losing cause. Lake Taylor finally tallied in the last three minutes to win, 8-0. But Stubbs effectively stopped Titan star Amos Lawrence one-on-one several times. Lawrence was held to just 38 yards for the day.

"Stubbs and defensive captain Derek Canaan stopped Lake Taylor's inside running game," said Habit. Bobby Stubbs, who also tallied 11 individual tackles in the Maury game, plays with a handicap; he is deaf. "He moves on the snap of the ball," Habit said. "He can't hear the ref's whistle, and it makes for problems in coaching. But he reads your lips, and just has natural football ability."

Cox stumps some in contest

The winners of last week's football contest were Theodore F. Jason, first place; Thomas A. Lesky, second place; and Anna R. Evansky, third. The scores were exceptional in picking of local games. The Cox/Lake Taylor game surprised quite a few entrants. Some excellent entries were not scored because the tie breaker game was not filled in. Many sharples caught the missing game and the duplication in square eight. Nobody got close to the Wisconsin-Missouri point spread.

First Colonial has arrived.

The Patriots, disappointed in two games earlier this season against Princess Anne and highly touted Kellam, put it all together last week in slapping down a tough Kempsville team at its home field, 22-13.

First Colonial has been looking for a high-point early in its season and even after shutting out Granby and Bayside, the shadows of losses to the Knights and Ralph Gahagan's Cavaliers still hung over the team until Oct. 4.

"Of course it's got to be the high point of our season so far," said Head Coach Frank Webster on the Kempsville win. "We've played five games now, and lost two, both really by just one point since Kellam scored their last touchdown against us in the last thirty seconds. We've been playing solid defense all year. Offensively, we've made mistakes.

But our kids overcame them and we're just as happy as the devil."

The Patriots combined their usual defensive muscle with an attack on offense that featured a passing show by quarterback Tracy Moon—at 6-0, 190 pounds, he is bigger than many of First Colonial's linemen—to his favorite end, Ron Zollicoffer, that went for two touchdowns.

"We were working on our passing more," said the Patriot mentor, "but we're really a running team. We'll run the ball at you until we're stopped." Patriot mistakes in the first half—cold hands due to the temperature that dropped to the mid-30's during the Kempsville game—such as fumbles, forced the offense to take to the air, and with great effect. Moon threw 12 aeriels, completing 5 for 128 yards.

"Offensively and defensively we played just tremendous," a pleased Webster commented. "We beat a good football team, a real good one, and even though we made mistakes, you can't complain because when you've beaten a good team you know you've done something."

Kempsville's Tom Johnston (31) chases Ron Zollicoffer into the end zone. The Patriot end had a busy night, grabbing two Tracy Moon aeriels for scores. This one, for 29 yards, came in the first half to tie the score 6-6. First Colonial won, 22-13.

Webster spotlighted a number of First Colonial players for special honors, including right-side line-backer Jimmy Smith. "He just played one heck of a game for us," Webster said of the 6-0, 170-pound Smith, who was credited with 13 individual tackles and four assists.

Smith himself was enthusiastic about the team effort, particularly on defense. "The pressure was on, but in the first half we held Kempsville to 6 yards rushing," he said. "I've got a good tackle in front of me in Darryl Doss. Everyone played great. I think we were really ready for this game, not like against Kellam. In that game we were pretty shaky."

Coach Webster agreed there was particular pressure on the defense to perform well in stopping Bobby Harrison and Mike Crabtree. "There was more on the defense, especially in the first half. During halftime we tried to get our blocking assignments straightened out on offense. Kempsville was hitting us better than I have seen them hit, they were more aggressive. But we overcame that."

One player of whom Webster never tires of talking is the Patriot running attack's mainstay, Bill Harris, who had rolled up 300 yards rushing in the four games prior to meeting Kempsville, and last Friday night against the Chiefs added to his scoring totals by bulging four yards for a touchdown, and twice going over for two-point conversions. "It's getting to where where people are finally recognizing Harris as one of the best in the area. What else can you say about him?"

First Colonial, now 3-2, must face arch-rival Cox this weekend. The Falcons, still winless, have scored but one touchdown in their four games, yet their big defense—that plays with an 8-man line—commands a lot of respect around the city.

"Cox is the best 0-4 team around," said Webster. "We always have to play our best against Cox, and you never know. They're tough, and big."

Patriot line coach Stewart Douglas grinned that when FC and Cox meet, it's akin to the "OK Corral" in action.

First Colonial is toughening itself for the remainder of its schedule, one that yet includes games against Maury and Lake Taylor, besides Cox. There is that nagging feeling among the Patriot coaching staff that if Kellam—and if Princess Anne—had come later in the district schedule, First Colonial may have had a clean sweep, repeating its 1968 district championship.

As Asst. Coach Ted Phelps said hopefully, "I wonder if Gahagan would play us again...."

Keys to Victory

Coaches Corner

Have you seen a switch in the balance of football power from Norfolk to Virginia Beach?

Johnny Cooke, Kellam

"Oh yeah, I think it's evident by the standings. In my experience there has always been a Beach team in contention, but where it used to be one city team, it's now up to two or three contenders. So I think there has been a shift as far as overall strength in Beach football."

Frank Webster, First Colonial

"I can't say there has been a shift, but then I have never thought that Norfolk schools really dominated. The Beach schools are getting progressively tougher each year, in all sports, including wrestling and basketball. I think we're getting better as a group."

Ralph Gahagan, Princess Anne

"I think it's a little bit premature to say that. We haven't really seen the good Beach teams play the Norfolk teams yet, with the exception of Kempsville and Lake Taylor. I think our upcoming games will tell the story better, when we play Norview and Lake Taylor."

Terry Morton, Bayside

"No, I haven't really seen a shift in power, not until we win it, until a Beach team wins the district championship and until we dominate. It looks good so far this year, but I can't see the shift."

Ed Booth, Kempsville

"I don't think the Beach schools have played enough Norfolk teams so far this year to properly judge. Maury and Norview weren't picked to do much in the pre-season, but they're good ball teams. Up to this point it's a little premature to say."

Al Habit, Cox

"Yes, I really have. Beach football has improved tremendously the last two or three years. Norfolk has had a lot of school problems, with busing, and a lot of families have moved from the Norfolk districts to the Beach. You'll see kids whose brothers played for Granby and Maury playing now for Kempsville and Kellam. So transportation is a factor. But the days of football domination by Norfolk schools are past."

Norview at Princess Anne

The Cavaliers, are spearheaded by senior back Aubrey Graham, one of the top rushers in the district this season. Anne the Princess Anne defensive unit, featuring 195-pound tackle Matt Ambrose, has stopped cold such triple-option offense teams as Great Bridge and First Colonial. The Cavaliers have the key, and that is to continue doing what they have been all season: controlling the ball.

Maury at Kempsville

Ed Booth's Chiefs play host to Jerry Sazio's Maury Commodores and the Chiefs, arerunning rough-shod like a well-oiled machine over Tidewater opponents. The Kempsville defense is the biggest and strongest the school has ever had, and they will have their work cut out for them in stopping a fast Commodore backfield. The Maury defense, ever Sazio's strong-point, must stop Mike Crabtree, currently a top rusher in the Eastern District.

Bayside at Booker T. Washington

It is time for Terry Morton's Marlins to show their strength, and they will do it Friday night against the Bookers. Booker T., though ensconced in a new school, is yet stuck with a lack of football talent, and has been the perennial doormat of a powerful Eastern District. The Marlins will need to consolidate an inadequate offense if they're going to win.

First Colonial at Cox

The Patriots, picked as contenders in pre-season can't explain their record so far this year. Frank Webster's squad may have a tough time against the winless Falcons because the Cox defense is tougher than its record would indicate, and the FC wishbone attack has been inconsistent against determined defenses. Quarterback Tracy Moon will have to sharpen his passing game to break the game open.

Kellam at John Marshall of Richmond

The Knights take a long road trip north, giving head coach Johnny Cooke some time to contemplate the suddenly sagging season, particularly the loss to city rival Kempsville. But time heals all wounds, and the Knights should out-offense Marshall.

Research of lotus gets funds

The Cape Henry Woman's Club, as part of its continuing efforts to conserve the native American lotus, has granted $600 a year for the next two years to Old Dominion University (ODU) for scientific research of the reproductive biology and variations of the plant.

The funds will provide a $250 annual scholarship and $350 a year for expenses. The scholarship, under the direction of ODU Asst. Biology Professor Dr. Lytton J. Musselman, will be given to a student who will assist the ODU faculty in conducting research.

For the past 20 years, the Cape Henry Woman's Club has worked to conserve the lotus plant (Nelumbo lutea) which grows in the Tabernacle Creek area of Virginia Beach.

Several years ago, the only large stand of native lotus remaining in the country was in a lagoon which the club owns and has dredged to help foster the growth of the plants.

Club members have sent lotus seeds and tubers to many locations in the United States and even to Japan to help preserve the plant.

The check for the scholarship and research fund was presented to ODU by Mrs. Cecil H. Reed, chairman of the club's lotus research committee. Since the club was formed, Mrs. Reed has been responsible for collecting information about the lotus.

According to Mrs. Reed, the plant not only has a beautiful yellow flower but the tubers and other parts of the plant are sources of food for animals.

The lotus tubers were used for food by the American Indians before the arrival of white settlers. The seeds were carried from place to place and replanted by the Indians as they moved about the country.

In addition to the lotus study grant, the Cape Henry Woman's Club also provides scholarships in nursing, music, and education for students from Virginia Beach.

Network to link hospitals

Two Virginia Beach hospitals may eventually be plugged into a sophisticated statewide communication network that will coordinate disaster response among hospitals as well as day-to-day operation.

General Hospital of Virginia Beach and Bayside Hospital have unofficially indicated that they will join a group of 14 Tidewater hospitals in a $60,000 project funded partially by federal money.

The federal government will put up $30,000 for the system, and the funds will be matched by participating hospitals. The project will be coordinated by the Tidewater Emergency Medical Services Council (TEMS).

TEMS spokesman Kent Weber told The Sun the council has not decided how the matching funds will be paid. The 14 hospitals could share the cost equally, he said, or each hospital's contribution could depend on the "What equipment goes where."

The system will give hospitals voice-to-voice communication, in addition to a communication line out of the region.

The existing system used by area hospitals is 18 to 22 years old, Weber said, and it uses an open frequency.

That means each hospital can hear all messages being transmitted to other hospitals in the region, he explained, and sometimes totally unrelated messages break into the frequency. The new system would completely eliminate background noise.

Joan Treacy, research specialist with Tidewater Division of Youth Services, is looking for a group home for Beach youngsters.

Search on for youth home

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

When Virginia Beach youngsters run away from home or violate curfew, they might end up spending the night in jail.

But more often the juveniles, called "status offenders" by the Tidewater Division of Youth Services, stay at the Tidewater Detention Home with other youths who have committed more serious offenses, such as burglary or assault.

So now the search is on for a Virginia Beach group home, a facility staffed by professionals where juveniles with no other place to stay could live until they are placed in a permanent home or returned to their parents.

Joan Treacy, a research specialist with the Division of Youth Services, is working with the city and the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs in an effort to find a home or apartment building which could be converted into a group home.

In an interview with The Sun, she explained that the funds are available. The only problem is finding the right facility in the right location.

The agency is looking for a house with four or five bedrooms and two full baths. Mrs. Treacy said an apartment house with three or four units would be especially desirable.

The group home, which would have room for 10 or 12 youngsters, should be located in a relatively stable residential community, she said, and it should be close enough to permit community involvement.

The facility would be purchased or leased using a combination of federal and state money, Mrs. Treacy reported.

Mrs. Treacy will outline the problem at a meeting of the Cape Henry Woman's Club at 12 noon Oct. 10 at Ocean Heath Restaurant, 57th Street and Atlantic Avenue with Bob Dunsmore, the financial administrator of the regional group home system.

It is one of a series of appearances the juvenile division of youth services has scheduled throughout Virginia Beach to talk about the need to expand youth facilities here and to drum up support for an extensive volunteer program the agency is launching this year.

Mrs. Treacy said that more than half of the youngsters in the Tidewater Detention Home in Chesapeake, which serves Virginia Beach, are guilty only of running away from home or truancy from school. Sometimes the youngsters are placed into the hands of the court by parents, who say they are unable to control them.

"If they (juveniles) were adults," Mrs. Treacy said, "they would be free because they have not committed a crime. The children are in the system," she explained, "because there is no other place for them to go."

A group home would give the Division of Youth Services an alternative to the detention home. That way, Mrs. Treacy said, youngsters who temporarily need shelter wouldn't come in contact with kids that commit more serious offenses.

As a result, she added, "he learns lot, and he learns things he doesn't need to know. Do they (status offenders) belong with kids that have committed murder or stolen?"

Virginia Beach has a "tremendous need" for foster homes on an emergency basis for short stays and also for longer placements, Mrs. Treacy said.

There are many areas of the community that could be tapped, she added. "Even a church group could provide homes," she suggested, so if a parent felt a child was ready to do "something drastic," he could find a home for the child for a few days until the problems could be settled.

"Years ago," Mrs. Treacy said, "children could visit grandmothers, aunts and uncles, and things kind of ironed themselves out." Today, with a highly mobile population, she added, relatives frequently are not available to help.

Mrs. Treacy hopes to get civic organizations in the area interested in youth problems. If providing foster homes are out of reach for some Beach residents, she hopes individuals will be able to help by volunteering.

Mrs. Treacy said she has been planning the program for one year. It will coordinate the efforts of youth volunteers throughout the Tidewater area.

She explained that volunteering to help juveniles is not new, but efforts were scattered and unorganized.

"We need someone to work on a one-to-one basis with the child," the research specialist said. "There are so many things people can do. We really had a wide scope."

She said some of the youngsters at the detention home don't even have visitors, so volunteers can befriend juveniles who have no one else.

The Division of Youth Services is also looking for tutors, study helpers and also to teach juveniles how to apply for jobs.

The agency also needs help to improve the exterior of detention facilities and to provide transportation for children when it is needed.

Volunteers are also needed to plan parties and trips for the youngsters and also to teach juveniles how to apply for jobs.

Window watching

On the inside looking out, windows frame two Virginia Beach residents at work. Linda Arrighi (above) puts the second story window to her apartment on Club House Road to good use by shaking out a tablecloth, but for David Edmonds, hot-line coordinator for the Drug Outreach Center, a window means more work as he adds a coat of paint to a weathered pane.

Late for classes? War's her excuse

By SHELLY HYATT
Virginia Wesleyan College

One Virginia Wesleyan College freshman was late to school this fall because of a war.

A war between Turkey and Greece may not be an excuse that every college professor would accept, but, for Tahire Carli, the reason is legitimate. Miss Carli is a native of Turkey.

"When the war started," she explains, "everything in my country stopped, including transportation. Then the war was over, for a little while at least, and we received word that I could leave."

So, Miss Carli boarded a plane for the 13-hour flight to America.

"I was scared," she confesses now. "It was two weeks late for classes and I didn't know if I would be able to keep up."

Miss Carli arrived in this country with more fear than suitcases and wanted to make her first day her last. Douglas McIntyre, Virginia Wesleyan registrar, helped change her mind.

"I was very alone here and I wanted to go back to my country," she recalls. "But Mr. McIntyre told me that I should at least stay for one week. Then, if I still didn't like it here, I could leave. I would just be a visitor."

Now, after a week or so of classes, Miss Carli is more than a visitor. She tried it--and liked it--and now she plans to stay for the rest of the school year and "maybe longer," she says with a smile.

Virginia Wesleyan is not Miss Carli's first venture in America. Two years ago, the Carli family of five welcomed an American exchange student who invited Miss Carli to return with her to Philadelphia. There she attended one year of high school and returned to her home in Turkey before coming to Virginia Wesleyan this year.

"I spoke little English before I went to Pennsylvania," she recalls. "High school kids in Turkey learn English in class, but they do not speak it too much outside of school. It is not like here where you can use a language after you learn it in class." At Virginia Wesleyan, Miss Carli plans to major in languages.

Everything is still in a whirl for the young coed and she says it is hard to decide what she likes best about being here. Her love of American cheese, however, is a strong contender.

"We have cheese in Turkey," she says, "but not like the cheese here. I like the kind you can put on a sandwich."

Her favorite American dessert?

"Cheese pie," she laughs.

Ice cream rates a close second and she was surprised when she made her first visit to a local ice cream shop featuring 31 flavors. "There were so many flavors to choose from," she says, wide-eyed. But when it comes right down to it, good old dependable chocolate is still her favorite.

In the field of entertainment, American rock concerts and good movies score high with Miss Carli.

"I have seen many American movies in Turkey," she says. In fact, she is probably the only person on the Virginia Wesleyan

"ASK HIC BIRZAMON PIJMANLLK DUYUMAKTIR."

But it is not the American cheese or the ice cream or the rock concerts or hearing Ali McGraw speak in English that has made Miss Carli want to stay here. She stays because she likes the American people.

"When I walk down the hall here, people who do not know me smile at me and that makes me feel good. The American people have very good personalities," she says.

Miss Carli's stay at Virginia Wesleyan College is a learning experience--a dual lesson in classroom and culture. She is getting used to wearing faded jeans instead of the uniform she wore to her classes in Turkey and she is learning to speak and understand English better than any of her friends at home--and she owes it all to the brittle peace between Turkey and Greece that made her only two weeks late to class.

Theatre rehearses for opening play

Virginia Opalio and Henry Highton rehearse a scene from "Boys From Syracuse," a Virginia Beach Little Theater musical which will open the season Oct. 11.

Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. Oct. 11 and 12, and 3 p.m. Oct. 13 at the theatre, 24th Street and Barborton Drive. Reservations can be made by calling 428-9523. Tickets will be $3.75 for adults, $2 for students at the door. Season tickets are also available.

Friends of Music schedule concerts

A Cuban-American pianist will open this year's Virginia Beach Friends of Music Concert Series Oct. 18.

Horacio Gutierrez, who made his debut at Carnegie Hall last year, will perform at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 18 at the Lake Taylor High School auditorium, 1384 Kempville Road, Norfolk.

Tickets, which may be purchased at the door, are $4 for adults and $2 for students. Tickets for the complete series, featuring four artists, are $12 for adults and $6 for students.

The Friends of Music also will provide roundtrip bus service for residents for $5 per person for the season. Bus space must be reserved when the tickets are ordered.

Buses will leave the First Presbyterian Church parking lot at 36th Street and Pacific Avenue 45 minutes before each performance.

In addition to Gutierrez, who won the Silver Medal at the 1970 Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, the series includes appearances by violinist Hinchas Zukerman, at 3 p.m. Nov. 17; pianist Grigory Sokolov at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 31, and cellist Yo-Yo Ma at 8:30 p.m. March 21.

Tickets may be purchased from the Virginia Beach Friends of Music, P.O. Box 963, Virginia Beach, 23451. All performances will be held at Lake Taylor High School in Norfolk.

Pollution class to study stacks

Beach residents concerned about air pollution can get a crash course on reading smoke signals from industrial smokestacks at the Virginia Air Pollution Control Board smoke school Oct. 29-31.

The course, open to citizens, industry representatives and the air pollution agency staff members, will provide instruction on plume reading.

Qualified smoke readers can tell how much a stack is emitting, an air pollution board spokesman said, in relation to the capacity of the smokestack.

Stacks are permitted to smoke up to 20 per cent capacity, the spokesman said, and any emissions higher than that could be violations of air pollution regulations.

Qualified citizens will then be able to notify the air pollution board when they observe air pollution violations.

The fee for the three-day school is $10, and interested persons should enroll before Oct. 25. Applications can be sent to the Air Pollution Control Board, Hampton Roads Regional Office, Pembroke I, Suite 610, Virginia Beach. Checks should be payable to Continuing Education Center of VPI and SU.

Classes will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Oct. 29 and 30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 30 and 31 at the Virginia Truck and Ornamental Research Station, 1444 Diamond Springs Road, Virginia Beach.

MOST FIREPLACE HEAT ESCAPES UP CHIMNEY

Over 80% of all fireplace heat finds its way up the chimney. A new hot air furnace fits into the fireplace, features convectors, valves and a small blower to channel heat into the room. Burns 40% less firewood and reduces heating costs.

It takes about five minutes to warm the chambers with only a small fire required thereafter to maintain a constant heat flow. Unobtrusive, it will not diminish the beauty of the fireplace and requires no installation.

"WE'RE ON THE ENERGY TEAM!"

"My manufacturing plant is converting from oil to coal for power."

In many communities, where it can be done without creating environmental problems, industries are converting their power sources to conserve vital energy supplies. They realize that more coal will have to be used until we can increase our domestic supplies of oil and natural gas to meet America's growing energy needs.

"I'm designing deep-water ports and facilities for larger oil tankers."

As long as we must transport larger quantities of crude oil by sea—and even some refined products—we have to develop the ports and facilities to handle super-tankers. They can carry more oil than two or three smaller tankers. This means increased supplies, lower costs, improved environmental safety, and better service.

Solving the energy problem is a big job. Let's work on it together.

Singer turns minister

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — There's no business like God's business so far as Chuck Murphy is concerned.

There was a time when he thought show business was without compare. That was during the years he played the piano and sang in nightclubs, for recordings and on radio and television.

Then, at 35, married and the father of five children and with only a high school education, he decided to stick it all to become a minister.

That meant going to both college and seminary, studying harder than many have to and supporting a family at the same time.

He managed to get through college in three years by attending classes winter and summer, and then at 38 entered seminary.

There, Murphy found among his classmates men ranging from 24 to 32 years of age. They included others who had changed careers in mid-life — a lawyer, a bellhop, a shoe polish manufacturer and an Army officer.

Murphy, now pastor of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in Nashville, maintains a busy schedule of speaking, evangelical preaching and conducting "teaching missions" for interdenominational groups.

He hasn't regretted a minute of his 11 years in the ministry despite the fact that he works a lot harder than ever, and makes considerably less money than he once did.

"I believe I'm leading an abundant life now," he recently told a Nashville music industry prayer group at a dinner meeting.

Church plans choral clinic

Choral clinics for those who want to learn more about their singing voice and how to use it in a choir will be at the Foundry United Methodist Church in Virginia Beach Oct. 15 and 16.

The clinic will be directed by Dr. James Lassiter, head of the voice department at Shenandoah Conservatory of Music, and David Stutenburger, director of choral music at Shenandoah.

A limited number of applications will be accepted for the clinics which are from 7 to 8 p.m. each day. There is a $2 fee.

For information, call 340-5367 or 622-7507.

For Murphy, the move from entertainment to the pulpit was not as radical as some might expect.

"It was just as good a Christian in the nightclub as I am in the pulpit," he said. "It was a kind of witnessing, my being in nightclubs and everyone knowing I was religious. I represent Jesus Christ wherever I go, whether in the pulpit, in nightclubs or on the dance floor."

As a clergyman, Murphy considers himself "coach and cheerleader." He is convinced that the real ministry of the church is performed by the lay people in it, with the pastor merely guiding the way.

"Christianity is like 'show and tell' in the first grade," he explained. "You have to tell people and show them how to witness."

JAIL PROGRAM

Virginia Beach Sheriff S.J. "Joe" Smith will discuss the proposed new jail at St. Nicholas Church, 544 Little Neck Road, Virginia Beach, Oct. 24 at 8 p.m.

Other participants will include Robert P. Mason, director of institutional services, and the Most Rev. Walter Sullivan, bishop of the Richmond Diocese. The discussion is sponsored by the church's Social Development Committee.

Beach looks at tighter laws for farmettes

In an effort to wipe out development problems with farmettes, Virginia Beach planners are working on a proposal that would treat the five-acre residential tracts similar to subdivisions.

City Planner Bob Scott explained that tighter restrictions on the development of farmettes would help end drainage and septic tank engineering problems that make some Virginia Beach properties sold as farmettes undevelopable.

There have been cases when persons purchased farmette sites and lost their investment because, in the end, they were unable to build.

"The way our subdivision ordinance is written," Scott observed, "you don't get subdivision control. We don't have the opportunity to go in and find out if the drainage is adequate, if the septic tank system will percolate or not or if the street system is adequate."

The planner said the proposal to give the city the authority to examine a site before it is labeled as a farmette should not be considered an obstruction to the development of the rural residential plots.

"We look at it as a professional service," Scott said.

What type of improvements would be required, he reported, would depend largely on the farmette's location and the type of improvements already in the area.

In a rural area such as Blackwater, for example, a farmette owner probably would not have to install curbs and gutters, but the situation might be different in Thalia, which is already more developed.

And, Scott added, development problems generally occur in the lower part of the city where the soil is sandy. "Many people have ended up buying a piece of land," he noted, "that they really couldn't use." Meanwhile, planners are almost ready to present their ideas on farmette regulation to the City Council.

Scott reported that there would be one difference between subdivisions and farmettes.

Approval of subdivisions is often a long drawn-out process, but the Planning Department hopes to process the farmette applications as quickly as possible. Scott explained, "We don't want to tie these people up into a long review."

Although land prices are higher than they were when some Virginia Beach residents first decided to live on farmettes instead of traditional subdivisions, it is a housing alternative planners think some people will continue to use.

"It's very appealing to some people to live in a rural atmosphere," Scott said, but still be within a convenient distance to the city. "It's a good concept," the planner added. "We're all in favor of it."

This place is for the birds

In 18 years this will be a park, but right now Sanitary Landfill #2 is only a place for gulls and garbage. The project, similar in concept to Mount Trashmore, is off Centerville Turnpike.

Enrollment climb a puzzle

Enrollment increases in Virginia Beach kindergarten and first grade classes climbed sharply this fall, but school officials aren't sure what to make of it.

There were 459 more kindergarteners enrolled in Beach schools this fall, while first grade classes jumped by 405 students.

The two grades make up half of the total increase of 1,741 students for the schools' 13 grades, according to enrollment figures released this week.

With birth control methods putting the lid on primary grade growth in other areas of the country, Virginia Beach school administrators don't know how to interpret the latest enrollment statistics.

"In Virginia Beach," explained school Public Information Officer John Holgate, "it's hard to set any trend in student growth by grade. The city doesn't ascribe to national trends. The population is not stable."

Holgate said the mobility of the city population was clearly demonstrated this year when the school system discovered a 25 per cent turnover among families in the 45-15 year-round school program underway at four elementary schools.

"We have a very transient population. The Navy is a strong influence," he said, adding that 40 per cent of the children come from military families.

Another factor is the Holgate reported that many persons are moving here from other Tidewater communities.

The Virginia Beach school system now totals 53,770 students, making it the largest city school district in Virginia.

Youngsters enrolled in kindergarten through seventh grade make up 32,789 of the total, while 20,981 are in junior and senior high schools.

The number of students increased in all grades except for the ninth grade, which lost approximately 25 students. Next to the increases in kindergarten and first

Schools vacillate on 45-15

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Although the Virginia Beach year-round schools pilot program has received "less than a mandate" from parents, Dr. James Mounie, assistant superintendent of research and planning, said the administration staff is not ready to recommend scrapping the program.

Mounie explained that other factors enter the 45-15 equation, including the program's impact on the quality of education in Virginia Beach, which he said would be the School Board's "uppermost" concern.

The School Board will also examine the cost of the program, compared to the cost of building new schools. Mounie said a consultant examining the costs of year-round schools has completed the study and it is "in the mail. We don't really know what it says."

But the administrative staff has completed an evaluation of a survey of parents' attitudes concerning the 45-15 program.

Reactions of parents were mixed regarding the 45-15 program in which youngsters attend class for nine weeks with a three-week vacation instead of the traditional nine-month school year and a three-month vacation.

Year-round education ultimately enables schools to serve more youngsters because classrooms are in use 12 months a year. School officials estimate that the 45-15 program expands the capacity of each school building by 25 per cent.

The School Board, which initiated the program in the fall of 1972 in four elementary schools, is looking at the year-round system as a possible way of relieving overcrowding in classrooms without taking additional bond issues to the voters.

Next month the board must decide whether to end the program, continue it on a pilot basis or expand it to other schools.

One of the critical factors of the year-round education is its acceptance by families who may have to adjust schedules and vacations. To accommodate the break away from the nine-month school year and its summer vacation.

"We have found some shortcomings," Mounie reported, "and we have found some possible strengths," but he added that the staff will not be ready to make a recommendation until it examines all the pro and con evidence on the pilot program.

"We've found problems we hadn't anticipated in year-round schools," he admitted, such as the frequency that families move in and out of the areas where the 45-15 program is in progress.

The administrative staff has assembled the results of an attitude survey of 1,962 parents whose children are enrolled in the pilot program which make up 97 per cent of the families with youngsters in year-round schools.

Aslinn majority -- 50.2 per cent felt the pilot program should be continued at Holland, Plaza, Windsor Woods and Windsor Oaks Elementary Schools,

Blue law referendum tips merchants' barometers

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

The usually bustling commercial areas of Virginia Beach throttle down to a snail's pace on Sundays, but that could all change if voters decide to scrap the Sunday closing law, commonly called the blue law, when they go to the polls Nov. 5.

Merchants and legislators contacted by The Sun seem to think that a slower tempo one day a week is good for the community and for business, but the decision will be left up to Virginia Beach voters.

"The blue law has nothing to do with religion. It is a valid exercise of police power having to do with health and welfare of the citizens. It just happens to coincide with the day most people consider the Sabbath."

Series

This is the second article of a three-part series in which Sun Staff Writer Mary Roda examines the issues to be decided in the Nov. 5 election. The second part focuses on the move to abandon the Sunday closing law in Virginia Beach.

The blue law prohibits sales of certain items on Sunday, and the list of what can and can't be sold on Virginia's official day of rest "runs more than a page" in the Virginia Code, according to Virginia Beach Commonwealth Atty. Andre Evans.

Bars stay open, while hardware stores close. Drug stores and grocery stores ring up sales, but department stores, which often sell the same products, lock up on Sundays.

Entertainment is exempted from the law, unless a person wants to purchase a record or tape recording. A tourist can buy film or food on a Sunday, but clothing and jewelry is out.

In most cases, a determined shopper can purchase almost anything he wants if he can find a grocery store or drug store that carries it. If not, he can travel to Chesapeake or Norfolk and look there, where the blue law is not as strictly enforced as it is in Virginia Beach.

It is Evans' job to prosecute violations of the Sunday closing law in Virginia Beach, which is enforced on a complaint basis.

Evans also said he would prosecute stores covered in the blue law if he noticed that they were open on Sundays, but he admitted, "I haven't been around looking."

In fact, last year the W.T. Grant store in the Hilltop Shopping Center "sued me one time for enforcing the law," Evans reported.

Grant's manager Gordon Angles said the store opened one Sunday to test the law. "We felt the law was being unequally enforced," he explained. "We only opened to try to bring light on the issue."

Uneven enforcement of the law has always been a problem, because some stores which are permitted to open their doors on Sundays sell items such as clothing and jewelry, similar to the large

If the blue law is repealed 'we'll have a city where business is conducted as usual on Sundays. I don't think it's good for the quality of life of the city.'

COMMENT

2 - The Sun, Oct. 16 - 22, 1974

An editorial:

Public business in public

The Virginia Beach City Council held two closed meetings Oct. 13 -- or at least one extraordinary session broken into two parts and interrupted by the regular public meeting in Council chambers.

The executive sessions, closed to the public and the press, were to discuss what the agenda listed as a "legal" matter. Part one lasted 48 minutes. After reconvening, council met privately for an additional 22 minutes.

Some efforts by individuals have been directed at ending such sessions, but the impact, if any, has been minimal. Well-intentioned councilmen argue that several subjects, such as financial or legal matters, require discussion in private so as not to adversely affect the public's interest.

One thing, however, is certain -- the public needs to be aware when such sessions are held.

When the Michigan House of Representative debated a proposed open meetings -- something Virginia already has included in its Freedom of Information Act -- the Birmingham, Mich. Observer and Eccentric editorialized against restrictions on the access of the public to meetings. One of the nation's leading suburban newspapers, The Observer and Eccentric wrote editorially:

"Newspapers are not the great gainers when public bodies are required to open all meetings to public access. Although historically, newspapers have been thought of as the most vocal supporters of free access to information.

"The winners in the continual battle for free access to information and open public meetings are individual members of the public, the citizens themselves.

"The best possible bar to secret meetings or 'executive sessions' is the strength, character and honesty of those persons elected to serve as lawmakers.

"Throughout the last two centuries one single guideline has been restated by the great leaders of our communities and our country: The public's business must be done in public view.

"When individual residents of a community support and demand all meetings to be open to public scrutiny, those meetings will, in fact, be open. When residents do not maintain a careful vigilance, the public's business is generally carried out in a smoke-filled room in private.

"We see it as our responsibility to inform you, as members of the community, when your lawmakers are holding secret meetings or 'executive sessions.' It is your responsibility to demand that no such meetings are tolerated."

Council sets hearing

A public hearing on a proposed recreational facilities authority for Virginia Beach has been set for Nov. 4 at 2 p.m. in City Council chambers. The seven-member authority, if established, would be led by automobile dealer James Hayden, chairman, and insurance executive Fletcher Bryant, vice-chairman. Council unanimously voted Oct. 14 its intent to establish the authority which would "acquire, construct, maintain and operate" recreational facilities throughout the city. Also, the authority could sell bonds to help private interests construct facilities such as golf courses and ice skating rinks.

Bayfront study ready

Shore Drive may have to be widened to accommodate traffic generated by condominiums springing up along Virginia Beach's bayfront during the next decade, according to a city Planning Department bayfront study.

In the study, planners noted the trend toward condominium development on property zoned for resort commercial use on the Chesapeake Bay, and they said they believe the pattern will continue.

The study suggests Shore Drive be widened to six lanes, and recommends that Ocean Shore and Page Avenues between the bay and Shore Drive become four lane thoroughfares.

2-for-1 swap offered

In an effort to avoid the construction of 600 Navy housing units at Ft. Story, a Virginia Beach City Council committee is offering the Defense Department property near Green Run for double recreational acreage along the Army base's bayfront and oceanfront.

City officials expect the negotiations with the Department of Defense to continue through next year before a settlement is finally reached.

Virginia Beach hopes to swap 82 acres zoned for apartment development for 160 acres at Ft. Story, including the base Officers Club and 3,600 feet of beach.

Bids due on dam

Three contractors are expected to submit bids on the reconstruction of Lake Trant by 5 p.m. Oct. 16, according to Virginia Beach Asst. City Manager George Hanbury.

After news stories appeared last week saying the city was considering undertaking the project on its own since no formal bids were submitted, Hanbury received inquiries from six firms. Three indicated bids would be submitted.

The dam on the 28-acre lake broke last June, emptying the contents of the lake into Lynnhaven Bay.

City Council agreed to wait until Oct. 21 before deciding what to do about reconstruction of the dam.

Beach couple killed

A Virginia Beach couple died in a three-car pile-up near Culpeper Oct. 13.

Marvin Mullenix, 56, and his wife, Eva, 55, traveling north on Route 29, were killed when a southbound car swerved into their lane and hit them head-on.

The Mullenix vehicle was thrown into the air and landed on the roof of a third car behind it. Drivers of the other cars were listed in satisfactory condition at Culpeper Memorial Hospital.

Mullenix was employed at the Center for Naval Analysis, and Mrs. Mullenix worked as a substitute teacher. They are survived by two daughters in Charlottesville and a son in Silver Spring, Md.

chain department stores, even though the products are contraband under the blue law.

And because the law is enforced on a complaint basis, it is possible for some stores to violate the law until employees or competitors bring it to the attention of the commonwealth attorney.

Virginia first drew up the blue law in 1779, and since then forms of the Sunday closing law have enjoyed a place in the Virginia Code.

As amendments to the law were tacked on to allow sale of some items but not others, the blue law developed into a lengthy tome which often seems contradictory and confusing.

For example, a shopper can buy film, a beer or a fishing pole on Sunday, but he might have trouble purchasing disposable diapers.

The law met heavy criticism at the state level, and the Virginia legislature decided to turn the matter over to each locality so communities could choose whether to repeal or retain the 200-year-old law.

A statewide survey conducted by Sen. Adelard Brault (D-Fairfax) during the summer indicated that 60 per cent of Virginia voters, including Tidewater residents, favor repeal of the Sunday closing law. Evans is content to let Virginia Beach residents settle the issue at the polls.

"I think the course being pursued now is the proper one," the commonwealth attorney said. "There's a lot of feeling both ways."

The public is most affected by the law, Evans noted, so it should decide. Some people will have to work on Sundays if the law is repealed, but others want the convenience of Sunday shopping. The attorney added, "There are two very distinct schools of thought."

However, Evans said that anyone whose religious convictions were against working on Sunday would not be forced to work. Those rights are protected under the U.S. Constitution.

Although the blue law probably originated because Sunday was the Sabbath for most people, Evans said the existing blue law "has nothing to do with religion. It is a valid exercise of inherent police power having to do with the health and welfare of the citizens."

The state has decided that a day of rest is needed, the attorney explained, "and that happens to coincide with the day most people consider the Sabbath."

Virginia Beach delegate Glenn McClanahan agreed with Evans' assessment of the blue law. Almost every state political state in history has mandated a common day of rest, he said.

McClanahan said he hopes voters decide to keep the law. "I'm not in favor of businesses opening in Virginia Beach to a greater degree than they are now," he explained. Otherwise, "we'll have a city where business is conducted as usual on Sundays. I don't think it's good for the quality of life in a city."

McClanahan said he favors separation of church and state, "but I do think that with things as they are (with the blue law), we have greater church participation. The laws should not discourage church participation."

The legislator conceded that the blue law is "difficult to enforce and it's impossible to write one equal for everybody," but he believes that Beach residents should give the recently revised Sunday closing law a try.

The latest version of the law eliminates a clause which allowed businesses to stay open if they contributed a certain portion of their profits to charity.

If the law is repealed, McClanahan said major chains would end up opening on Sundays whether they wanted to or not because competition would demand it. His feelings were echoed by several Virginia Beach merchants.

Hilltop Grant store manager Gordon Angles said his store would do "whatever competition dictated." William Genz, promotion manager at Sears in the Pembroke Mall, said he hopes the blue law stays on the books.

"I feel like six days are enough to shop," he remarked. "Families should have a day to get together, and religion has nothing to do with it." Genz said he did not know if Sears would stay open on Sundays if the law is repealed. He added, "We'll have to cross that bridge when we come to it."

Richard Welton III, owner of the Smith and Welton Department Stores, including the one in the Hilltop West Shopping Center in Virginia Beach, wants the blue law to stay as it is.

"I don't want my employees to work on Sunday," he said, "and I don't want to work on Sunday."

Smith and Welton want to be "the last store to open on Sundays" if the law is repealed, Welton asserted, but he didn't rule the possibility out. It would happen "only when I'm forced into it," he added, by competitors who open on Sundays.

"Even if the law is repealed, Welton said, "we won't be open on any Sunday this year." And despite his objection to Sunday business, he admitted, "I'm afraid it might be coming."

The department store owner pointed out another problem for chain stores with outlets in several cities. Welton owns stores in Chesapeake, Norfolk and Portsmouth, and he is concerned that some cities may retain the blue law, while others scrap it.

"It could be an awful mess," Welton said. "Whatever happens," he added, "I hope they all go the same way."

First grade reading tests below par

Test scores released this week for Virginia Beach students from grades 1 to 7 during the 1973-74 school year indicate that the youngsters exceeded the national average in nearly every category.

One exception stands out. The score for last year's first grade reading test indicates that the students ranked well below the national average.

"We don't know how to analyze that," admitted Rex Fox, Virginia Beach school testing coordinator. He suggested that one factor might be that last year's first graders did not have the benefit of a kindergarten program, while children in other areas of the country did.

However, he admitted that the scores were even lower than those of first graders tested during the 1972-73 school year. Most of those first grade students did not attend kindergarten either.

But Fox is optimistic that the scores will improve this year, since the present first grade classes did have kindergarten instruction.

As for the rest of the scores, the testing coordinator said, reported that the overall results were good.

"They indicate generally that we're on a comparison basis with the national average," Fox explained. "We can see where our children as a group stand."

Virginia Beach students rank slightly higher than the national average.

The test scores released last year's scores, for the fourth and sixth grades which scores more advanced students. As a result, Virginia Beach made a poor showing.

Fox explained that the classes had been tested in the fall, and their scores were compared with students in other areas of the country tested during the spring. He added, "It made the scores come in lower."

NCAAP to kick off Beach convention

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will hold its 39th state convention in Virginia Beach Oct. 25 to 27 under the theme, "Unity in the New Arena of Civil Rights."

The three-day session will be held in the New Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel. Gov. Mills E. Godwin

Jr. and Virginia Beach Mayor J. Curtis Payne have proclaimed the last day of the meeting NAACP Freedom Sunday.

The NAACP will open the meeting at noon Oct. 25 with a minister's luncheon. Dr. Milton A. Reid, pastor of New Calvary Baptist Church, will be guest speaker.

The kick-off mass meeting, with Virginia Sen. Douglas Wilder will begin at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25.

The Oct. 26 session will open with a Life Membership Breakfast at 8 a.m., followed by a 12 noon Reuben Lawson Luncheon. Hon. C. DeLores Tucker, Pennsylvania's secretary of state, will be the guest speaker.

The freedom dinner and skit, "Keeping Freedom's Light Burning," is scheduled 6 p.m. Oct. 26.

A final mass meeting, with Mal Goode as of the Black Network Broadcasting as guest speaker, will be held at 2 p.m. Oct. 27.

Beach campus largest

The Virginia Beach campus of the Tidewater Community College (TCC) has topped the enrollments at the college's other two campuses according to figures released this week.

The Beach campus tallied 3,572 of the system's 7,826 students to make it the largest of the TCC's campuses.

The Frederick campus ran a close second with 3,365 students, while the Chesapeake campus drew 789 students.

Enrollments at all three campuses surpassed TCC expectations, according to George Pass, college president, who said TCC had anticipated a 14 per cent jump in registration.

Hotel future uncertain

The old Cavalier Hotel, which is now vacant, will not be razed if the owners can find a tenant for the building, according to Thomas Broyles, president of Cavalier Associates.

Broyles told The Sun that three tenants are considering renting the hotel, which closed one year ago, "and hopefully by the end of the year we'll have a tenant."

But if no one rents the old hotel, a Virginia Beach landmark, Broyles said, "there's a strong possibility it would be removed."

Chamber sets 'town meeting'

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, will present a "town meeting" to discuss the area transportation situation Monday Oct. 29 at 8 p.m.

In the meeting room of the Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association 914 Independence Boulevard. Participating in the program will be James Echols, executive director of the Tidewater Transportation District Commission.

Virginia Beach Borough City Councilman Robert Callis, chairman of the Tidewater Transportation District Commission and George Timmes, assistant to the city manager.

the schools which are in their second year of year-round education.

Half of the pilot program parents thought year-round schools, while 21.4 per cent were undecided. The remaining 28.5 per cent were against continuation of the 45-15 program.

The school staff report concludes, "There does so seem to be more parental support for continuation of the program than for discontinuation, but the support is by no means a mandate."

Parents who expressed positive feelings about the 45-15 program indicated that their children liked school better, and they also believed that the shorter vacations helped the students retain what they had learned in class.

On the other hand, parents who described themselves as negative toward the program one third of parents in the four year-round schools and two comparison schools not on the program -- held differing views.

They reported that the year-round school program disrupted family routines and agreed that the pilot 45-15 system created "unacceptable hardships" for working mothers, who make up 36.6 per cent of the mothers with children in the pilot program.

Parents who opposed year-round schools also said the program significantly increased costs for baby-sitting, clothing and food.

Both parents who liked and disliked the year-round indicated that dress codes should be relaxed so families would not have to purchase good school wardrobes for summer as well as the other seasons of the year.

The school report also noted that "one of the most frequently mentioned negative features (in year-round schools) was the multi-age classroom and the 'overcrowdedness" this implied to some parents. Indeed a few parents suggested that they had been betrayed. They suggested that the pilot program was theoretically designed to relieve overcrowding -- but that had not been the result."

Of the parents involved in the pilot program, 46.6 per cent had children in junior and senior high schools which are on the regular school calendar, which means that children were on vacation at different times of the year.

Even parents who favored year-round schools indicated by a 54.8 per cent majority that the program caused some disruptions in the family routine. However, 93.2 per cent of the parents with negative feelings toward year-round schools said they disrupted family activities.

The staff report agreed that year-round school "necessarily interrupts the routines of many families. For some parents these interruptions border on the intolerable."

And the report stated that for parents already involved in the pilot program any decision to continue or to end year-round schools will be controversial.

However, the report concludes that "if the effect on parent attitudes is taken as a criterion, the Virginia Beach effort to implement year-round school must be judged a success. To expect that a program that so clearly interrupts community patterns and family customs would be enthusiastically embraced by an overwhelming majority of parents is unrealistic."

If year round schools are continued, the report suggests that the School Board examine coordination of youth activities of community agencies such as summer recreation programs, look at child care services for working mothers and reconsider requirements for a uniform dress code in year-round schools.

Cox's Goffigan kept his pride

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

They gave Larry Goffigan the game ball Friday night.

Cox had just won its first game of the season, a stunning 7-0 upset of First Colonial. They won it on running, blocking and tackling. "There was just nothing we didn't do well," said head coach Al Habit.

He did not forget to mention Larry Goffigan. "Larry played his heart out," said Habit. "Goffigan and Mike Cuffee did some fantastic running, and we controlled the ball game. I wish I could mention everyone, I'm proud of every one of them."

It was a supreme moment in Larry Goffigan's football career at Cox. Last year, as a sophomore at First Colonial, he made the Sun Coaches All-City second team at split end. Then came school re-districting, and this fall saw Larry headed two miles up the road to Cox High School. He didn't like the road to Cox High School. He didn't want to go, but now he's glad he did.

"My girlfriend kept saying, 'Don't go to Cox, don't go to Cox, and I didn't want to go. But I like it. I really do. Coach Habit's a good man, he'll do things for you.' Larry, like all the members of the Cox league, and we're pretty good friends. If we had lost, I don't know. But they said we were going to be lucky to win one game this year. Pete (a defensive end) told me, 'I'm going to kill you Friday.' He was joking at first. Later Bill wished me good luck. But then he laughed."

Bobby Stubbs, a Falcon defensive guard, said Goffigan had told him he would score three touchdowns

"Pete (Harris) told me, 'I'm going to kill you Friday.'" against the Patriots. Goffigan laughed. "My dream didn't come true there, but we only needed one."

Mike Cuffee sprinted 19 yards for the game's only score late in the third quarter, and the Cox defense stymied First Colonial for the remainder of the contest. Goffigan came out repeatedly limping and in pain from muscle cramps in his side, but he played most of the game both ways, and when on the sidelines he kept up a constant roar of encouragement to his fellow players.

When the final gun sounded, it was like Times Square on the Falcon home field. The sparse crowd surged around the team, following them to the locker room, and the noise in there beat on the ear drums like jackhammers.

Coach Armstrong was pounding a Cox player's shoulders. "I knew we could it, Buddy," he shouted deliriously. "I knew it. You got to believe, man."

Larry Goffigan capered around, too, but didn't shout. He was too hoarse from yelling during the game. Later all he could say was, "I feel good, I can tell you that. Our line really opened the holes, really blew 'em out. It's great."

The game had been 48 minutes of spectacular effort by the Cox squad, but no one had wanted to win more than Larry Goffigan. It came down to a question of pride for an 0-4 team that knew it was better, and for one young man out to prove his continued worth at a new school, set against old friends. "They (First Colonial) didn't want me," Goffigan said wistfully, "but the way they played that night they could have used me."

The Falcon coaching staff gave Larry the game ball, covered with the signatures of the players and coaches and inscribed with the score. He gave it to his girl-friend, he said, but this week he was "going to take it to school and get everyone to sign it." As though everyone in the school had had a hand in the victory.

Larry Goffigan seems to think so.

First Colonial. Goffigan later re-entered the contest and the Falcons upset First Colonial, 7-0

Keys to Victory

Princess Anne at Kellam

With no undefeated teams left in the Eastern District, the title race will turn into a dogfight for possession of first place, and there is no better description for this match-up. The Knights, led by Coach John Cooke, host cross-city rival Princess Anne, and it's a must game for both teams. Gahan's squad prides itself on its ball control, and that is a tall order when it means consistently moving on the biggest defensive line in the city. The Cavaliers will have to stop last year's All-City back Gene Bunn and Jim Ferebee's bull-headed running. Both teams have more than adequate pass defenses, so look for a low-scoring running game.

Maury at Bayside

The Marlins have played six games this season, and they still have yet to meet four of the toughest teams in the district: Maury, Lake Taylor, Norview and Princess Anne. It will be a hard home-stretch series on the young Marine, who have shown little propensity to score, and possesses a defense that is progressively yielding more points as the season wears on. In the Commodores, they face a team with an awesome backfield led by Lee Fleisher and 220-pound fullback Vincent Smith and a defense that has stopped offensive machines like Princess Anne. It will be a long night for Bayside, another of many this season for head coach Terry Morton.

Kempsville at Cox

The hapless Falcons still sport the most tenacious defense in the district: they are big and hit hard. Kempsville's mainstays on offense, Mike Crabtree and Bobby Harrison will not penetrate inside and if they can't turn the corner on the Cox defense, they will have to go to the air. If the Chiefs can chalk up one or two scores, it will be enough the Falcons haven't generated enough offense this season to fill a thimble.

First Colonial at Booker T. Washington

Everyone was saying the Patriots were out of it with two early district losses, but now there are no unbeaten teams around, and the way the leaders have been knocking each other off, an 8-2 district champion is a distinct possibility. Alas, for the Bookers will do no knocking off this season. To beat First Colonial, which they have never done, they will have to stop a crushing ground attack led by Bill Harris one of the district's top rushers and 6-0 190-pound quarterback Tracy Moon, who is a top college prospect because of his size and ability to find his favorite end, Ron Zollcoffer with aerial scoring strikes.

How have injuries affected your team this season

Frank Webster,
First Colonial

"Injuries have definitely affected our team. Starting halfback Jerry Onalizer has been out all year with mono. It's doubtful whether he'll be back. There's a possibility that our other halfback, Ronnie Hudgins, may be out this week. But there's really been nothing that's kept our people out of action all together."

Ed Booth, Kempsville

"We've been very fortunate this year. Bobby Harrison, our fullback, had some leg trouble (recently), but he's all right now. So I'd say we've been pretty lucky because we've really had nothing serious at all."

Ralph Gahan,
Princess Anne

"No. This has been an extremely healthy year for us. We had one starter who missed the Granby and Maury games with a knee injury (Mario Mastrangetti), but the outcome of those games was not affected. These kids are the best conditioned team I've ever had."

Johnny Cooke, Kellam

"We've been real fortunate so far. I think our lack of injuries has had a lot to do with our winning, but mostly because when you're winning you have less number of injuries. That's how it goes. Conditioning is related to injuries. I think this has been proven. So we worked them pretty good during the summer, but we've been lucky, too."

Al Habit, Cox

"Injuries have had a tremendous effect on our team. We've lost a starting guard, Mark Hodges, with a broken arm, and one of our defensive ends, Mike Bordon, with torn knee ligaments. And Steve Zenger was out for our first three games, we just got him back last week. But I think we're going to get better."

Terry Morton, Bayside

"That's right up our alley. We've lost our starting fullback, Frankie Knox, with a blood clot in the leg. And we really miss Tom Kelso, who's been out with mono. The last two games we had four starters out, including our starting fullback Steve Tomlinson. We finally got (defensive tackle) Mark Whitehouse back. These injuries have really hurt us because we can't afford to have anybody out."

"No regrets"

Hicks looks back: coaching was demanding

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

Former Bayside football coach Bob Hicks has no regrets about forsaking the game to which he has devoted 27 years of his life. Hicks is now guidance counselor at Princess Anne High School, and he admits the pace has slackened.

"I really miss the building up toward Friday night," he says. "The excitement of night football. My family--our lives--have been built around Friday nights for so long we miss the emotional aspect."

Hicks played his college football at the University of Florida, and then spent 14 years coaching. In 1965, as head football coach of Oscar Smith High in Chesapeake, he began a four-year program that pulled the Tigers out of comparative athletic obscurity and compiled a 20-19-1 record. In 1969, ville, Hicks says, "I've been taking my eight-year-old son Robbie up the last three years. For his age, he's got a good knowledge of the game." Robbie is a student at Arrowhead Elementary School

"I really miss the buildup toward Friday night...the excitement..."

Hicks took the head coaching job at Bayside, and his first season was a disastrous one. The anemic Marlins went 1-9 that year, but Hicks had faced such challenges before, and the following season Bayside was city champion. In 1973, his last season, with all-everything Roscoe Coles a senior on the Marlin squad, Bayside finished 8-2 just behind a powerful Kellam team coached by Johnny Cooke.

At the end of the '73 season, Hicks resigned as head coach.

"I just wanted to do some other things," says Hicks, "get back into counseling." Hicks received his bachelor's degree in education from Florida, and holds two master's degrees in guidance and counseling, and administration, from Old Dominion University. He is presently working toward a third degree, a Certificate of Advanced Study, at ODU which he hopes to finish by June 1976. But he is not looking toward a Ph.D., or college level counseling or teaching. "I doubt it," he says. "I just have too much wrapped up here in retirement and benefits."

Hicks' job keeps him busy, and he stays peripherally involved with football. "I try to make two or three games a week. Two weeks ago, I saw one high school game Friday afternoon, another that night, and then caught the VMI-Virginia Tech game on Saturday." During the summer, Hicks assists with the Sonny Randle football camp in Charlottesville.

The inevitable question for a man of Hicks' background is, do you miss it?

"No, not really, not as much as I thought I would," the former Bayside mentor says thoughtfully. "They can be the greatest years of a man's life. But you give up an awful lot for the money involved (Virginia Beach head football coaches receive $1,500 above their base teaching salary). It has been different, really. I can spend a lot more time with my family."

"It has been different, really."

Hicks commented that it's a little too early to say whether or not he'll get back into coaching. "I'd have to think about it," says Hicks, asked how he would react to a job offer. And what about college coaching? "People put college coaching on a higher level," he answers, "but what they don't realize is that the only people who make money are the head coaches and the program coordinators. And the longevity factor is not very good; there is no security. High school coaching is much more enjoyable. You don't have the alumni pressure you have in college ball; you rise or fall on your own merits."

"They can be the greatest years of a man's life, but you give up an awful lot..."

John Hicks is content right now to pursue goals of a different nature than scoring points and winning games. But every now and then he feels the tidal pull of his old profession at his lapels.

"The toughest thing is seeing a couple of kids who you coached standing on the sidelines, one graduated in '64, he's maybe an assistant coach now. The other graduated in '70. You just assume they know one another, but of course they don't. It has been different."

For John Hicks, the beginning came with his last game at Bayside.

Rocky Byers, quarterback, Kempville

The 160-pound field general for the once-beaten Chiefs has played in the shadow of Mike Crabtree, one of the area's finest backs. But Byers came into his own Oct. 11 when he paced Kempville by the Maury Commodores, 28-22. Byers ran in for two touchdowns, and passed to end Mark Byrd and back Crabtree for additional scoring strikes of 12 and 52 yards. The Chiefs now share the Eastern District lead with Kellam.

Mike Cuffee, halfback, Cox

The Falcons put it all together last weekend in upsetting the favored Patriots of First Colonial, 7-0, at Cox, and the man who scored the winning touchdown was this 6-0 170-pound standout back on the Falcons' offense. Cuffee burst through the Patriot line with 5:26 remaining in the third quarter, sprinting 19 yards for the score. "It was a power sweep," said Cuffee. "Everybody in front of me knocked someone down."

Butch Butler, quarterback, Bayside

Foreman Field was the place where the Marlins picked up their second win of the season, shutting out Booker T. Washington, 13-0. Marlin Quarterback Butch Butler directed the Bayside attack, tossing a 37-yard pass to back John Jenkins to set up the Marlins' first score and later plunging over from the four yard line late in the game to put the win on ice. Bayside now sports a 2-3-1 record.

Princess Anne golf tourney ends with home team in hole

The annual Virginias-Carolinas team golf tournament ended Oct. 13th with the Virginias going down to defeat for the fourth consecutive year. The Carolinas took the Captain's Putter tournament trophy, 1231/2 to 921/2.

Virginia Beach's Jordan Ball and Richard Tucker were shut out by the Carolinas amateur veterans Dick Horne and Bill Harvey. Ball and Tucker are members of the Princess Anne Country Club which hosted the event in Virginia Beach. It was the first time the Virginias-Carolinas tournament had been played on a tide-water course.

Oct. 13 saw the Virginias best day, winning six of the 12 matches, 36-34.

Parks and Recreation discuss possible 1975 'Neptune Bowl'

An annual Neptune Bowl football game between city high school teams was one of the plans discussed at the monthly meeting of the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission in City Council Chambers Oct. 9. Dr. E. E. Brickell, a member of the commission, proposed studying the plan. The game would be played in conjunction with next year's Neptune Festival.

Commission member Harold Whitehurst reported that the city, which has recently purchased the Bow Creek Golf Course, could begin operation of the course sometime after

Nov. 1. The commission also discussed plans for the official opening of the Mt. Trashmore Park, set for April 1975, and agreed to set aside funds for erection of a plaque at the park entrance. Whitehurst said the possibility of holding 4th of July fireworks displays at Mt. Trashmore was being explored. Whitehurst added the city had received a bid from a New Jersey firm for a "real good show" set at $2000. Dick Murphy of the Parks Department said that more than 100,000 people had visited the city's parks in the last five months.

'Honeymooners' return after 35 years

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

When Fran and Ed Dougherty honeymooned in Virginia Beach 35 years ago, they spent two weeks in an oceanview room complete with meals for $60.

They were back last week celebrating their Oct. 7 anniversary, and Dougherty refused to call it a second honeymoon. "It's our 35th honeymoon he insisted."

Along with the price of a good hotel room, Virginia Beach has changed, but the Washington, D.C., couple took it in stride, and they're full of compliments for the city where they began their life together.

"It's a quaint, beautiful and dignified place," Dougherty said. "It really is."

And Mrs. Dougherty had kind words for motorists who are courteous to visitors who aren't sure which way they're going on the highway.

The couple has traveled widely, including four trips to California where one of their two children live, two visits to Hawaii and an excursion to Tahiti, which Dougherty described as "the most primitive land I've ever seen."

Back in 1944, when the young honeymooners were staying at the Breakers Hotel, now demolished, "you could really walk anywhere you wanted to go," said Mrs. Dougherty, a petite woman with dark hair.

The site of the present Holiday Inn, close to the location of Breakers Hotel, was the end of the developed beach area, with the exception of the Old Cavalier which sat on top of the hill at the end of Atlantic.

Now with the new condominiums and hotels, Mrs. Dougherty noted, "everything's built up."

And with the tall hotels along the oceanfront, her husband said, "it's getting more like New York all the time."

However, he praised the city, which he said has maintained its "small town friendliness" despite its surging growth.

Virginia Beach has "grown up and it has matured," Dougherty observed, and the city has managed to "control it very well." "It's far superior to Ocean City, Md.," he added, referring to the resort town which competes with Virginia Beach for business among Washingtonians.

While traffic to Ocean City is backed up for hours, he reported, the roads to Virginia Beach are "beautiful and present very little traffic problem."

Dougherty said they made the trip in a pleasant four hours. "We weren't pushing it at all."

They ran into problems when they tried to get married. They practiced different religious faiths, and Mrs. Dougherty backed out of the wedding at the last minute because her family convinced her a mixed religion marriage would be a mistake.

Dougherty then took the money he had saved for a honeymoon and visited Virginia Beach on a heart-broken fling.

When he returned, Mrs. Dougherty called him to apologize for forgetting to cancel the wedding announcement in the newspaper. They agreed to see each other again and decided to get married anyway. Dougherty admitted "I had cold feet."

"I borrowed $100 from my father and took my mother's car," Dougherty said, and the couple ended up in Virginia Beach.

Dougherty worked for 30 years as a Central Intelligence Agency special services officer. He's retired now and is self-employed as an insurance agent. His wife is an administrative assistant with the U.S. Army, where she has worked for 22 years. The couple plans to leave Washington soon to reside in Maui, Hawaii.

The couple has returned to Virginia Beach several times since their marriage, and Mrs. Dougherty said the only disappointment occurred five years ago when they visited the Breakers Hotel and found a hole in the ground. She said, "That made us feel really bad."

The couple also remembers when the beach was much wider, before a big storm carried the beach's old boardwalk out to sea.

They could not remember if the boardwalk was wooden or cement, but Dougherty ended the discussion with an anecdote: "I know I fell off a bicycle one night and got splinters in my elbow!"

They are also concerned that the old Cavalier Hotel may be razed if the owners can't find a tenant. Mrs. Dougherty said, "I hate to think of the old Cavalier being torn down." The couple stayed there two Christmases ago and observed that local residents turned out in force for the hotel's annual New Year's Eve party.

The old hotel is gracious, Mrs. Dougherty remarked, and she thinks that it holds some fond memories for Beach residents.

The Doughertys arrived in Virginia Beach for the fall end of the first annual Neptune Festival and saw King Neptune's lighted float stop on the beach to drop off some merry-makers. Mrs. Dougherty said, "We might make it next time."

And every fall that the couple has been in the city, the days have been mild and sunny. Mrs. Dougherty said, "The weather just waits for us."

Beach bands enter festival

Five Virginia Beach High School bands will travel to Chesapeake Oct. 19 to compete in the Second Annual Tidewater Festival of Marching Bands.

The competition will take place at Indian River High School Stadium, 8301 Dunbarton Road, starting at 7 p.m.

Groups from Bayside, Cox, First Colonial, Kempsville and Princess Anne High Schools will perform football game half-time shows. Marching, drum majors, majorettes and flag rifle corps will have their own categories.

The Virginia Beach marching units will face competition from five Chesapeake schools, two Portsmouth schools and two Suffolk schools.

Admission to the festival will be $1.00 for adults and 50¢ for students. The Indian River High School band program will receive any profits from the event.

School doors open

Parents of Virginia Beach high school students can see what it's like on the other side of the school door during "Back to School Nights" scheduled at four schools.

Open house is slated at 7 p.m. Oct. 17 at Cox High School and at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 17 at Kellam.

Princess Anne will open its doors to parents at 7 p.m. Oct. 29, while Kempsville sends the parents back to class at 7:30 p.m. Oct.

Parents will have a chance to discuss class procedures with faculty members, who also will answer visitors' questions.

The PTAs at Cox, Kellam and Kempsville will hold short business meetings immediately before the open house programs at their schools.

Open house programs have already been held at First Colonial and Bayside High Schools.

When 300 sophisticated bankers were asked how they invested their own money, guess what 9 out of 10 admitted?

They were asked: "How do you invest today for maximum enjoyment and return tomorrow?"

The choices ranged from real estate to coins and stamps. From stocks and bonds to pension plans.

The bankers were all executives and officers. From banking institutions in twelve of the largest cities across the country. They were all professional investment counselors, men who knew the money market and knew the best ways to get the highest yield on their money.

Yet, for their own investments, 88% chose a savings account as one of the most important investment options.

How come? Because in spite of everything (our wobbly economy, the ups and downs on Wall Street) a savings account is still the soundest and surest investment we can make.

For bankers as well as everyone else. Because on pay day, we aren't too different from you.

We have our bills to pay. We have our plans for the future, too.

With a savings account our money is always there when we need it and we can get to it any time we want it.

There's a sense of security in that.

So if you're facing a decision on how to plan for the future, don't face it alone.

At United Virginia, we can help you decide the best way to save your money. (And it will probably be very much like the way we invest our own.)

If three hundred banking executives across the country haven't convinced you, come talk to your personal banker at United Virginia.

In spite of today's economy a savings account still hasn't gone out of style.

Tricks of the trade

Beauty can be taught, but it takes many long hours . . . just ask Cindy.

Cindy Pledger is a 16-year-old junior at Kempville High School, but unlike most of the rest of the student body, she spends only half a day there. The rest of the day she is enrolled in the cosmetology course at the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Educational Center.

In her second year of a three year course, Cindy is exposed to all services found in a beauty salon. Hair-cutting, hairstyling, manicuring, pedicuring, beauty salon management, and customer relationship are all a part of the program which is controlled by the Virginia State Board of Registered Professional Hair Dressers.

Upon completion of the course, she will be eligible to take the state board examination to become a licensed cosmetologist.

Cindy resides at 5541 Homeward Drive in Virginia Beach.

'Boys' works well for novice director

Review

When the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach tapped the directing potential of one of its veteran actresses for the season opener, "The Boys From Syracuse," it didn't come up empty-handed.

Vi Ragan, who has had extensive acting experience in the Virginia Beach theatre, Little Theatre of Norfolk and the Cavalier and Tidewater Dinner Theatres, took a giant step from the stage to direct the Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart musical comedy based upon Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Error."

The cast effectively captured the light-hearted mood of the play and carried the audience through a whimsical plot full of mistaken identities, star-crossed lovers and a full troupe of ladies of the night.

"The Boys From Syracuse" is fortunate to have Faye Edwards, a veteran of several Broadway shows, starring in the role of Adriana, the winsome wife of Antipholus of Ephesus (Joseph Crowder) who has trouble steering her husband clear of the ladies of the night.

Miss Edwards knows how to get the most out of her lines, and her timing and emphasis are right on target, especially with dialogue designed to draw a chuckle from the audience.

And a special treat for audiences who see "The Boys From Syracuse" is Miss Edwards' strong soprano which makes the two love songs from the musical, "Falling in Love With Love" and "The Shortest Day of the Year," even more memorable.

"The Boys From Syracuse" will be showing at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 18, 25, 26, Nov. 1 and 2, and at 3 p.m. Oct. 30 and 31 at The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach, 24th Street and Barborton Drive. Tickets are $3.75 for adults and $2 for students. Reservations can be made by calling 428-9523.

One of the best scenes in the play is Adriana's efforts to seduce Antipholus of Syracuse, played by Bill Kornegay, who (unknown to Adriana) is the look-alike twin of her husband.

As Antipholus of Syracuse, Kornegay parries Adriana's advances in an appealing performance.

He also turns on the charm in scenes with Luciana, played by Marie Phillips, and Dromio of Syracuse, his sidekick played by Bob Stivers.

Unfortunately Kornegay's singing ability isn't as strong as his acting, but he handles the two songs, "Dear Old Syracuse" and "This Can't Be Love" with an energetic tenor that does its best to make up for what Kornegay lacks in natural ability.

That's not the case with Joseph Crowder, in the other male leading role as Antipholus of Ephesus. Crowder's singing show promise, if he could lose some of his stiffness and hesitation which also marred the dancing scene he was in.

Crowder, who like Kornegay is in his first Little Theatre production, put on a fairly good acting performance, but it would be better if he could lose the trace of woodenness in his stage posture.

However, Crowder's discomfort was hardly noticeable in most scenes because of the fine performance by his sidekick, Dromio of Ephesus, who displayed comic talent as he struggled to escape death by rolling pin and smothering affection, by turns, from his domineering wife, Luce, played by Suzanne McDaniel.

As Luce, Miss McDaniel took up her role with a delightful vigor, as though she would have liked to either clobber or fuss over her dwarf husband, who was also enmeshed in the mistaken identity plot.

Miss McDaniel's singing numbers, "What Can You Do With A Man," "He and She" and "Sing for Your Supper," were also especially well-executed and among the high points in "The Boys From Syracuse."

The three female leads, Miss Edwards, Miss McDaniels and Miss Phillips, helped smooth over the rough start of Act Two with a humorous dance routine and song, "Sing for Your Supper."

Special notice should also go to The Courtesans or ladies of the night, led by Jo-Anna Smelser, a professional dancer who shimmered as much as her spangled costume in dance and song routines.

Costuming of the ladies The Courtesans, who pranced around the stage in glittering sequined bikinis and filmy veils, brightened up the stage and made an amusing contrast to the men, who donned short-skirted togas and sandals for their roles.

Special mention should go to Henry Highton, who appeared briefly in the musical as Aegeon, but whose well-done comical rendition of "I Had Twins", the play's opening song, launched the musical off to a good start.

Backup for the vocals with Gall Holly on piano, Gene Swartz and Lola Morrell on percussion and Mike Lewis on flute provided enough support, without overpowering the singers, to add depth to the music.

Pacing during the Oct. 13 performance of Act One much smoother than the dress rehearsal three days earlier, but some cast members stumbled over scenes during Act Two indicating that extra work might be needed on the last half of the play.

But if the cast continues to smooth out the performance, "The Boys From Syracuse" could gel into a successful premier under Mrs. Ragan's direction.

At the very least, the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach's first musical comedy of the year is lighthearted fun that should get the 1974-75 season off to a good start.

At Beach convention

Clubs honor vets with crosses

Six war veterans, including the president of Virginia Wesleyan College and a Virginia Beach man, received crosses of military service during the Virginia State Convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy recently in Virginia Beach.

Virginia Wesleyan College President Lambuth Clarke was honored for service in World War II, and Claude E. Jordan III of 4249 Thoroughgood Drive, Virginia Beach, received a cross for his service in Vietnam.

Crosses also went to Major W. E. Roberts of Newport News for serving in Vietnam and to W. L. Bau Jr. of Richmond for his work during World War II. Posthumous awards were given to W. H. Cloe III for who served in Korea and John B. King Sr., a soldier in World War I.

The convention was sponsored by the Pickett-

Buchanan Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Norfolk. Mrs. C. E. Jordan Jr. of Virginia Beach was co-chairman of the convention. Virginia Beach Mayor J. Curtis Payne welcomed the group to the city during the four-day meeting Sept. 30 to Oct. 3.

A 100-year-old Virginia Beach woman, Mrs. E. F. Jakeman, was recognized at the convention.

The organization selected elected officers, including Mrs. J. Williams Jr. of Virginia Beach who will serve as chairman of the group's sixth district.

Israeli orchestra schedules Tidewater performance

A single performance of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra is scheduled at the Chrysler Hall in Norfolk at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 20. Medicine vs. faith healing

Jean Stapleton evaluates her religious beliefs

HOLLYWOOD — After "People" magazine reported that Jean Stapleton, though a Christian Scientist, had driven her husband, Bill Putch, to and from Bethesda National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., for a course of experimental treatment when he learned he had cancer, some people wondered whether this meant she'd given up her religion.

But the answer to that question is a resounding "No." Because the matter is a terribly sensitive one, Jean's answers concerning the subject shouldn't be paraphrased or interpreted but, rather given straight though, for the sake of some brevity, with some deletions.

So here goes:

Q. Did the medical treatment your husband received violate your religious beliefs?

A. No. But he's not a Christian Scientist. Just one phase of Christian Science is metaphysical healing.

Q. Then there's no objection to medical treatment?

A. No. No indeed. There's only respect.

Q. If you had cancer, would you seek medical help?

A. No.

Q. Do you think you would have enough faith to be healed through your religious beliefs alone?

A. Well, faith is always part of it, but, to me, there are two kinds of faith, blind faith (which really has no part of it at all) and understanding faith which is a different thing. I mean my mother was healed by Christian Science, and she didn't know anything about it. And a great many people who know nothing about it, but who turn to it, are healed, and you can't say it's their faith that healed them.

Q. How do you account for the fact that, even among people with faith, healings don't always happen?

A. I can't tell you. I can't get inside people's minds. I think we have to recognize the power of God with a conviction, and I don't know. I'm sure there are times when I think I'm recognizing that power, but the recognition is full of doubt and fear.

Q. Does anyone ever have enough faith to be sure God will do what he asks?

A. I'm thinking of the first line — no, it's not the first line, but it's early in the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with a Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. There's this statement, "The Prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God," and that sort of says a lot. But then there's a comma; it's not finished yet — "A spiritual understanding, an unselfed love."

Q. When you first found out that your husband had cancer and that his condition was serious, were you ever tempted to call against God?

A. No, because I don't believe God is the source of our suffering.

Q. Did you ever try to discourage your husband from seeking medical help?

A. Oh, no, I wouldn't presume to do that, because he's not a student of Christian Science. I think that would be imposing. He had to make his own decision. I wouldn't impose; though, if a person were in an extremity and was dissatisfied (with progress of his case) I would certainly make a suggestion if I had the opportunity.

Putch, who is producer, director and man in charge at the Totem Pole Playhouse in Pennsylvania, which he and his wife founded, is now in radiant health, Jean says.

"I know his experience was very unique," she says speaking carefully, slowly, "but you'll have to ask Bill about it. He had an idea that stayed in his mind that just happened to come from me, because I said it spontaneously. He was suffering, and I said, 'You don't have to accept this, you know.' That was the grain, a grain of truth, the seed of an idea that separated him from his disease."

Trinity Methodist looks at history

The Thalia Trinity Presbyterian Church, 420 Thalia Road, Virginia Beach, looked back on its 15-year history at the church is anniversary celebration Oct. 13.

The afternoon program saluted charter members and reviewed the church's own past as well as the history of the Presbyterian Church in America. The minister, Robert Bradford Jr., examined the history of the religion, while Lee Lively, a charter member, spoke on "The Beginnings of Thalia Trinity." Mrs. A.J. Cavey addressed the crowd on the church's history. Mrs. E.J. Wiley handled the music for the anniversary program.

Budget adopted

A proposed 1975 budget of $155,743 was adopted Oct. 7 by the Administrative Board of the Virginia Beach United Methodist Church. Operating costs and miscellaneous accounted for $117,254, while the debt retirement fund—recently increased by $9,738 over the 1974 budget—accounted for $38,489. The operating budget was increased by just $3,533 over the 1974 total.

Copies of the 1975 budget are available in the church office.

CRAWFORD

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Virginia Beach's new health director, Dr. William Crawford, is a former surgeon who is finding that most of his job so far is probing delicately into the city's sewage problem.

Crawford, 50, who started the job two months ago, said he is spending nearly 80 per cent of his time dealing with sewers and septic tanks.

Ordinarily, sewers would not come under his jurisdiction, but in Virginia Beach the lack of sewer lines threatens the health of the residents who don't have them. Just over 70 per cent of Beach households are still using septic tanks, the health director said.

"The big problem here in Virginia Beach," Crawford explained, "is that we have a high water table and relatively poor soil for use and insulation of septic tanks."

The result is the treat that raw sewage could seep out of the tanks and into the well water supply. Residents in some areas have complained about the stench from inadequate septic tanks.

The City Council recently heard from Bellamy

Manor residents, who have joined persons living in Seateck and Doyleway, with complaints of sewage overflowing from their septic tanks.

And with residential growth outstripping the city's ability to provide municipal services, such as sewers and water, the $5 million earmarked in the Capital Improvement Program, for sewer construction is not enough.

"There is a very grave and potential danger" to the health of some citizens now using septic tanks, Crawford reported. Although no reports of illness have been made, open sewage frequently the case in areas where septic tanks are inadequate could trigger dysentery and other ailments.

Since he came to Virginia Beach, the former surgeon understood that he spent most of his time mired in the city's septic tank problem.

But sewers and septic tanks, handled by the Health Department's environmental division, is only part of Crawford's new responsibilities.

The Health Department is presently working with the city manager to set up a committee to evaluate the community's total health needs.

The committee will begin a 10-month study that will log the "needs, wants and desires of the people of Virginia Beach, Crawford said.

The study, part of a companion program with the City of Chesapeake, will be funded by a $40,000 federal grant.

Crawford said the structure of the committee has not been determined yet, but that it probably would include Health Department representatives at the local and state levels, city administrators and planners and representatives from the Beach's two hospitals, private practitioners and from consumers.

Ultimately the study will be used to determine where the Beach's proposed health facility will be located and what services it will provide.

The clinic would relieve presently overburdened health facilities in the Beach, Bayside and the municipal center, Crawford reported. He added, "Our big problem is one of space and personnel."

Virginia Beach operates clinics for venereal disease, family planning, pediatrics and prenatal care, and there is no room for the programs to expand although the demand is high.

The city's Health Department must also juggle its services carefully so it does not out into the business of private doctors and health care facilities in Virginia Beach.

"We are not in competition with the private sector," Crawford explained. "We simply try to step in and backstop when the private sector is unable to respond."

One area the health director says needs more attention is the inoculation program to protect children against diseases such as polio and rubella measles, the strain which causes birth defects when a mother contracts it during the early stages of pregnancy.

There is a statewide increase in the diseases, Crawford reported, and he is concerned that Virginia Beach residents could be affected.

"There are indications that we are falling behind in the immunization program for childhood diseases," the health director said. Although many youngsters receive the vaccinations when they are infants, he added, "we are finding more and more that by the time they reach school age, some children haven't gotten immunized."

Crawford blames the trend on the high mobility of Virginia Beach residents. Navy families move frequently, and others rent and then move again within the community. He admitted, "It's a little difficult following up cases."

TCC lines up yoga, non-credit classes

Virginia Beach residents will have a chance to dabble in astrology, concentrate on yoga or learn karate in continuing education non-credit starting next week at the Virginia Beach campus of the Tidewater Community College.

Two 10-week astrology courses taught by Reba Glen will begin Oct. 21 and 22. Beginning astrology will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. in room C-116 during the Monday night sessions, while intermediate astrology students will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays in room C-104. Fees for each course is $25.00.

Transactional analysis, an eight-week course which will delve into personality theories presented in the book "I'm OK You're OK" will begin Oct. 21. Classes will be held in Room A-108 from 4 to 6 p.m. under Hilton Susco. The fee is $20.00.

David Boone will teach an eight-week course on "The Russian's World Today" on Tuesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 24. The classes will meet in Room C-2 137. Fee is $20.

Yoga classes will meet Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 24. The classes which will continue throughout the year, will be held in Building 34 at Camp Pendleton. Gloria Machin will teach the course, which has a fee of $10 a month.

Karate classes, scheduled from 5 to 7 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays in Building 34 at Camp Pendleton, will start Oct. 24. The classes will continue throughout the year under the instruction of Rob Whitaker. Fee will be $24 a month.

Interested persons can reserve a place in one of the classes or obtain additional information by contacting the Office of Continuing Education at 427-3070, extension 113.

City may save buildings

Rose Hall and the old Cavalier Hotel - two sites of historical significance to Virginia Beach - may be saved from possible destruction.

City Council has asked the Planning Commission to consider zoning a portion of the Rose Hall property on Virginia Beach Boulevard as a historical and cultural zoning district. The Planning Commission will consider the matter at its Dec. 10 meeting. Council also has asked the Historical Review Board to hold a meeting specifically on the old Cavalier and make recommendations to the Council. That meeting will be arranged.

Once the historical zoning classification is imposed, property owners may not alter, destroy or improve their property without prior approval from the city's planning director or the Historical Review Board.

Rose Hall, constructed circa 1732, was withdrawn from a public hearing last March which considered historical zoning. In February, Norfolk attorney Henry Howell, representing Rose Hall owner Mary C. Komoroski, stated that she was opposed to such zoning for her property and called the zoning effort "seizing of property without due process of law."

Owners of the Cavalier, which has been closed for a year, have said that if a tenant is not found soon, "there is a strong possibility it would be removed."

Whitehurst, Richards anchor campaigns on rising inflation

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Two candidates for the Virginia Beach Congressional slot have rolled up their shirt sleeves and zeroed in on inflation as the ringing issue during the final stages of the campaign.

Republican incumbent G. William Whitehurst and his Democratic challenger, Bob Richards, are both educators who believe that rising inflation and the nation's faltering economy are the concerns which stir the souls of Americans, especially Virginia Beach voters.

But the similarity ends there. In interviews with The Sun, both men said they want to control inflation and balance the federal budget, but the methods they would like to use to ease the nation's economic woes are at opposite ends of the spectrum.

Whitehurst, 49, would like to pull in the federal pursestrings and cut back on welfare and other social programs, while Richards believes that the problem lies in an unfair tax structure that shelters wealthy citizens and large corporations.

Whitehurst said the high cost of living and inflation are the only issues this year as far as most voters are concerned. "The American people are worried, apprehensive about what's happened to the economy. They are looking for leadership and direction, and it's up to Congress and the President."

The legislator, a six-year veteran of Congress,

Series
This is the final article of a three-part series in which Sun Staff Writer Mary Roda examines the issues to be decided in the Nov. 5 election. This part focuses on the race for the 2nd District Congressional seat.

said he has introduced a proposal which would cut congressmen's salaries by the percentage which they exceed the federal budget.

"It's a direct way of putting people on the mark," Whitehurst explained. "It isn't that the causes aren't good, it's how much do you want to spend."

Federal spending is the "most critical thing to tackle. There's no easy way out of it. We're not going to find a check full of money. It will take a number of years (to end deficit spending) and real self-discipline."

However, Whitehurst did vote in favor of a federal pay increase which was approved by Congress. Afterwards, President Ford, in a nationally televised speech, criticized Congress for not delaying the pay increase until January.

But Whitehurst said that it would have been unfair not to raise the salaries of military personnel and white collar civil federal employees because federal blue collar workers already received their raise during the summer.

Half-day VD clinic can't expand services

Virginia Beach needs a full-time venereal disease treatment facility, but health department officials say the city will have to struggle with its once-a-week half-day clinic because there is no room to expand it.

Dick Graham, venereal disease (VD) investigator, said the clinic shares space with other health services, such as family planning and prenatal care, in the health department's clinic at 19th Street and Arctic Avenue.

But the services have "outgrown" their offices, he reported in an interview with The Sun. "We simply don't have the space available to expand them."

It is Graham's job to try to stamp out the spread of venereal disease in Virginia Beach. Although the number of reported cases isn't high, he is concerned that some persons are simply letting the disease go untreated, a situation which could spread VD and also cause permanent physical damage to the victim.

"I think the diseases are here," Graham said, adding that he feels certain that a full-time clinic would be justified.

Reported cases of VD in Virginia Beach totaled 252 for the first six months of this year, the VD investigator said, which indicates an 11 per cent increase over last year.

But even with the increase, Virginia Beach still has fewer cases of reported VD cases than neighboring Chesapeake, a city of half the population. Chesapeake tallied 302 VD cases last year compared to 252 in the Beach area.

Health officials said the cases are recorded by residence of the VD patients so the figures reflect the extent the disease community.

Of the reported VD cases in Virginia Beach, 226 were for gonorrhea and 26 for syphilis.

But the real concern of health officials is not that the diseases are being reported and treated, but that persons who contract VD do not report it.

One official described the situation as a "snowball effect. Once it starts," he explained, "it keeps on rising."

Graham said the Virginia Beach VD clinic is open only on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 11 a.m. However, demand for treatment is high enough to justify a full-time clinic.

However, there is no place to operate the clinic because other health department facilities are being used, Graham reported.

Virginia Beach is studying the health services problem and a city committee is looking at the possibility of constructing another health center, including clinics. However, the report is not expected for another eight months.

Graham said VD could reveal itself with lesions around the genitalia the individual cannot explain. Skin eruptions similar to chicken pox and loss of hair in patches are secondary symptoms of the VD. "Anytime anyone has any suspicions that they were exposed to it," Graham urged, they should at least seek medical help to determine if they contracted VD.

Treatment at the VD clinic is strictly confidential, he reported, and the clinics will treat minors without parental consent.

"It's not that we're trying to encourage promiscuity," Graham explained, but the VD problem is most serious in the 15 to 25-year-old age group, and health officials are concerned that juveniles sometimes avoid treatment because they are afraid their parents will be notified.

"Up until two years ago," Graham said, "kids didn't have any place to go." They avoided the family doctor, he added, because their parents would receive the bill.

But state legislation has "spelled out the fact that we're not required to get parental consent," Graham explained. "We can examine persons at any age."

Virginia's VD rate jumped 26.3 per cent between 1972 and 1973, giving the state the 17th highest record of gonorrhea cases and putting it in ninth place for syphilis.

The Department of Health will provide organizations or individuals with information to help plan community action programs. Interested persons may write to the Department of Health, VD Control Section, 109 Governor St., Richmond 23219.

Pickett endorses grants for colleges

Virginia Beach Del. Owen B. Pickett is urging community leaders to support a constitutional amendment on the Nov. 5 ballot which would help private colleges keep their heads above water by allowing the General Assembly to give tuition grants to students at private colleges.

Twenty-six private colleges in Virginia lost money last year, Pickett reported, and another closed down. The legislator said the grant would pare down the gap between tuitions at private or public colleges and enable more middle class citizens to send their children to the private institutions which have thousands of openings each year.

In turn, he noted, the grants would ease the pressure to expand the Virginia's public college system.

Some opponents of the amendment are opposed to the principle of giving taxpayer assistance to private business, even if it is a learning institution

City rejects requests for zone change

By NEAL SIMS
Sun Editor

Amoco Oil Co. and a Virginia Beach hairdresser were losers Oct. 21 in their petitions to City Council to allow changes of zoning district classifications.

Attorney Grover Wright, representing Amoco, asked Council to rezone a half acre parcel of land at the intersection of Rosemont Road and Holland Road from A-1 Apartment District to B-2 Community Business District. After rezoning, Wright said his client would sell the property. He guessed eventually a convenience store would be located there.

However, Council upheld unanimously a previous decision of the Planning Commission to deny Amoco's petition. Council cited the Little Neck-Lynhaven Development Plan, which recommends residential use of the site, and said Amoco's proposal would perpetuate the strip commercial development of Holland Road.

Sandra Benoit, 715 10th St., wanted Council to grant her a change in zoning from R-7 Residential District to B-1 Business Residential District for the 6,000 square foot lot where her house is located.

Her attorney, A.J. Coffman, said Mrs. Benoit wanted to add a utility room, bathroom and beauty shop to her house. Coffman said Mrs. Benoit's husband was out of work so to cut expenses she wanted to relocate her hairdressing business in their home.

Again Council upheld unanimously a Planning Commission recommendation to deny the petition, saying Mrs. Benoit's proposal would result in spot zoning - introducing a business district into the center of a residential block.

Prior to the formal meeting, Council met for 37 minutes in executive session, closed to the public and the press, to discuss what the agenda listed as "legal" and "real property" matters.

Editorials:

A needed document

Within the next 30 days, Virginia Beach Manager Roger Scott has promised to present a document to City Council that most likely will soothe the ire of some citizens and, at the same time, stir the anger of others.

It is a priority list for sanitary sewer projects - something that Council has needed for some time to answer the complaints of Beach residents whose neighborhoods do not have city sewers.

The list will be extracted from the updated Capital Improvements Program (CIP) which also is due within 30 to 60 days.

The prioritized list will provide Council with a timetable for sewer project construction, lending some order to a situation which has been dealt with before in a helter-skelter fashion.

Many Beach residents may not have city sewers, but at least they will have some idea where they stand. And Councilmen, plagued with complaints, will have something to work their plans around.

Bicentennial

'help wanted'

The Virginia Beach Bicentennial Commission, under the chairmanship of J. Roy Alphin, is quietly but persistently working on plans and ideas for celebrating the nation's 200th birthday in Virginia Beach.

Recently moved into a headquarters office near the Civic Center, the commission now employs a part-time secretary and is open for business three days a week.

A three-pronged celebration is in its tentative planning stages for the bicentennial. Heritage, festival and horizons are the three approaches to be taken in commemorating the bicentennial.

Plans include an overlook at Capt. Henry to mark the heritage of our past, a parade and festival on July 4, 1976 to celebrate the present and a project to symbolize the horizons of the future.

What the commission needs now are ideas from residents of Virginia Beach that could blossom into full fledged programs for the bicentennial.

Virginia Beach is rich in the historical tradition of America, so the celebration here should have special significance.

Those who want to take part in planning the events can do so easily. Ideas can be given to the commission at its next meeting Nov. 12 at 3 p.m. in the new headquarters. Or citizens can drop by the offices at 318 19th Street on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday.

Commission members have come with good ideas of their own. Citizens have an opportunity to join in early on Virginia Beach's celebration of the nation's bicentennial.

Wet workout for squads

Ambulance lights flashed in the pouring rain, and rescue workers slogged through mud and tangled weeds to reach 26 victims from an airplane crash. It could have been real. But rescue squads from Davis Corner, Kempsville and Chesapeake Beach weren't playing games as they got soaked to the skin in a vacant Virginia Beach field Saturday. It was the first joint drill, and squad members say it was a success.

Council for jail

City Council urged Virginia Beach citizens to vote favorably on a bond referendum to provide funds for the construction of a new jail at its Oct. 21 meeting.

In a resolution adopted 9-0, Council endorsed the construction of the proposed jail, citing rapid growth of the city since the present jail was constructed in 1947.

Vice-mayor George Ferrell and Pungo Councilman Floyd Waterfield abstained from voting. Ferrell said voters should decide the issue for themselves.

Council voted earlier this year to place the bond referendum on the Nov. 5 ballot, saying it was up to Virginia Beach Sheriff S.J. "Joe" Smith to "sell" the new jail to the voters.

City may build dam

Lake Trant dam will be reconstructed by the City of Virginia Beach for $30,000 if contracts for the project are approved by the developers and owners of property surrounding what used to be Lake Trant.

Developers have indicated they would pay $22,500 of the cost, and property owners, who have formed an association, will be asked to pay the remaining $7,500.

Asst. City Manager George Hanbury said one bid was received last week from a Chesapeake firm to do the work for $64,720. Director of Community Services William Fleming estimated the city could do the job for $30,000.

The dam broke last June, emptying the lake into Lynnhaven Bay and leaving residents with a mud and silt basin.

Hanbury estimated the cost for property owners would be around $75 per lot.

Murder still unsolved

Virginia Beach Police still have no suspects in the murder of a used car wholesale dealer who was found dead in the trunk of his car at Pembroke Mall Oct. 16.

Wayne Chitwood, 36, a resident of Eastwood Villa Apartments in London Bridge, was found dead of a bullet wound in the car which had been reported abandoned after it had been left in the mall parking lot for a week.

The murder victim was last seen alive Oct. 8. He recently went into business with a Norfolk policeman, J.D. Stubbs, at Five Point Auto Wholesalers, 5816 Chesapeake Blvd., Norfolk.

Voting record hit

Virginia Beach Del. Owen Pickett this week criticized Republican incumbent in the Congressional race, Rep. William Whitehurst, for ducking the issue of inflation.

Pickett, a Democrat, said Whitehurst has voted against price ceilings and against giving the President wage and price controls. When Whitehurst is questioned about it, he added, "he has chosen to respond by name calling and by proposing an unrealistic proposal" to end deficit spending by penalizing Congressmen if they cannot stay within the federal budget.

Pickett is endorsing the Whitehurst's Democratic opponent, Bob Richards, who the delegate said has proposed anti-inflation measures during the campaign.

Officer faces trial

A Virginia Beach naval officer accused of stealing more than $3,000 of goods from the Navy Servmart is facing the first court martial of an officer in Tidewater since 1968, when an ensign refused to serve on a Vietnam-bound ship.

The court martial of Lt. Cmdr. Robert E. Banman of 3825 Brentwood Crescent will begin Nov. 8. A conviction could bring a dishonorable discharge for the officer, who was ready to retire last summer after 30 years, in addition to 15 years at hard labor. Banman had been serving as the executive officer of the Personnel Accounting Machine Installation, Atlantic Fleet, Norfolk.

Letters from our readers

Editor, The Sun:

I have followed with increasing interest and concern the efforts of your newspaper to bring the public business of the City of Virginia Beach into the public forum and out from behind the closed doors of "executive sessions." Your recent editorial (The Sun, Oct. 16) concerning this matter finally moves me to comment.

You are to be commended. Historically, it has been the press that has fought for my right to know what goes on in a government body that I helped to elect. The results of closed-door government by a small group are well-known. It does, however, take a Richard Nixon to remind us of the real dangers. We seem to learn this lesson every few decades - only to forget with an amazing degree of speed.

I have little or no doubt that the elected officials of Virginia Beach are honorable men seeking to do the very best they can with the problems of often staggering scope. Closed meetings that skirt gently around the laws of the State of Virginia are no way to prove that, however. I must confess, I take this very personally. This is my business they are conducting. I have a basic right to know what is being done - and how they are doing it. I am also offended by the implication that I am not intelligent enough to be allowed access to certain "legal" and "financial" information that is bound to affect me, my family and the taxes I pay.

National and local government is becoming more and more complex and having a greater effect each passing day of our lives. Despite the natural temptation, we can no longer afford to be ignorant of how they function. An informed citizenry is our best and only defense - and our only weapon against a small group that can and has taken advantage of our ignorance in the past and tried to take charge.

I'm sure there are times when it doesn't seem like it, but your efforts to insure freedom of information are appreciated by those

Beach cancer unit tops crusade goal

A team of Virginia Beach volunteers, hauled in $68,518 during the 1973-74 American Cancer Society Crusade to top their goal by $3,500.

The American Cancer Society recognized Shirley Barondess, president of the Beach unit for her volunteer effort, at the recent annual meeting of its Virginia Division in Roanoke. Evan McCortie Jr. worked as the Virginia Beach Crusade chairman.

The pair headed more than 1,000 volunteers who canvassed the city during the fund drive.

Mrs. Barondess called the response to the crusade "tremendous, particularly now." She told the Sun that the unit even surpassed its "challenge" goal of $65,000.

"We hope to make it again," she reported, adding that this year's crusade is already underway. Volunteers are contacting industries and preparing for the door-to-door effort that will begin in April.

The unit has already stationed donation baskets in front of Sears and Miller and Rhoads in the Pembroke Mall.

And with inflation, Mrs. Barondess admitted, "it's an even bigger challenge, but a day doesn't pass by when I don't meet someone who hasn't been hit (with cancer in the family), and those are the volunteers that really knock themselves out. It's a tremendous cause."

However, Mrs. Barondess added that she hopes volunteers will join the crusade before they experience a personal tragedy from the disease.

The Virginia Beach office of the American Cancer Society is located at 958-B Laskin Rd.

Dance seminar slated by Beach yoga center

The Aquarian Age Yoga Center is sponsoring a dance seminar on the beach this weekend followed by a Nov. 2 celestial music concert.

Four dance seminar sessions are scheduled on the beach in front of Marshall's Motel, 66th Street, Virginia Beach, Oct. 26 and 27. The two-hour classes, starting at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. both days, cost $4 each or $12 for the four meetings.

Jeanne Foster will teach the art of eurhythm, or visible song and visible speech through body movement. Participants should wear loose, flowing clothing.

In case of rain, the seminar will be held at the yoga center, 620 14th St., Virginia Beach.

At 8 p.m. Nov. 2 the yoga center is sponsoring an evening of celestial music and dance. Order of Orpheus, a group of musicians under Harpist Joel Andrews, will perform.

Tickets for the concert, at the yoga center, will be $3.

Unit alerts police

Virginia Beach may see the day when police cars carry mini-computers that alert patrolmen as soon as a crime is reported.

Virginia Beach Public Information Officer Sam Clay said the city is looking at a system in San Diego which allows operators of an emergency telephone line to contact patrol cars by computer even before the call itself is completed.

Clay said the operators simply punch out the information, for example the address of a burglary in process, and the computer passes the information the closest police car in the area.

The City Council will not decide what to put into the system until it is designed. The city recently asked for bids for designing of communications-system, which eventually will be located in the public safety building.

The city estimates that the first part of the computer information system would cost approximately $325,000, enough for computer terminals and printers in the public safety complex, which will be the headquarters for both the police and fire departments.

Clay said one of the consultants for the public safety building, Marion Warner and Associates, in Pasadena, Calif., have designed a similar system which is now in use in San Diego.

In San Diego, the address of the caller flashes on a city grid, which is transferred to a screen in the police unit. Then police officers can find the location quickly.

A central computer keeps tabs on the police cars, Clay reported, "and it's almost like radar tracking."

Scott to appear on Channel 15 forum

Virginia Beach City Manager Roger Scott will field questions from citizens during Channel 15's Regionally program with city managers from Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake.

The program on WHRO-TV is scheduled at 8 p.m. Oct. 31.

Sharon Miller, a spokesman for the public broadcasting channel, reported that it is the first time the four city managers have met in a public forum.

The program is part of a series which are delving into "area-wide approaches to common problems and opportunities," Ms. Miller said, "and the intergovernmental relationships that shape responses."

"It appears that the advice of city managers to their Councils is a major influence in the making of policy decisions and the setting directions on joint-action projects involving more than one city," Ms. Miller said, which ultimately make the regional proposals successes or failures.

Citizens will be able to submit questions for Scott or the other city managers by calling 489-9478.

Ad scores for Beach

A bearded fisherman stands on the bridge of his fishing boat, and the headline urges, "Flytta Edert Bolag till ett annat land."

It's all part of an advertising campaign to publicize industrial potential of Virginia Beach, and it's paid off for the Beach public relations firm, Matthews Agency, in an advertising competition.

The theme of the ad campaign, "Move your business to another country, Virginia Beach," emphasized the Beach's efforts to attract industry, including operations based out of the country.

The advertisements, in a three-part series, took the "best of class" award at the 29th meeting of the Southern Industrial Development Council held recently in Louisville.

The ads were selected over entries from industrial and port authorities from 16 southern states.

The Matthews Agency capitalized on the foreign theme of the ads, and placed eye-catching headlines in foreign languages over pictures of people at work.

The ads show a fisherman with a Swedish headline, a female industrial worker with a Japanese headline, and a Hindi headline with a young boy on a Virginia Beach farm. Land which may someday become an industrial park site.

The advertisements emphasized the city's low tax structure, labor supply and large supply of industrial land.

To make the city seem more like a new "nation," the agency even changed the name to "Virginia Beach."

"When it comes to business," the advertisements state, "we're a different country."

One ad describes the city: "This nation borders the Atlantic Ocean with attendant recreational opportunities. It has a very stable government with no revolutions since 1776."

Another advertisement, picturing a woman tackling what looks like a demanding physical job, tells prospective industrial enterprises that "businesses locating here have usually found all the good people they want at fair wages."

"One big reason is that the potential labor supply of women is abundant. Almost 3,000 are ready now to work. Many of the 15,000 wives of our military men are also available for jobs. And there are 300,000 male and female workers within a 25-mile radius of our country to consider."

The third advertisement in the campaign emphasizes the abundance of land prime for industrial development in Virginia Beach. It reports that 200 acres have been developed, and 1,000 more acres in Oceana West, "an imaginatively designed, optimum working environment" are available for further development.

The ad states that the project has three sections, an executive park for office complexes, light industrial park and the warehouse and distribution area.

Another advantage, the ad says, is the availability of transportation by rail, one of the largest container ports in the nation in Portsmouth, and the Norfolk regional airport "only a few miles away. Express truck routes connect directly," it adds. "No border duties, no passports required."

The advertisements all direct the reader to the city's Department of Economic Development Director A. James DeBellis.

The series, which appeared in "Nation's Business," "Dun's Review," and other industrial development trade publications, resulted in hundreds of telephone calls and letters from companies in the United States and from other foreign countries, according to DeBellis.

Flytta Edert bolag till ett annat land.

For years industries have benefited by locating in countries offering substantial economic advantages. You can realize the same type of benefits in our country. This nation borders the Atlantic Ocean with all attendant recreational opportunities. It has a very stable government with no revolutions since 1776.

Here are some of the positive factors we offer:

An attractive tax structure that's one of the lowest of any city over 50,000 population in the United States.

An excellent supply of labor. Over 1200 people per month are immigrating here, including a large percentage of female labor and former military persons with skills and management experience.

An abundant supply of land with facilities especially planned for industry, such as land immediately available at very reasonable cost.

Where is there such a good business climate? It's the new dominion of Virginia Beach, located just east of Virginia U.S.A.

To explore the possibilities of Virginia Beach for your business, phone the capital at (804) 427-4541. Ask for either Jim DeBellis, Director, Department of Economic Development, or Walter Alford, Coordinator, Industrial Development Division. Or write to:

State lures film units

Crews of camera and sound men may become a familiar sight in Virginia Beach if a state-wide campaign to attract film-makers to Virginia is successful.

Gov. Mills E. Godwin Jr. is sending letters to 1,000 film production companies to encourage them to act as a liaison between state agencies including police, the Highway Department, employment commission, federal and state park authorities and local government agencies.

The travel service noted that Virginia can offer film companies diverse geographic settings and a moderate climate.

The letters also will include a hardback 250-page book full of pictures of historical sites, beaches, mountains and other scenic attractions.

The Virginia State Travel Service will be the contact for film crews and will act as a liaison between state agencies including police, the Highway Department, employment commission, federal and state park authorities and local government agencies.

The travel service noted that Virginia can offer film companies diverse geographic settings and a moderate climate.

It also indicated that the state would benefit from revenue brought in by the film making business.

Some states, the service reported, take in more than $1 million a year in revenue attributed to filmmaking.

The travel center officials said they are optimistic about Virginia's ability to attract filmmakers, especially since most films are shot on-location.

And the tourist center reported that the Virginia's

Hospital planned

An $18.8 million hospital that will be constructed near the Virginia-Norfolk city line will look more like a college campus than a health facility.

The 256-bed hospital, which will open in early 1977 and will replace the Leigh Memorial Hospital in Norfolk, will be one of the first hospitals to adopt the campus-style layout.

The hospital will have two towers for patients' rooms, a doctors' medical building, and an emergency room facility, a service not presently provided at Leigh Memorial.

C of C elects directors

Ten new members have been elected to serve three-year terms on the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

The new directors are Robert W. Berry, Virginia Beach manager of C&P Telephone Co.; Edward T. Cason III, attorney; Richard H. Kline, president of RK Chevrolet; James G. Koutopoulos, retired restaurateur; Russell S. Marshall Jr., president of Seaside Market; Vicky Randall, owner of John Robert Powers Modeling and Finishing School; William D. Robertson, manager of the Hilltop location of Standard Office Supply; Michael C. Savides, owner of the Black Angus Restaurant; Fred B. Brickland, owner of the Newcastle Motel; and John S. Waller, architect.

Terms of the new directors begin Jan. 1, 1975.

Largest in city Beach complex ready for digging this winter

The first phase of what will be Virginia Beach's largest multi-family residential development will begin construction this winter.

The Lakes, a 1,050-unit project on 150 acres near South Lynnhaven Road just north of Holland Road, will be developed by Larasan, a Virginia Beach realty firm, and Talbot and Associates.

Phase I of the $26 million residential complex will include 242 units on 35 acres. Of those, 118 will be patio cluster homes with three and four bedrooms, and 124 will be townhomes ranging from two to four bedrooms.

Doug McLamb, Larasan's project manager for The Lakes, reported that the development is using a new concept in townhome planning by designing the units with detached garages. He said it is the first time townhomes in Virginia Beach will not include the garages as part of the residential building itself.

A Washington, D.C., architect, Fred R. Klein, will be responsible for the master planning and architectural work for The Lakes.

Klein previously received an award from the American Institute of Architects and "House and Home" magazine for his design and construction plans for Canal Square, a commercial project along the Georgetown canal which included an historic warehouse.

The Lakes will be "an extension of the Holland Road growth corridor," according to McLamb. He said the location, which has a market value of $4.1 million, will be convenient to shopping areas, the beach and to the Virginia Beach tollway.

"At the same time," he added, "we recognize that it will be a high density community," so Larasan and Talbot tried to find the best architect they could for the development.

The townhomes will feature staggered setbacks and alternating roof lines, McLamb said, and the plans also include three recreational areas with three swimming pools, five tennis courts and a 24-acre lake for sailing. Bicycle paths are also planned through out the 150-acre project.

Larasan spokesmen said they hope to have the first units ready by next summer, but added that any present estimate for completion of the project would be "very speculative."

Cox lineman moves on the ball

Bobby Stubbs: deafness no handicap to him

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

Imagine playing football in a soundless atmosphere.

Add the proper amount of gravity, a football field, lights, cheerleaders, a marching band or two, fans and two football teams, and you have a close approximation of the world that Bobby Stubbs plays football in.

Stubbs is a defensive guard on the Cox High School team. The 6-1, 220-pound junior lineman - who just turned 17 Oct. 12 - has been deaf since the age of 2 1/2 when a series of high fevers destroyed the nerves to his ears.

"It's not the easiest thing in the world to accept," says Mary Stubbs, Bobby's mother. "He gets awfully depressed about it sometimes. But he's adjusted."

Stubbs played his first tackle football when he tried out for the junior varsity team at Cox in 9th grade. He was cut from the squad. But the next year, as a sophomore, he made not only the varsity football team, but also wrestled in the heavyweight class on a Cox squad that went to the state championship.

Cox's Bobby Stubbs

at Falcon Stadium. The Falcons swept past the favored Patriots 7-0 for their first win of the season.

Cox wrestling coach Bill Gutermuth - recently featured in Esquire magazine as one of the most successful high school coaches in the country - explained that Bobby had wrestled one year of JV before trying out for varsity. As a sophomore last year, said Gutermuth, "Bobby had a 4-1-1 record half-way through the season and was a runner-up in our Christmas tournament but then he broke his hand." Bobby missed the rest of the regular season because of the injury that snapped a bone in his wrist.

"The bone was so small it wouldn't heal properly" if Bobby didn't stop all physical activity," said Gutermuth. But Stubbs was ready by the time Cox went to the state tournament. "He had some close matches there," said Gutermuth. "He did well for having been out so long."

One of Stubbs' losses was to Mark Rimarski of Kempsville High in Virginia Beach. Rimarski, a 210-pounder, also plays offensive tackle for the Chiefs in football.

"I expect a lot out of him this year," says Gutermuth. "We've always been weak in the heavyweight division, and he's the best there we've ever had. I really think he should make it to the state tournament this year, maybe in the top four."

Gutermuth has never been apprehensive about Bobby's deafness being an obstacle to coaching. "It is a handicap, true," Gutermuth says, "but probably less so in wrestling than in other sports. He knows enough about wrestling now that it's no problem. He reads lips real well. When we have to, we get him in a corner and coach him."

But football - the sport in which Bobby may be able to snag a college scholarship - does present coaching problems. Coach Al Habit shakes his head when he thinks what Bobby could do for the Falcon offense as a pulling guard. "Of course, he can't hear the signals, or if the quarterback checked off at the line," says Habit.

Right now, when Bobby gets down in his stance at his defensive guard position, he keeps his eye on the opposing center. "He has to move on the ball. When we switch defenses, or stunt, the linebacker (senior Derek Canaan) uses hand signals," said Habit. "He'll touch him on one side or the other."

Recently Coach Habit and the Stubbs' family had been looking into the possibility of fitting a hearing aid into Bobby's football helmet.

"I want to go to college someplace where there will be people around me."

"We contacted some people in Washington," says Habit, "who had helped Larry Brown (the Washington Redskins running back who is totally deaf in one ear) to get his special helmet. We thought we had a sponsor, but they backed out at the last minute."

The special hearing equipment would cost $400, beyond the Stubbs' family's means. They had just bought Bobby a new hearing aid for school that set them back $400. "It was a real complicated situation," explains Mary Stubbs. "We had heard of individuals, and groups, who would sometimes help handicapped youngsters. But where they are now I don't know."

"I think (college football) would be good for Bobby. Other handicapped kids would look at him and say to themselves, 'If Stubbs can make it, we can, too.'"

Bobby himself would like to be a good offensive lineman, but he is also proud of being part of one of the stingiest defensive units in the Eastern District. "Our defense has established itself," he says. "I don't think there's a better defensive team around than us. I know that no one hits harder than us."

It has been a frustrating year for the Falcons. Despite a consistently unyielding defense, the total offensive output in six games has been just two touchdowns. Their overall record is 1-5. But their win was a stunning 7-0 victory over rival First Colonial Oct. 11.

One can sense Bobby's personal frustration at the team's record. "I want a winning record," he says. "I want to go home happy." Bobby lists the games they came so close to winning: Bayside, Princess Anne, Lake Taylor, Maury. In the last two, Bobby made 10 individual tackles from his defensive spot.

"He personally put Taylor's Amos Lawrence out of the game," says Habit. The Falcons lost to the Titans in that one, 8-0, in the last two minutes. Habit adds that in their opener with Princess Anne he had forgotten to tell the referee about Stubbs. On his first tackle, Bobby stopped the Cavalier ball-carrier but the runner continued to move so Bobby threw him down. "They nearly called a penalty on us," says Habit. "I had to explain that Bobby can't hear the whistle, so he'll go until the man is down."

"We've got the best coaches around," says Bobby Stubbs of the Cox staff. "That's why we're going to have a good team. I can't believe how we've let them down, especially against Princess Anne. We haven't carried the coach off the field once yet this year."

Bobby Stubbs resembles in many ways the archetypal All-American Boy in his devotion to sports and remarkable ability to overcome a serious handicap.

"I can't believe how we let them (the coaches) down, especially against P.A. We haven't carried the coach off the field once yet this year."

"He's a miracle," says Bobby's mother. "He's in his proper grade level in school for his age, and that's unusual for young people with his handicap. His teachers are constantly amazed at how fast he can grasp ideas." She adds with a typical parental sigh, "But he's not the hardest working student in the world."

"I'd like to play football at North Carolina," Bobby says. "I want to go somewhere where there will be people around me."

"I think his Dad wants him to go to UNC," grins Mary Stubbs, "and if she would like to see her son play college football. I think it would be good for Bobby, and I think it would help other handicapped kids."

"They'll see Bobby and say to themselves, 'If Stubbs can make it, we can, too.'"

Cox - Kellam on TV Sat.

Local television history will be made Oct. 26 when WAVY-TV televises live the Cox-Kellam high school football game from the Kellam High football stadium in Virginia Beach.

"It will be the same format as a college game," said WAVY's field director for the game broadcast, Chuck Moyer. "This broadcast is a feeler. What we're going to do on the air is try to get other schools interested in televising their games to contact us. "Moyer said the game's play-by-play announcer will be WAVY's sports man, David Sullivan. Cox and Kellam students Steve Roche and Art Stewart will provide the "color" half of the audio patter with Sullivan. The broadcast will also feature student field announcers Vicki Lancaster of Kellam and Amy Fisher of Cox. The girls will make spot reports from the playing field. Kellam's spotter will be Kirk Harrington. The game will be telecast live beginning at 12:40 p.m., with a pre-game show starting at 12:30. The game will be re-broadcast on WAVY at 11:30 p.m. "The purpose of this is so that everyone, the players and bands and so forth, can see themselves," said Moyer. He added that co-operation between the schools and WAVY has been excellent.

At this point, what one area still needs work?

Terry Morton,
Bayside

"Well, it's our offense we need to work on. Up to now we've been playing pretty good defense, but those guys are out there too long. We're too inconsistent - too much of this run three plays and punt. You've got to control the ball or you're not going to win games.

Ed Booth,
Kempsville

"I'm not dissatisfied with any particular aspect of our game. I think we do everything pretty well."

Al Habit,
Cox

"It's very obvious. We need to score more. We need to move the ball. We've got to improve on our blocking and game execution. We fumbled five times in one half last night (against Kempsville). You can't do that."

Ralph Gahagan,
Princess Anne

"Probably our passing attack. We haven't been passing as much as we should, and if anything has been lagging behind it has been our passing. We've got a good end in Craig Vosler, but we just haven't been throwing enough."

Johnny Cooke,
Kellam

"Our punt receiving. Our longest return in the last two years on punts was seven yards (Jim Ferebee, Oct. 16 against Princess Anne). You can never spend too much time on your kicking game. I've been a little disappointed, but I have confidence in the people we have back there."

Frank Webster,
First Colonial

"I tell you our biggest problem right now is that we're fumbling the ball too much. We're just throwing it away. It's tough to put your finger on how to stop it."

Keys to Victory

Cox at Kellam

A game destined to be a milestone in more ways than one, it is to be the first Beach high school football game televised locally, with tremendous interest for city football fans. The contest will pit the most vaunted offense in Virginia Beach against the most unyielding defense, a classic football confrontation. The Knights are still awesome offensively with a big, quick line and a backfield that has no weakness in quarterback Gene Bunn, halfbacks Margo Dixon, George Woodhouse and Adolphus Haynes, and fullback Jim Ferebee. Bunn's top receiver is Steve Searcell, a 5-9 155-pound senior end who has been tough in clutch situations for the Knights. Against them, the Cox Falcons throw their tough 8-man defense line featuring Bobby Stubbs (220), Bill Barnette (193), Brian Reineau (188), and senior linebacker Derek Cansan (187). And the Falcons have been running well in recent games, mainly Larry Goffigan and Mike Cuffee. It could be a televised toss-up.

Princess Anne at Kempsville

The Cavaliers are right in the meat of their schedule, having suffered two close losses to Maury and Norview, and after they meet the Chiefs they still have to face Lake Taylor. So Ralph Gahagan will have his hands full trying to get his players up each week, as well as in reviving the Cavalier ball-control offense that ran like a well-oiled machine early in the season but has floundered in mid-schedule. The Chiefs are reviving an offense that has been scoring better than 22 points a game, and a defense that has shut out teams like Lake Taylor and stopped backfields like Maury's Commodores. But the Cavalier defense has been stingy, too, on the play of people like tackle Matt Ambrose. If the Chiefs are going to win convincingly, they must score early because Gahagan's defenses improve with age.

Bayside at Lake Taylor (Met Park)

Morton's Marlins travel a bit farther down Shore Drive to Met Park to take on another Norfolk squad, this time the mighty Titans. Bayside head coach Terry Morton will have no relief from recurring headaches for the rest of the season. After Lake Taylor, they still must meet Norview and Princess Anne. Bayside's young offense has a budding passing combination in quarterback Budch Butler and receiver Artie Bueche, and an equally young line featuring huge Bernard Hines and Mark Whitehouse, a fine tackle coming off an injury. The will have to stop a backfield that includes Amos Lawrence and Ricky Barden, and the back field has such depth that injuries will not cripple the attack. Morton's Marlins cannot depend on their defense. They must score to stay in the game.

Craddock at First Colonial

The Patriots have two relatively easy weeks in a row (Booker T. last week) when they host the Admirals. Craddock has had an anemic season, but the high-point was a stunning upset of powerful Western Branch two weeks ago. The Admirals simply took advantage of Bruin mistakes, and First Colonial will need to play a steady offensive ball-control game to overpower Craddock. Over-confidence will help the Admirals. It was a factor that helped them to beat Western Branch, and the Patriots were ridden with it when they traveled to Cox-and were upset. But don't stop Tracy Moon and Bill Harris for long.

Friday Night Heroes

Billy Adams, defensive tackle, Kempsville

The Kempsville defense hit nose-to-nose with the Cox Falcons last Friday, and in such a battle of defensive teams, it was inevitable that a defensive lineman contribute in the scoring column. Adams is small for a defensive tackle at 170 pounds, but he pulled off the key defensive play of the night for the Chiefs by dropping Falcon quarterback Blaine Cipriano in his own end zone for a safety in the first quarter. Adams spearheaded a tough Chief defense that stopped Cox cold offensively with just 110 yards total offense, and by forcing six fumbles and recovering four of them.

Jimmie Britt, fullback, Kellam

This 5-11 170-pound powerhouse for the Knights was a one-man show last weekend when Kellam took apart Princess Anne, 21-0. Britt rammed for 182 yards - better than half of Kellam's total offensive effort - and tallied twice for the Knights, one a 35-yard bust up the middle that left Cavalier defenders gaping. Britt put the game out of reach of the Cavaliers with a one yard run mid-way through the fourth quarter. The Knights now sport a 6-1 record.

Tracy Moon, quarterback, First Colonial

Moon is field general for one of the most versatile offensive teams in the city, but one that has not completely beaten its penchant for fumbling. The Patriots' Oct. 18 meeting with Booker T. Washington was a perfect example. This 6-0, 185-pound quarterback directed an attack that rolled up 336 yards total offense against the Bookers. Moon sprinted six yards himself for the first tally, then tossed a 32-yard aerial to end Ron Zollcoffer, a combination tops in the district in touchdown passes. Moon mixed up the scoring, sending Jerry Onalizer and Mike Black on scoring romps, and handing off to halfback Bill Harris for three consecutive two-point conversions. The Patriots are now 4-3 in the district.

Winners in Sun football contest

The winner of last week's football contest is Don Riswick of Gaston Ct. in Chesapeake.
Selwyn Johnson of Bayside Borough in Virginia Beach was second and E.L. Harrison, Jr. of Chesapeake was the third winner. Many entrants guessed the winner of the tie breaker, but all the point spreads were way off. The final was So. Mississippi 15 and VMI 14.

Election

"You don't kill inflation by postponing a pay raise," he added, "by permanent means and by cutting unnecessary spending."

"We've got to reform the welfare system," Whitehurst emphasized, "There's entirely too much waste."

"The American people are worried, apprehensive about what's happened to the economy. They are looking for leadership and direction, and it's up to Congress and the President."

--Whitehurst

Richards, 42, who is executive director of the Education Association of Norfolk, a teachers' labor organization, agrees that the federal budget should be balanced, but not by trimming social programs.

"I'm not a budget buster," Richards said, "The federal budget is hurting for revenue, not because of expenses, but because administrative policies have caused us to have less revenue."

He believes tax reform that would close loopholes for the wealthy and end preferences for large corporate interests could pump enough additional revenue into the federal coffers to end the budget crunch.

"The richer you are, the better you can avoid taxes," Richards contended, "and you don't even have to try. I was amazed. I bought a duplex one time and I learned what depreciation is. I sold it and I found out what capital gains is."

"We should allow measures for investment incentive," he added, "but there's a limit, and we've reached the limit."

Richards also opposes the President's proposed 5 per cent tax surcharge unless the tax system is overhauled.

Because corporations have special exemptions and tax credits, the Democratic candidate charged, the surtax "still gives corporations a big break. It compounds an inequitable tax situation. It hits the middle income people already supporting the poor and unfortunate and paying for the comforts of the rich. There are a lot more loopholes available to a guy who makes $50,000."

Whitehurst, too, was less than enthusiastic about the proposed surtax. "Obviously we don't want to grind the middle income taxpayer. It (surtax) must be part of an overall tax reform."

The congressman has drawn up a tax reform package of his own, which would lower the exemption on sheltered income from $30,000 to $10,000, a measure he said would bring $3 billion to the federal government.

"This would go a long way toward removing the inequalities of our tax system," he said, "and end the spectacle of millionaires paying no income tax."

And because inflation has boosted the cost of living in the past 20 years 80 percent while the personal exemption on income tax only increased 25 percent, Whitehurst is proposing a $200 tax credit for dependents.

"It would not reduce federal revenue," he explained, "but would provide much needed tax relief to low and middle income families."

However, Whitehurst opposes elimination of depreciation provision and investment credits for corporations and oil conglomerates. "It might increase revenue," he admitted, "but it would be counterproductive in the long run."

If the country begins "punitive taxation of business," he warned, "it will result in fewer jobs, decreasing national productivity, more inflation and a lower standard of living for everyone."

On the other side, Richards believes that big business is already too powerful. "The multi-national corporations have terrific political and economic clout."

If we didn't have Social Security, even with its inequities, disability and retirement benefits to keep the money flowing, we'd be in a severe depression.

--Richards

He favors President Ford's recommendation to enforce anti-trust laws, but he is skeptical. "I'd like to believe him. I want to, but if the past is any indication of the future, it's difficult."

But Richards does think Congress can attempt to control the power of large corporations, and therefore increase the little businessman's chances in the marketplace by passing laws that "don't allow them (corporations) to get that big."

Richards also opposes squeezing federal revenue out of social service programs, which he said helps dollars turn over in the economy. "If we didn't have Social Security, even with its inequities, disability and retirement benefits to keep the money

Congress should not vote for budget busting amendments. It isn't that the causes aren't good. It's how much do you want to spend.

--Whitehurst

flowing, we'd be in a severe depression now."

And the Democratic contender thinks that extending unemployment benefits for another 13 weeks is a good idea. He also advocates the use of public funds to create jobs. "There are five million people out of work," he remarked, "and that doesn't say anything about the people who have been out of work more than 20 weeks," when their unemployment benefits end.

The candidates also looked at the issues of amnesty, the presidential pardon and the Virginia Electric Power Company's $97.7 million rate increase.

Both men believe that deserters should be turned over to military authorities, but their views on draft evaders differed. "The deserter is under martial law," Richards said. "He took the oath. But draft evaders would be considered on an individual basis."

Whitehurst said, "I opposed amnesty for deserters. They put the uniform on and took an oath of loyalty. They're accountable to a court of military justice. As for evaders," he added, "the next time we have a war, we run the risk of a precedent set that could be disastrous in retaining manpower."

The presidential pardon also brought different answers from the candidates.

Richards contended that the pardon was "an extension of the coverup. We'll never know the truth of what was really going on." He said he believes that the pardon was "predetermined," and charged that "it set a precedent for two classes of citizens: the politically favored and the rest of us."

Whitehurst said Nixon's acceptance of the pardon "indicated he recognized his guilt." The congressman said he believed Ford's offer to pardon the former president was the right decision. "A long trail involving Nixon would only serve to be divisive and distracting."

However, he said he believes that Nixon should testify on the Watergate scandal as soon as his doctors declare that the former president is physically able to appear in court.

Whitehurst, who lives at 424 Discovery Road, Virginia Beach, with his wife, Jeanette, said he has collected $50,000 to run his campaign, including $11,000 from a fundraising breakfast. He said 1,100 persons have contributed to his campaign, and that most of the donations do not exceed $1,000. Whitehurst has two grown children.

The incumbent is a director of the Bank of Commerce, Virginia Beach; director of Virginia Home Insurance Company, and a partner in Rodeside Properties. Before he was elected to Congress, Whitehurst was a university history professor for 17 years.

Richards lives at 4613 Player Lane, Virginia Beach, with his wife, Nancy, who is a music teacher at Thalia Elementary School, Virginia Beach. They have three grown children.

An ordained minister in the Reorganized Church of the Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Richards has been employed as executive director of the education association for the past six years.

I'm not a budget buster. The federal budget is hurting for revenue, not because of expenses, but because administrative policies have caused us to have less revenue.

--Richards

The challenger said he has $20,000 campaign budget, including $6,000 of his own money.

Richards said he is "very encouraged" in his effort to unseat an incumbent who chalked up 73 per cent of the vote two years ago. But, he admitted, "it's still uphill."

"Whitehurst's advantage is that he is an incumbent and has lots of money," Richards added, "but my advantage is I've got his voting record."

United Way Cut-A-Thon scheduled

A team of well-known professional hair dressers will be clipping locks for the benefit of United Way during a Cut-A-Thon Oct. 28 at Miller and Rhoads at the Pembroke Mall.

John and Suzanne Chadwick will give Clembly Chadwick blow cuts with 10 assistants from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. for a $6.50 donation, which is tax deductible.

The Chadwicks are fashion and technical directors of Clembly International, which operates beauty salons in department stores throughout the United States and in several foreign countries.

The hair dressers will contribute their services for the United Way fundraiser, and they reported that the donations are approximately half the cost of a haircut and blow-drying in their salons.

When 300 sophisticated bankers were asked how they invested their own money, guess what 9 out of 10 admitted?

They were asked: "How do you invest today for maximum enjoyment and return tomorrow?"

The choices ranged from real estate to coins and stamps. From stocks and bonds to pension plans.

The bankers were all executives and officers. From banking institutions in twelve of the largest cities across the country. They were all professional investment counselors, men who knew the money market and knew the best ways to get the highest yield on their money.

Yet, for their own investments, 88% chose a savings account as one of the most important investment options.

How come? Because in spite of everything (our wobbly economy, the ups and downs on Wall Street) a savings account is still the soundest and surest investment we can make.

For bankers as well as everyone else. Because on pay day, we aren't too different from you.

We have our bills to pay. We have our plans for the future, too.

With a savings account our money is always there when we need it and we can get to it any time we want it.

There's a sense of security in that.

So if you're facing a decision on how to plan for the future, don't face it alone.

At United Virginia, we can help you decide the best way to save your money. (And it will probably be very much like the way we invest our own.)

If three hundred banking executives across the country haven't convinced you, come talk to your personal banker at United Virginia.

In spite of today's economy a savings account still hasn't gone out of style.

Summer in the Med

Beach cadets beat routine on Navy JROTC cruise

Six Virginia Beach high school students were among 20 Virginia and Maryland students who beat the hum-drum of summer routine by participating in a Navy Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps (NJROTC) summer cruise.

During the six-week Mediterranean cruise aboard the store ship USS Denebola, they helped replenish the U.S. Sixth Fleet both in port and at sea during the Cyprus crisis.

The cadets, chosen by the Naval Science instructors in their high schools, began indoctrination at the Norfolk Naval Air Station before steaming through Chesapeake Bay into the Atlantic Ocean July 22.

Virginia Beach cadets were Dean Scott Biehlitz, 17, 167 Coral Gable Court, of Keitiam High School; John F. Bledsoe, 17, 620 Breeds Hill Road, of Princess Anne High School; Paul Michael Kelly, 16, 1032 Josephine Crescent, of Kempsville High School; James Elroy Reightier, 5001 Smith Farm Road, of Bayside High School; Don V. Weiss, 17, 913 General Hill Drive, of Cox High School; and Lancelot Lemuel Williams, 17, 1116 Loretta Lane, of First Colonial High School.

The Atlantic crossing was a time for orientation, lectures and watch standing. For watches, cadets were divided between the deck and engineering departments, with roles being reversed for the return voyage to allow on-the-job training in all phases of shipboard watch standing. Lectures covered engineering, deck, bridge and supply evolutions. They also participated in general quarters, abandon ship, man overboard and fire and collision drills with the Denebola's crew.

Entering the Mediterranean through the Straits of Gibraltar triggered initial break-out of cargo. Five cadets were assigned to each of four cargo hold crews as preparations for consolidation operations with the combat store ship USS Concord.

Following the transfer of food and stores to the Concord the cadets received their first liberty. It was the first time overseas for all 20 and it had been two weeks since they were last on dry land.

Replenishment of the Sixth Fleet resumed Aug. 7 with underway replenishment of the USS Independence. While the aircraft carrier received food and stores alongside the Denebola Cadet Bledsoe was lifted by helicopter to the Independence for a reunion with his father, Lt. Cmdr. John Bledsoe, maintenance officer of Carrier Air Wing Seven, embarked in the Independence.

Nine other ships were replenished with the help of the cadets. During one replenishment near Augusta Bay, the Denebola passed the active island volcano of Stromboli which was erupting.

Four days of liberty in Naples awaited cadets and crew. Some cadets took a USO tour of Rome. Others toured the Roman Forum, the Colosseum, the Catacombs of St. Callistus, the Church of St. Peter in Vinculis with Michelangelo's Pieta, the Vatican museums, the Sistine Chapel, the Trevi Fountain of the Three Coins and the Pantheon temple.

Later, the cadets were given a three-day liberty in Malaga, Spain, on the Costa del Sol (Coast of the Sun). This gave them a chance to mingle with Spanish, German, French, English and Scandinavian people vacationing on the Spanish Riviera. The neighboring resort of Torremolinos attracted most of the cadets and crew to its sunny beaches, surf, sidewalk cafes and discotheques. Another highlight was a bullfight in Marbella, Spain.

Final liberty was Rota, Spain, as the Denebola took on fuel and cargo for its return voyage to Norfolk. Recrossing the Atlantic, cadets received lectures on visual signaling, damage control, piloting and celestial navigation, survival in water (including equipment and abandon ship procedures) and the Uniform Code of Military Justice. During a general quarters drill, cadets watched as the twin three-inch, 50-caliber, rapid-fire batteries fired 70 rounds of live ammunition. This was followed by small arms training which included firing the M-1 rifle and the .45 caliber automatic pistol.

The Norfolk arrival was delayed a few hours as the ship changed course to evade tropical storm Dolly moving up the East Coast.

The cadets were selected "Cadets of the Cruise" They were Dean Biehlitz of Virginia Beach and Randy Donnellson of Yorktown. Each received a plaque from Commander R.F. Dewey, the Denebola's commanding officer.

This was the fourth such NJROTC cadet summer training cruise since their establishment in 1972.

One-time Broadway star finds niche in Little Theatre

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Faye Winfield Edwards made it big on Broadway when, by a lucky stroke, she landed the leading role in a play which ran for a year. She was Hollywood-bound when she gave it all up to get married.

Now, 18 years later, Mrs. Edwards returned to the theatre for the first time since she entertained New York audiences as Katie Yoder in "Plain and Fancy," but this time her stage is the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Edwards is Adriana, the leading female role in the theatre's opening comedy-musical, "The Boys From Syracuse."

Curtains will rise for performances at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 25, 26, Nov. 1 and 2 and at 3 p.m. Oct. 27 at the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach, 24th Street and Barberton Drive. Tickets are $3.75 for adults and $2 for students. Reservations can be made by calling 428-9523.

"I really am a homebody," remarked Mrs. Edwards, 39, who is living in Virginia Beach with her husband, William, and their five children. "I don't think I ever would have left show business if I hadn't been given an ultimatum."

Her husband-to-be gave her a choice - an acting career or marriage, and Mrs. Edwards chose love over fame as a Hollywood and Broadway star. When she left theatre, Mrs. Edwards had a role in a Paramount film, and her managers had more lined up, the actress recalled. When she decided to get married and have a family instead, she added, "my managers had a fit. Now they handle Bill Dana and Don Adams, and I'd love to let them know what I was doing."

Mrs. Edwards, was a member of the Virginia Beach Civic Chorus, but she dropped out this year to pursue other interests - namely, theatre.

"I've been dying to do a dinner theatre," she admitted, "but my husband said absolutely not. It's six nights a week."

Instead, Mrs. Edwards decided to try out for a Little Theatre production. "Sometimes they do a nice job," she said, "and I kept my fingers crossed. They're doing a nice job in this show."

She went to the try-outs and returned home - somewhat sheepishly - with the leading role under her arm.

Mrs. Edwards said she has tried to limit the time she's spending on the musical for her family's sake, but she added, "I'm enjoying every minute of it!"

"I've enjoyed working in 'The Boys From Syracuse,'" the actress said. "It's been a lot of fun. And, she added, part of it was "proving that I could do it."

She is already looking at the schedule of Little Theatre plays to see if she wants to get involved with another production. The idea of an acting role - without singing - intrigues her.

Mrs. Edwards, who started out in a Broadway chorus, had no acting experience at all until she wound up in a leading role in "Plain and Fancy."

"I walked on a Broadway stage on my very first acting job, and I'd never even been in a high school play," she admitted. "I don't even know how I did it."

The hardest part of her role in "The Boys From Syracuse" was nailing down the finer points of facial expression, Mrs. Edwards said. The singing was easy.

But as far as music goes, she is a veteran performer. The former Broadway actress recently received kudos for a "Night of Nostalgia" featuring a medley of old favorites this summer, which she performed with her brother-in-law, Anthony Rossi.

In addition to "Plain and Fancy," Mrs. Edwards sang in the chorus for "Carousel," "South Pacific" and "Fanny." She also performed with Sid Caesar and the Arthur Godfrey Morning Show years ago.

She got her break when she was 19 during a New York audition when she met her managers, who instructed her in singing, dancing, speech and voice, "everything you can think of," Mrs. Edwards said. "I loved it. It was all new, and I loved to sing."

Broadway's loss may be Virginia Beach's gain, as the acting bug starts tickling Mrs. Edwards' fancy. "But," she added, "I just want to do the fun part."

Antique Showsale set

Thirty-seven antique dealers will put their wares on display at the Sixteenth Annual Antiques Showsale sponsored by the Princess Anne Women's Club of Virginia Beach Oct. 24 to 27. The showsale will be held at the Virginia Beach Civic Center, 19th Street and Pacific Avenue. It will feature dealers from Virginia, New York, North Carolina and Georgia. Hours for the antique showsale will be 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily, except for Oct. 27, the last day, when the hours will be 1 to 6 p.m. Tickets will be $1.50 and may be purchased at the door or in advance from club members. Proceeds will be used for the club's community projects, including scholarships, Hospitality House for Armed Forces and the Hope Haven Children's Home.

Mrs. H.J. Stansell, club president, reported that the club has sold all of the display area, and there is a waiting list of dealers who would like to participate in the show.

Antiques will range from furniture and jewelry to farming tools, and all of the merchandise will be for sale.

For antique buffs who work up an appetite, the woman's club will provide a "Country Kitchen" with ham biscuits, barbecue, sandwiches and dessert. The kitchen will offer a luncheon soup special every day, with turkey gumbo on the menu Oct. 24, crab soup Oct. 25, Brunswick stew Oct. 26 and hamburger supreme Oct. 27.

And for the first time, the "Country Kitchen" staff will have a man in the kitchen. John Marr, husband of a new member and a former restaurateur, will don a cap and apron to help the women prepare the food.

Last year we brought you over $700 million worth of appliances. You've got a lot riding on us.

A lot of appliances rode our rails in 1973. We estimate that the manufacturers' value for appliances we shipped amounted to $715 million.

And when you put Southern's shipments together with all other railroads, you've got over 70% of all the appliances Americans buy.

Why does the appliance industry and so many other industries ship by rail? They know it's usually the most economical way to go.

Consider these figures for the thousands of things shipped by rail. The average cost per-ton-mile by truck is five times as much as by rail. Air shipping is over fourteen times the price.

And the fuel crunch has made railroad efficiency more than just a matter of dollars and cents. It's a matter of delivering the goods with the smallest possible use of fuel.

Then there's the reliability of rail shipping. Add this on to everything else and you have a good idea why there's so much riding on us. And why you need Southern.

OCTOBER 24 SHOULD BE PROCLAIMED A

DAY OF SHAME

In October 1971 — on the 26th anniversary of the founding of the United Nations — the UN voted to expel the Republic of China and to seat instead the regime of Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai. Thus, the greatest mass murderers in human history were welcomed to this world body.

At least 64 million human beings have died at the hands of the Red Chinese tyrants. Thousands more are dying in America from Red China's principle export — heroin. For this reason, and many more, we believe it is time to Get US Out of the United Nations and declare October 24 a Day Of Shame.

Oceana WAVE 'Sailor of Month'

A Virginia Beach WAVE has been selected as October Sailor of the Month at Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana.

Personnelman Seaman Patricia Bell of 244 Rosemont Road works in the Enlisted Personnel Office where she handles the paperwork for reenlistments and discharges.

Mrs. Bell is married and her husband, James, have no children. She has been assigned to Oceana for one year.

As sailor of the month, she will receive a free steak dinner for two, an engraved watch, a 72-hour liberty and a two-day stay at the Twin Bridges Marriott Hotel in Washington, D.C. She also will receive a framed letter of commendation for her work.

SEAMAN BELL

The future of Virginia Beach's year-round school program may be decided at a special meeting of the School Board 8 p.m. Oct. 24 at Plaza Junior High School.

The School Board had been expected to make a decision on the controversial two-year pilot school program in November, but a special meeting to consider the program was called this week.

Year-round schools, or the 45-15 program, is under trial run at four elementary schools, Windsor Woods, Windsor Oaks, Holland and Plaza Elementary Schools.

Under the program, students are in class for nine weeks, then on vacation for three weeks before the next nine-week session starts. The students attend school year-round, including the summer.

The program enables the schools to put 25 per cent more students into each building, and school officials are considering the plan as a way to meet the needs of the steadily increasing student population.

Parents who favor the 45-15 plan say that their children enjoy school more and retain more from their classes because the vacation breaks are so short. Opponents of the program say it upsets family schedules, especially if the family has high school children on the traditional nine-month school year, and that it makes family vacation planning difficult because the children are in school for most of the summer.

A school system survey of parents involved in the year-round program indicates that a slim majority favor continuation of the pilot program, while 28.3 per cent are against it. Another 21.4 per cent were undecided.

The School Board will have the options of continuing the 45-15 program in the pilot schools, extending it to other schools or dropping the year-round program altogether.

Goblins, ghosts at libraries

City of Virginia Beach public libraries are planning some special Halloween events for city youngsters, according to Librarian Ann Scott.

October 24 and 25, the Windsor Woods branch will hold its regular story hours for children ages 3-5, and the kids will be encouraged to come in costumes. The branch will have surprises and treats at 10 and 11 a.m. on the 24th and at 10 a.m. on the 25th.

The Virginia Beach branch will join the festivities with a celebration at 10 a.m. Oct. 25. The events at the Kempville branch will be held on Oct. 25 at 10 and 11 a.m. Kempville will also have some goblins and ghouls on hand for children in kindergarten through third grade on the 24th at 4 p.m.

On Halloween, at 4 p.m., there will be a city-wide costume contest in front of the fountain at Pembroke Mall. Children ages 3-14 are invited to participate. There will be trophies, prizes and ribbons awarded in three different age groups and a prize for most original costume. Candy the Clown will be present to entertain and present prizes.

IRS clears parochial school

A Virginia Beach parochial school whose tax exempt status was threatened because of reported racial discrimination recently received a clean bill of health from the Internal Revenue Service.

The Tidewater Christian Schools, Inc. is now considered a charity under the tax law, according to James Boyle, district director for the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). He explained that the change means that persons who make contributions to the school may now deduct them as charitable contributions, including the time months the school was held under IRS suspension.

In January, the IRS had placed the schools on suspension, which meant that the agency would not guarantee that contributions would be tax deductible. However, the IRS reported that Tidewater Christian Schools, Inc., has recently adopted and publicized nondiscriminatory admissions policies.

4 are 'critical'

Lake dams might fail, study finds

Dams on four lakes in Virginia Beach are "in critical need of repair" and may eventually fail if nothing is done, according to a report released this week by the Virginia Beach administrative staff.

Two lakes owned by the City of Norfolk, Sajo Farm Lake and Stumpy Lake, were classified by Virginia Beach planners as "incipient failures," along with two private lakes, Southern Point and Carolanne Farm.

Sajo Farm, encompasses 48.1 acres on Lake Smith, and Stumpy Lake, covers 237 acres. Surrounding property owners are responsible for the 8-acre area of Southern Point Lake, while ownership of Carolanne Lake is shared by property owners who hold title to the lake bottom and a corporation which owns the dam.

The endangered lake were created from old farm ponds, according to City Planner Rhys Kerr. "They were not built to specifications because it was too expensive," he explained. The basic problem is most of the older dams were not constructed of solid material but were built with rocks and debris available at the sight.

The lakes are "already beginning to fail," according to the study which was initiated after the Lake Trant dam broke this summer spilling out water and leaving adjacent homeowners with views of mud flats instead of the lakefront.

Since the Lake Trant dam break Virginia Beach has been pondering its relationship to the lakes sprinkled across its map, especially since 80 per cent of the lakes are privately-owned.

The study which councilmen received during an informal Monday session recommended that Virginia Beach refuse to maintain or be liable for private lakes.

Kerr, who presented the study to councilmen, said legal research determined that "private lakes are just that - private. The city has no control, except for its police powers" which allows the city to inspect lakes for pollution or other public safety matters.

And because Virginia Beach has no control of over private lakes, Kerr reported, "it has no direct responsibility or liability for private lakes."

However, the study did suggest that the city manager ask the City of Norfolk to examine the condition of the five lakes it owns in Virginia Beach, including Sajo Farm and Stumpy Lakes.

In addition, the report recommended that the Council enforce the Virginia State Code for water quality which gives municipalities the authority to test water for pollution and to post areas where the water is contaminated.

The study catalogued 85 lakes of five acres or more which dot Virginia Beach's landscape. It looked into lake size, type of lake and lake ownership. Although the Council did not vote on the report, some councilmen expressed doubts that homeowner organizations could be expected to handle expensive dam-building projects.

For example, Lake Trant repairs are estimated to cost $30,000, but the only bidder asked $60,000.

Councilman John Griffin, who said he has experience with his own homeowners group, said, "I don't believe homeowner organizations will ever be successful in maintaining dams. I belong to one, and we can't even raise a $5 fee."

Councilman John Baum suggested that special tax assessment districts to maintain lakes might be the answer.

Private lakes benefit only some taxpayers, he explained, and they should be the ones to pay the costs of maintaining dams and lakes. "The area

Schools to search for building funds

Virginia Beach school officials are scrambling to find money for two additional elementary schools that will be needed immediately in the Green Run and Kempsville areas now that the year-round school program is being scrapped.

The School Board authorized its staff to investigate ways to finance the schools, which it hopes to have operating in time for the 1975-76 school year.

The decision to look for money to build new schools, which will cost nearly $3 million, came right after the School Board unanimously agreed to end the 45-15 school program, which was on a two-year trial run in four elementary schools.

Dr. James Mounie, assistant superintendent for research, planning and development, told The Sun that two schools are needed immediately in the fast-growing Kempsville and Green Run areas, where existing schools are already overcrowded.

School officials had hoped that the year-round program, which allows each school building to accommodate 25 per cent more students, might be a solution to the overcrowded classrooms in what the school administrators describe as the city's "growth corridor," in Kempsville and Green Run.

Last month in an interview with The Sun, Mounie had stated that the two schools would be needed even if the year-round program were expanded from the four pilot schools in the Princess Anne Plaza area.

When asked this week what new schools will be needed in the long-run because the year-round program is being discontinued, Mounie replied that he wasn't prepared to make an estimate.

Mounie said the School Board could try to seek money from the City Council or it could ask voters to approve a school bond for the two new elementary schools.

Schools' Public Information Officer John Holgate said one of the reasons the School Board called a special meeting to consider the year-round program instead of waiting until its regular November meeting was to accelerate planning for the new schools.

"It takes nine months to a year to build a school," Holgate explained, "and here we are in October."

Mounie said he recommended that year-round schools be discontinued mainly because of the high mobility of families in Virginia Beach. He said 20 per cent of the families involved in the program moved in or out of the pilot school program each year, and it was difficult to balance each cycle year, and it was difficult to balance enrollment in each cycle to avoid overcrowding.

The result was that enrollment in some cycles was small, while other year-round classes were overcrowded.

Now school administrators are working on a phase-out of the year-round program which will change the vacation schedules of the last cycle.

Otherwise, a public information spokesman said, students in Cycle D would complete their summer classes and return to school in September without a break.

The spring vacation for Cycle D probably will be shortened so that it ends the 1974-75 school year with Cycle C on July 31, but the proposed changes are "still in planning," according to the public information office.

Amendment on Tuesday's ballot

Beach legislators back student aid

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

State aid to students attending private colleges would save money in the long run, according to Virginia Beach's four representatives in the General Assembly, who believe grants to students would be less expensive than expanding state college facilities.

Sen. Joseph Canada, a Republican, and Del. Owen Pickett, Del. Glenn McClanahan and Del. Donald Rhodes, all Democrats, told The Sun that they support a constitutional amendment on the Tuesday's ballot which would give the Assembly the power to give grants directly to students enrolled in private colleges.

The legislators say that the gap between tuition at state colleges and private institutions - approximately $1,400 - is forcing more and more students to turn to the state for higher education.

As a result, state colleges are crowded, while some private colleges don't have enough students to stay in business.

Pickett reported that 26 private colleges in Virginia were operating in the red last year, while one college was forced to close its doors.

The amendment also would allow the state to contract for services with private colleges, a move which could pave the way for joint programs between private and public colleges and special training for state employees.

According to Canada, "It's the cheapest way to try to provide education in Virginia." He said private colleges are having a "tough time," while state institutions "are busting at the seams."

Because state tuition is "a lot cheaper for students," he explained, "the enrollment demands are very great. If we were to give some subsidy (to state college students) to help with tuition costs, it would save tax dollars because it would fill up private institutions."

McClanahan agreed. If the amendment is approved, he said, "basically it will save our having to build public classrooms and educational facilities where they already exist" -- in private colleges.

When a public college expands, McClanahan added, it means additional dormitories, classrooms, student centers and cafeterias. "You save fantastically simply on capital improvement expenditures."

The delegate said Virginia has the highest rate of increase in college enrollment in the nation, and the state will end up building facilities it wouldn't have to if the amendment is defeated.

However, McClanahan said he is concerned that most voters do not fully comprehend the proposed constitutional change.

Legal snag mires Trant dam building

By NEAL SIMS
Sun Editor

An unexpected legal snag has delayed finalization of the city's plan to reconstruct Lake Trant Dam. City Atty. J. Dale Bimson said Monday that any repair work performed by the city on the dam which collapsed last June would be beyond the powers of the city according to his research.

A recommendation that the city repair the dam at a cost of $30,000 payable by the developers and residents of Trantwood was deferred for one week by Council Monday.

One councilman said the matter had been discussed by members of the Council and they had indicated a decision would be made on the dam one way or another by next Monday.

Last week Council informally had agreed that in the absence of reasonable construction bids the city would repair the dam for $30,000 paid in advance. Developers would pay $22,500 of the costs.

and property owners would pay $7,500 about $75 per lot.

Bimson said Monday that he saw no problem with the city acting as a "coordinating agent" in the project, asking for construction bids and mediating negotiations between developers and property owners, but the legal problems arise, he said, when the city agrees to undertake the work itself.

The city apparently does not have the authority under Virginia statutes and the city charter to perform repair work on the privately-owned dam, Bimson explained. He said he would have a final opinion on the matter after discussions later this week with City Manager Roger Scott.

In other business Monday, Council: authorized by a vote of 9-0 the issuance and sale of $11,600,000 in public improvement bonds previously approved Aug. 26. Bids will be rejected or approved at a special session of the Council Nov. 20 at 11 a.m.;

Approved 9-0 the transfer of $2,223 from the reserve for contingencies fund to cover expenses connected with helicopter operations; appointed at-large Councilman Patrick L. Standing as the Council's representative on a steering committee to apply for a grant under the recently passed Housing and Community Development Act, which provides federal funds for projects designed to improve the quality of life in lower to middle income areas of cities; increased by a 9-0 vote the salary of Commonwealth's Atty. Andre Evans by $1,620 per year, making his total annual salary $29,820, "to maintain an adequate separation between him and his primary assistant."

Vice-mayor George Ferrell and Councilman Standing were absent from Monday's session.

Council held two executive sessions Monday, closed to the public and the press, to discuss what the agenda listed as "legal" matters. Council met privately for 25 minutes in a morning session and an additional 34 minutes in an afternoon session.

An editorial:

A chance to change

"We take on a burden when we put a man behind walls, and that burden is to give him a chance to change. If we deny him that, we deny his status as a human being, and to deny that is to diminish our own humanity and plant the seeds of future anguish for ourselves."

— Chief Justice Warren E. Burger
U. S. Supreme Court

That statement from Mr. Justice Burger translates simply for Virginia Beach voters — abandon the present city jail which serves as little more than a school for crime, and construct a new correction center.

Tuesday Virginia Beach voters will approve or reject a referendum to provide $5 million for the construction of such a facility. It will be a difficult decision, one that tugs hard at the emotions. A sense of compassion to give offenders a second chance is strained by the understandable inclination to punish those who have wronged society.

But the conditions that mark the present jail are precisely the reasons for approving a new correction center.

The existing jail was built in 1947 to serve Princess Anne County, an agricultural community with a low crime rate and a population of only 40,000. As Virginia Beach grew to its present 218,000 population, the jail deteriorated into an overcrowded, physically inadequate facility far below proper standards for a modern jail.

With a capacity for 55 inmates, the jail frequently bulges with more than 100 prisoners. Youths and first offenders are grouped with persistent law-breakers, reducing any chance for rehabilitation.

Under Virginia Beach Sheriff S.J. "Joe" Smith's plan, the proposed jail will have 193 cells, allowing for the classification of inmates by sex, age and offense. Youths and first offenders will not come into contact with the 67 per cent of the prisoners who are repeat offenders.

Seventy per cent of the cells will be designed for high security, and 30 per cent will be dormitory type or rooms for trustees and inmates on work release programs. In fact, the new center will provide those behind bars with a "chance to change."

Estimates are that it costs taxpayers $14,000 a year to keep one prisoner behind bars. And as Sheriff Smith points out, if you rehabilitate 5 to 10 per cent of your inmates, you've gone a long way toward reducing the crime rate.

The new jail will feature a classroom, recreation hall, chapel, library and exercise yards. These are not luxury amenities, as some opponents of the center have charged, but simply a change from the hostile, dehumanizing conditions of the present jail into an environment which offers inmates some chance at rehabilitation.

Socially, economically and practically, the construction of a new jail is called for. For those who have toured the present jail, to vote against the proposed facility would be next to impossible.

Voters in Virginia Beach Tuesday will have a chance to meet the challenge issued by Mr. Justice Burger. Approval of the referendum would be the first and greatest step toward giving potentially useful citizens a chance to change.

Group works 5 years

Child unit opens doors

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Five years ago, a group of Virginia Beach residents decided that the city needed a child center that was more than a babysitting service.

After years of fund raising and planning that would have drained the enthusiasm from most groups, Project Friendship Child Development Center is ready to swing into full-fledged operation.

"It's been a completely grassroots effort by a group of citizens," explained Mike Barton, the project director. The center, located at 141 S. Birdneck Road in a new building attached to the Seatack Community Center, is ready to show the community what it has to offer.

The center, which has the capacity for 40 youngsters between the ages of 2 and 6, will have a dedication ceremony followed by an open house at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Barton said the Beach area has a need for a good child development center, especially for single parent families who must leave their children to go to work.

'It's been a completely grassroots effort by a group of citizens.'

But in most cases, Barton said, the child is simply left with a babysitter. Project Friendship is something more than that.

"It's not custodial care," he explained, "but a child development program."

"Most parents don't understand the difference between babysitting and child development," Barton said. At Project Friendship, youngsters will "learn to be creative in an environment with other kids."

A stimulating environment allows the children to develop socially, the Project Friendship director said. At the center, youngsters will have "positive experience with different adults."

The children also are encouraged to make full use of their senses in activities that are fun. "A child's medium for growth is play," Barton explained. "And with sensitive adults around, that's the way they grow the best."

'Most parents don't understand the difference between babysitting and child development.' At Project Friendship children will learn to be creative in an environment with other kids.'

Barton said Project Friendship will provide one adult for every six children.

The child development center started with little more than $12,000, most of which was invested in the $18,200 addition to the Seatack Community Center.

Operating expenses come from contributions and weekly tuition paid by parents or sponsors.

Tuition is $17.50 each week for a full-time youngster and $12 a week for a child who stays at the center half-days.

The center, which is open on weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., also has a registration fee of $10 to cover cost of materials and insurance. Special rates also will be available for families with more than one child in the program.

'A child's medium for growth is play. And with sensitive adults around, that's the way they grow best.'

The money is used to pay operating costs, including snacks and hot lunches, and salaries of two full-time teachers and a part-time assistant.

Although the tuition fees are relatively low, Barton said they represent a lot of money to some residents "who can't even afford that. We hope to develop more contributions in the area of scholarships."

Some families may qualify for help with the tuition from the Virginia Department of Social Services, Barton said.

But the child care development center "is not a program for the poor," he emphasized. "We want a cross-section of the community if we can get it."

'It's not a program for the poor. We want a cross-section of the community if we can get it.'

Original plans for the child development center included a three-building complex at a cost of $69,000. The group purchased property behind the community center but were unable to collect enough money to start building.

Construction there was prohibited anyway, Barton said, because the "land is so poor you can't even have a septic tank."

The only alternative was to add on to the existing Seatack Community Center, and at that, the addition was not permitted to include bathroom facilities.

Barton reported that the program has already registered five children, and said he expects enrollment to increase after the dedication.

The Atlantic Fleet Ceremonial Band will be on hand Sunday to begin the dedication ceremony at 2 p.m. with a band concert. Refreshments will be served at the open house from 3 to 4 p.m. following the ceremony.

City seeks grant

The City of Virginia Beach will ask for a $42,521 grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) to develop a study for forecasting future policing needs of the city.

If approved the grant, along with $4,725 in local funds, would finance a study of the type and number of calls for police assistance in sample areas of the city. That information hopefully would allow the city to plan for policing needs over the next several years, said Les Lilley of the city manager's staff.

The grant application should be submitted by the end of November, Lilley said. Six cities will be selected for the study under LEAA's pilot cities program, he said.

NOW levels charges

The Virginia Beach City Council is excluding women from city commissions and boards, the president of the Virginia Beach chapter of the National Organization of Women (NOW) charged this week.

Beverly Paulk 5245 Balfor Drive accused councilmen of paying "lip service" to increased political involvement of women when it endorsed the Women's Equality Week Resolution last August. She said the City Council has still failed to appoint several women to city commissions and boards.

In particular, Ms. Paulk noted that seven proposed members of a proposed Recreational Facilities Authority were all men. If it is formed after public hearing scheduled Monday, the authority would have the power to purchase, develop and operate recreational projects in the city.

Voting law changes

Virginia Beach residents who are registered to vote but haven't gone to the polls since 1971 will lose their voting privileges if they fail to vote in the Nov. 5 election.

A new Virginia law which will take effect next month will remove the names of persons from voter registration books if they have not voted during the last four years, according to Joan Mahan, secretary of the Virginia Board of Elections.

If a voter's name is dropped, he must re-register before he can vote in another election.

Parks hearings slated

Proposed plans for the construction, installation and development of recreational facilities and parks within the city will be discussed at a public hearing before the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission Nov. 14 at 8 p.m. at Plaza Junior High School, 3080 S. Lynnhaven Road.

An annual report of parks and recreational programs also will be presented.

JIM FITZPATRICK

Student tries higher note

By SHELLY HYATT
Virginia Wesleyan College

Jim Fitzpatrick, a senior at Virginia Wesleyan College, does not sing in the shower or in church. But he does sing just about everywhere else - including many Tidewater area restaurants and inns.

"I never sing in the shower," the young vocalist laughs, "and I've never sung in church because I can't sing in the same key as the organist plays."

So, for the past 15 years, Fitzpatrick who is from Westfield, N.J., has been singing in a different key. He has sung with bands and solo, professionally and as an amateur. And he has accompanied himself on the drums, guitar and even on a badminton racquet.

"I've been interested in music since I was in second grade," he recalls. "My friends and I would use badminton racquets as 'guitars' and put on shows for the neighborhood. One summer, some of the guys bought guitars and we played them, making up our own chords."

Soon after, Fitzpatrick began music lessons, which lasted for three days.

"I never practiced," he grips. "I tried to remember what my instructor had taught me from the previous lesson and then tried to fake it."

Now, at age 22, "faking it" is his profession. Currently he is playing in a Beach nightclub.

"I can't read music," he says. "I pick up everything by ear. And if someone wants to hear a song that I don't know, I fool around with the chords until I learn it. That, to me, is the whole idea behind entertainment - to play what the audience wants to hear."

Modeling himself after his favorite song writer, Paul McCartney, Fitzpatrick likes to consider himself a composer rather than a singer.

"I like being a composer," he explains, "because it's personal. I can be proud of what I write." He pauses. "Ideas come easily to me. If I'm in the right mood, I can knock off a song in 20 minutes."

But speed is not his only asset, according to at least one New York agent who wanted to hire Fitzpatrick, the voice, the instrumentalist, the composer and the entertainer to produce Fitzpatrick the recording artist.

To one who felt he had come a long way since badminton racquets, the prospects seemed good. The beginning of school "shut off" the opportunity.

"The only opening for record production was in September," he explains, "when I was already scheduled to begin classes. At the time, school seemed more important."

"It still is," the history-political science major hastens. "Sometimes I do regret not pursuing a profession in music, though. Most of my friends are now accomplished musicians. All I can do is sing."

"Man, I can still remember when I first started singing in front of people," Fitzpatrick says, smiling broadly. "I was with a band and I was the only one who got sick before every performance. Sometimes I would have to leave the stage right in the middle of a song!"

"When I first started performing by myself again here at Virginia Wesleyan, I was very nervous. A lot of college students seem to be more critical of me. Yet, I don't know why, but the people here have been the best crowd I've ever played for. Anywhere else, it seems I can turn on anyone with just a friendly attitude and a smile. Here, the people want to hear something good."

And something good is what they get, according to the response Fitzpatrick's performances receive. Even if he doesn't rehearse in the shower.

Numbers game plagues NJROTC

By MARY RODA
Sun Staff Writer

Joe M., a student at First Colonial High School, has one more year to complete a three-year Navy Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps program (NJROTC), but he may not get the chance.

The program involving 85 students at First Colonial is in jeopardy because it does not have 100 students, a long-standing federal requirement which is just being enforced.

The 100-student minimum has been on the books for 10 years, but last year the Navy began counting heads - a move which sent five of the Virginia Beach's six Naval ROTC units scurrying to get more students involved in the program.

Five Beach schools, Princess Anne, First Colonial, Cox, Bayside and Kempsville were put on probation. Only one, Kellam High School, had more than 100 students, although the others came close.

Bayside and Kempsville were selected for a pilot program designed to increase enrollment by bringing their programs into the ninth grade at neighboring Bayside and Kempsville Junior High Schools.

The other schools began an intensive publicity effort designed to pull in enough students to keep the programs going.

Now First Colonial is the only school that is still on probation, and the rules say that the ROTC unit must be disestablished at the end of the year.

But a Navy public information spokesman said the unit's fate ultimately will be decided the chief of naval education and training in Norfolk.

Commander of the First Colonial cadet unit, Capt. W.C. Nicklas, admits that he's in the dark about the future of the ROTC program at the school.

Last year he personally contacted 1,000 students in groups of 20 or less to spread the word about the program. In addition, he attempted to bring the program into the public eye. He said, "A lot of parents don't know it exists."

Nicklas is concerned that students enrolled in ROTC, including 20 girls, will lose a program that offers a wide range of extracurricular activities, a taste of military life and a higher rating after enlistment which could mean as much as $60 or $70 a month to the student who joins the service after graduation.

The ROTC instructor is also proud of the fact that he has seen a lot of his students opt for military careers or enter college-level ROTC programs.

In 1974, of four ROTC graduates at First Colonial one student joined the Army; in 1973, of 14 graduates 10 followed up with military careers or continued military training, and of 14 graduates in 1972, four entered the service.

And the program is not just for military-bound youngsters, either Nicklas said, "There is a fairly sizable group of young people who do have some pretty high moral principles," he explained who do look at things patriotically and who are sincere about the desire for leadership."

ROTC "enables this type of group to assemble together," Nicklas observed. "Everyone gets a chance to seek out responsibility, a chance to try to lead others. Leadership is a very important part of the program."

And then, Nicklas said, "A lot of the things we do are extra-curricular." The ROTC unit sponsors a drill team, a rifle sharpshooter team and intramural sports.

"A lot of these things are on the fun side," the instructor noted, and the program also gives athletic-minded students who aren't good enough for varsity sports a chance to play in organized teams.

Students join ROTC for a variety of reasons, Nicklas reported. "Everybody likes to belong to something, some group, and most of the kids have some goals."

For example, he said two seniors joined the program this year just because they "want to try a little bit of everything before they get out of school," others are considering military careers and want to see if they like the military atmosphere.

The ROTC commander, also said he senses a change of attitude among students toward the program this year.

"It wasn't the cool thing to be two years ago," Nicklas remarked. But now more students are interested, and Nicklas has seen enrollment jump from 50 cadets in 1972 to 85 this year.

Some schools have branched out into the junior high level to pick up students, but Nicklas said he is not sure if that would work for First Colonial because its students are generated from several different junior high schools. But extending the program to Lynnhaven Junior High is a possibility.

Nicklas cautioned, "We've still got to take a look at it (extending ROTC to junior high schools). It was a test case."

"We're still trying to see if it's effective," he explained. "Can students be taught in two separate schools, and is the program as good for ninth grade students?"

However, ROTC instructors at Kempsville and Bayside Senior High schools where the pilot ROTC extension programs are underway, are enthusiastic about their junior high cadet units, even though it means double duty for them.

"It's working out beautifully," reported Cmdr. Ray Lackore, Kempsville ROTC instructor. "My junior high students are tremendous."

Of his 112 students, 30 are at the Kempsville Junior High, including seven girls.

But Lackore admitted that having both senior and junior high drill teams means "a good bit of extra work. We have double drill teams and double color guards."

The junior and senior high units perform together in parades, but the schools get out at different times so the instructor has to work with the drill teams separately.

Senior cadets service as drill instructors for the junior high teams, Lackore said, "and it gives senior high students a real good opportunity to experience leadership."

Another advantage is that a student who starts the three-year program in the ninth grade have greater flexibility working out his schedule, Lackore reported. If a student finds that he is overburdened for a year, he could take a year off from the ROTC program without worrying about being forced to drop out of ROTC altogether.

At Bayside, Cmdr. Robert Weatherly has 120 students, including 33 at the junior high level. Weatherly also thought extending the program into the ninth grade helps with scheduling.

"Some people have trouble taking it," he explained. "By letting some start one year earlier, they have an opportunity to change their schedule."

Weatherly said he hopes the program continues, especially for the sake of students who have already begun ROTC training.

"I hate to see a kid start something and have to give it up," the instructor remarked. "Putting our job aside, I really think the program is worthwhile."

Other NJROTC units at Virginia Beach schools are hovering on the edge of the 100 student requirement.

There are 101 ROTC students at Cox, 103 at Kellam and 99 at Princess Anne, although the unit had 104 enrolled when the school year began.

ROTC Chief John Reimer, who leads the unit with Cmdr. Jack Dow at Princess Anne, said he thinks the unit doesn't have to worry about being disestablished. The Navy recently removed the Princess Anne ROTC unit from probation.

"We had 104 and we're okay," Reimer explained. "I think they (the Navy) would take that into consideration." The situation would probably be different, he added, "if a school dropped down to 40 or 50."

Cox has a special problem when it comes to recruiting, according to Cmdr. Raymond Newman. Cox has 1,395 students compared to other Beach high schools which average 2,000 students.

Kellam is the one school which has not been threatened by the 100-student minimum, although the cadet unit has only 103 students. Cmdr. William Wheeler, head of the Kellam program, said he would like to see the program extended into the 9th grade.

"We'd like to try to get into the 9th grade next year, primarily to pick up the good people," he reported. But he thinks it will work only for high schools which have a junior high school close by.

It might be more difficult for Kellam to get ROTC students next year, Wheeler said, because the school enrollment dropped to 2,079 students from 2,404 last year when the school boundaries were re-drawn.

Walter Carroll, assistant superintendent for instruction for Beach schools, said the ROTC units have been making an effort to tell students about the program.

"We would hate to lose a unit," he added. "Obviously some students are very much involved. It's been well-received by student."

Carroll noted that some of the smaller schools, such as Cox, have a difficult time getting the minimum number of students or the program. He added, "It's not the simplest thing in the world."

The Navy pays for the salaries of two full-time instructors for each school unit, in addition to purchasing uniforms for the students.

When asked if the 100 student minimum was imposed as a money saving measure, a Navy public information officer reported that the requirement was "regulatory and not budgetary."

In 1972, the people of Virginia's Fourth Congressional district elected Bob Daniel to be their Representative in Congress.

Bob brought a lot of experiences to Washington with him. His hard work at the University of Virginia and Columbia School of Business had earned him a Phi Beta Kappa key. After a stint in the army, he worked as a financial analyst and taught economics. He was active in his local community as a church leader and volunteer fireman. He served Virginia as a member of the state Board of Conservation and Economic Development.

Bob Daniel's abilities were quickly recognized in Congress.

He landed a seat on the important House Armed Services Committee with neighboring Congressmen Bill Whitehurst and Dan Daniel.

The Norfolk Virginia-Pilot said, "the appointment of a freshman Congressman, and the second man from one area to that prestigious committee, may testify to Mr. Daniel's credentials."

Further recognition came when Rep. Edward Hébert, the Louisiana Democrat who heads the committee, asked Bob to serve as the committee's Republican spokesman to steer key legislation through the House.

The Norfolk Ledger-Star described Bob as "hard-working and highly visible." The Richmond Times Dispatch headlined, "He's bright, serious, does homework."

House Republican leader Rep. John Rhodes summed up the praise for Bob Daniel by saying, "Congress needs more men like him."

Bob Daniel thinks that helping individuals with their government problems is as important as his work with legislation. In his first 18 months on the job he answered more than 3,600 calls for help from citizens of the fourth district.

A Chesapeake man praised Bob Daniel for sending him "the first straight forward, non-bureaucratic, non-governmentese information I have been able to get."

"I know that I could not have accomplished this without your help," wrote a Colonial Heights man whose Veterans Administration problem was solved with Bob Daniel's help.

Twin ceremony launches units for Eastern

Eastern International Co. scored a first this week as a double groundbreaking at Virginia Beach's Airport Industrial Park.

The company officially began construction for a two-story building on 3.75 acres at the industrial park's entrance, and it turned over the first scoop of soil for an industrial building on three acres on Bayside Avenue.

Louis C. Goodfarb, vice-president of Eastern Electric Wire and Cable, parent company for Eastern International, and George A. Woody Jr., representing the Virginia Beach Development Authority, broke the ground for the office building.

Assistant City Manager George Hanbury joined Goodfarb for the groundbreaking ceremony at the industrial building.

At a luncheon following the ceremony, Hanbury said, "This is a red letter day for Virginia Beach. It's not just the buildings. They represent payroll, individuals and new blood in the city."

Virginia Beach wants "businessmen with new ideas," Hanbury added. "We like to feel friendly to new industry, especially one that's worked as hard as Eastern International." Walter Alford, Eastern International director, said the "dual groundbreaking" was "a first" for the industrial park.

The $1.2 million office building will contain 38,400 square feet. The construction will be completed within six months.

Goodfarb said the office building will be similar to those in the Kroger complex on Newtown Road, in Norfolk, just west of the Virginia Beach city boundary.

The T-shaped building was designed by Melvin Spence and Associates, a Virginia Beach architectural firm.

Eastern International said the office building, which will be leased, will bring another 150 to 200 employees to the industrial park, according to Alford.

Eastern International also intends to lease the $900,000 industrial building when it is completed. The facility will be 60,480 square feet and will feature square feet and will feature ceilings 20 feet high.

Guests at the groundbreaking also toured a nearly-completed warehouse owned by Eastern Wire and Cable Co. The $2.7 million warehouse, which will be the largest owner-occupied building in Virginia Beach, will be completed by mid-December.

The warehouse will be the main distribution point for Eastern Electric, which imports and distributes wire and cable throughout the United States. Virginia Beach attracted the company, Goodfarb reported, because it is close to the Hampton Roads ports.

The warehouse, which is 400 feet by 800 feet, is about the same size as seven football fields.

Louis C. Goodfarb (left) vice-president of Eastern Electric Wire and Cable, and George A. Woody Jr., of the Virginia Beach Development Authority, is the contractor for the project.

Goodfarb said the warehouse will employ 100 persons at first, and it eventually may provide jobs for as many as 200 employees.

He said 200 workers would represent a $2 million annual payroll.

The warehouse should be operating by this spring, Goodfarb said.

South fills Bayside job

C. Christian South has been appointed financial resident of the yet to be opened Bayside Hospital on Independence Boulevard, in Virginia Beach.

A native of Maryland, South graduated from Johns Hopkins University in 1971 with a B. A. in Natural Sciences. He received his Master's in Business Administration from the university of North Carolina last May.

Parts head promoted

Robert J. Mosko, 825 Brighton Court, Virginia Beach, recently was promoted to after-sales service manager by Clark-lift of Virginia.

Mosko, who was Clark-lift's parts manager for two and one-half years, will be responsible for overall service and stocking and distributing parts for the Virginia Beach corporation.

Sears manager elected to Chamber presidency

Manager of the Pembroke Mall Sears store will serve as the president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce during 1975.

James N. Fletcher, a Chamber board director, has been a Virginia Beach resident during the past five years. He is a director for the United Virginia Bank/Seaboard National, Pembroke Mall Merchants Association promotion chairman and an advisory board member for the National Alliance of Businessmen.

In addition, the 1975 Chamber president is the chairman of the administrative board of Haygood Methodist Church and a director of the American Cancer Society's Virginia Beach chapter.

The Chamber also elected Frederick J. Napolitano, chairman of the recent Neptune Festival, as first vice-president. He had previously served as the Chamber's secretary. Napolitano is employed by Terry Corp.

William C. Egan with Dunes Motel Inn was elected to his second term as second vice-president, while Earl Willis of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach will be secretary. Walter Royal of Thompson-Royal Dodge will begin a term as treasurer.

Condo workers plant money tree on tower

Construction workers at Cape Henry Towers Condominiums, a project under construction on Shore Drive, recently planted a tree decorated with money and checks on the top of the first 16-story tower to be completed.

The money has since been donated by the workers to the Ocean Park Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad.

The workers traditionally plant trees on the top of high rise projects if no lives have been lost during the construction.

Bennett goes the distance

Jimmy Bennett, 35, of 104 Holly Crescent in Virginia Beach, broke a club record for endurance on the treadmill at European Health Spa on Laskin Road Saturday. Bennett, a 10-year tennis pro, broke the old club record of four hours set by Marine Sgt. Rick Crumb in 1973. Club spokesmen said Bennett's time of four hours and four minutes on the treadmill was equivalent to running 24 miles.

Norfolk Academy fullback Geoff Gray (33) turns end for the Bulldogs during second half action of the school's Friday afternoon contest with Blue Ridge.

The Bulldogs had a tough afternoon with the visitors from Dike, Va., and Blue Ridge came away with a 14-8 win.

Geoff Gray happy at NA

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

Amid the glut of sports publicity that area high school teams receive each season, there are heard squeaks of assertion from Tidewater's private secondary institutions. Schools like Norfolk Academy must elbow their way through piles of Kellam and Kempsville clippings to get their few allotted inches of copy.

The relatively new Norfolk Academy campus has settled its haunches in the rolling grassland near Lake Wright, close to the Virginia Wesleyan College campus and right across the interstate from Lake Taylor High School.

But Bulldogs only cross 1-64 for junior varsity contests. A school that numbers 1000 students in all twelve grades—and perhaps 300 in the senior high level, called the Upper School—cannot afford frequent meetings with public school grid squads drawn from student bodies of 2000 or more.

Yet the Virginia Prep League rolls on.

"I think we got up too soon for the Catholic game. We were stale by Thursday."

Playing schools with names like Virginia Episcopal and St. Christophers, conjures up images of station wagons serving as team buses, and last minute announcements for anyone with officiating experience to please come down to the playing field.

The reality of the sports programs in Virginia's prep schools is that for their size, the quality of athletic competition is equal if not superior to public school athletics.

The main difference lies in the attitude of Norfolk Academy athletes.

Geoff Gray is a senior at the Academy and plays fullback on the varsity squad coached by Royce Jones, son of a retired Navy captain. Geoff has gone to the Academy since 7th grade.

"There is an entrance examination you have to take to get in," says Gray. "A lot of my friends applied back then to get in, but only two made it. It's pretty hard academically."

Gray's first two years at a private school were hard for him. "I didn't like it too much," he admits. "But my parents thought it would be a good education for me. I took a bus every day and it's a long way to go from the Beach. It was rough adjusting to the new surroundings."

It costs roughly $1,000 a year to attend Norfolk Academy, but Geoff denies any peer pressure from friends who attend public schools. "My friends aren't like that," says Geoff. "They respect you for your decision."

As a junior, Geoff was backup fullback on the Bulldogs varsity squad, until a broken collar bone took him out of action temporarily. In four games so far this season, he has rushed for more than 300 yards, averaging more than 75 yards a game.

And that's tough when you play for Royce Jones. "We like to balance our boys," says Jones, "so we alternate Geoff at fullback. He's a good, steady, hard-working kid. His best game was against St. Christopher's." The Bulldogs won that contest, 19-7.

Every year Norfolk Academy's football season comes down to the game with cross-city rival Norfolk Catholic. This year, the Bulldogs bit the dust. Catholic came away with a 22-8 victory.

"I just think we got up too early in the week for the game," says Geoff, noting a week's layoff—the only open spot in the Academy schedule—didn't help much. "We were stale by Thursday. The coaches kept us together Saturday before the game. We had a cook-out and saw a Marx Brothers' movie. But Catholic was big, real big." Geoff went on to elaborate. "Thursday we practiced and put in a few new defenses.

We didn't know it then, but a Norfolk Catholic scout was there, pretending to watch the junior varsity game."

Geoff got into football at the age of 8, playing community league ball for the Linkhorn Mariners under Coaches Ed Moore and Ducky Darden. "We were city runners-up that year," Geoff recalls.

Geoff spent his last few summers at his bicycle stand at 26th Street on the Beach. "I've had that bike stand the last three summers. Last summer I finally sold it for $1,500. I also had a couple of ten-speeds. One was stolen, and I got rid of the other one. Summers I like to play tennis." Geoff's good friends with the Beach's Hank Harris, tennis amateur rated number one in state in the 16-and-under division.

"He's a good, steady, hard-working kid," Norfolk Academy football coach Royce Jones

As far as college football is concerned, Geoff is apprehensive. "It would depend on the school," he says. "I'd like to go to Virginia or William and Mary. I'd like to stay in the state."

Geoff had a favorable view of the University of Richmond. "It's a real good school. I went up for an interview, and they seemed quite interested in me as an individual." Geoff made no mention of playing football for the Spiders. "I've gotten a few letters from VMI and Air Force, but I'm not too interested in them."

He's looking forward to majoring in business administration wherever he goes. "I want to get a good background in business," he says, "start out small and wait and see if I can branch out to other things."

But that's peering too far into the future for Geoff Gray. Right now he's concerned with his senior speech before the faculty and students of the Upper School. "You have to give a speech and write two papers as a senior," he says. But he is still pensive about college football.

"I don't know. But I'd really like to see if I could make it."

Bill Harris, halfback, First Colonial

This 6-0 185-pound powerhouse Patriot runner gathered in 114 yards in 17 rushes to lead First Colonial in overpowering the visiting Craddock Admirals, 28-0. Harris scored twice for the Patriots on runs of three and 34 yards, as well as adding two two-point conversions. Harris, a senior, has gained well over 600 yards rushing in eight games so far this season, and rates high in the district scoring charts. The Patriots now sport a 5-3 district record.

Jimmie Britt, halfback, Kellam

It's impossible to pick out a single Knight for special recognition in their crushing 41-0 victory over Cox, a game that played over the video waves of Tidewater last Saturday. But running back Jimmie Britt, bursting from behind the superb Kellam offensive line for touchdown runs of eight and 98 yards in the first quarter. This early demoralization of the heralded Cox defense contributed more to the eventual shutout than anything else. Britt exploded for 166 yards on 17 carries, while his backfield mate Margo Dixon had just 35 yards less and he carried the ball only eight times. The Knights were flawless, and happily played their best game of the season in front of television cameras.

Sam Eure, quarterback, Princess Anne

The Cavaliers turned their season around Friday night. After losing three straight games, Princess Anne upset the Kempsville Chiefs, 18-13, on the once-dubious arm of Sam Eure. The 6-2 170-pound Cavalier field general unleashed a passing attack that rolled up 112 yards against a big and mean Kempsville defensive unit. The Cavaliers had to stage a comeback in the fourth quarter, with Eure directing a 90-yard scoring drive. With 30 seconds remaining, PA linebacker Craig Vosler recovered a Mike Crabtree fumble, and on the next play Eure bombed the Chiefs with a pass to Jay Birsch that went 85 yards for the game-winning touchdown. The Cavaliers are now 5-3 in the district.

COACHES' CORNER

Al Habibi, Cox

"Probably Derek Canaan, our linebacker. He's quick. He runs a 10.1 100, and he's hard-nosed. I think most teams we've played will remember number 43. Derek is a real leader on defense. Right now he's leading the team in tackles."

Ralph Gahagan, Princess Anne

"I'd have to pick our quarterback, Sam Eure. I just think he's one of the best quarterbacks in the area. We're not a throwing team. I don't think any of the teams around here are. He ran in the winning touchdown against First Colonial."

Ed Booth, Kempsville

"Daniel Campbell (a 6-0, 195-pound senior). He goes both ways for us at offensive and defensive guard. He's quick and reads well (on defense). Campbell's done a good job for us."

Johnny Cooke, Kellam

"We play as a unit. But I'd have to say defensive back Gary Woodhouse. He's also defensive captain and one of the best defensive backs in the area. This is his third year starting for us. I'd have to mention (defensive guard) Lavern Forbes and (two-way guard) Alfred Simpson."

Terry Morton, Bayside

"I think that our linebacker, John Wynn, is really underrated. He's in on most of our tackles. Wynn is a real hustler. He always manages to be around the ball."

Frank Webster, First Colonial

"I would say we have a whole bunch of players who haven't received the recognition they deserved. Darryl Doss, who plays defensive tackle for us, has started (on varsity) for three years now. He's a senior and has played a good steady ball game every game for us. The Kempsville game, Doss led in tackles."

Keys to victory

Beach games this weekend find the six city high schools all taking a week off from intra-city rivalries by playing Norfolk or Chesapeake teams. Only Kellam hits the road, traveling to Met Park to take on Granby.

Maury at First Colonial

One of the two best bets for an exciting football evening this weekend, Maury and First Colonial represent two of the best offensive teams in the district. The Commodores' attack features Lee Fletcher, who set a Tidewater rushing record two weeks ago of 319 yards against Bayside, as well as a huge fullback in Vincent Smith. But they're going against one of the toughest defensive units in the city. All of the Patriots' losses have been by one touchdown or less. First Colonial has the most potent touchdown pass combination in the district between quarterback Tracy Moon and end Ron Zoll-coffer.

Lake Taylor at Princess Anne

This game is the other "best bet" for Friday night. Ralph Gahagan's Cavaliers have fallen on hard times, losing enough games to remove them from district contention. The problems seem to be stemming from the Princess Anne offensive line. The Cavaliers' attack, with Sam Eure at the controls, has been stymied again and again, and Gahagan's ball-control football has not been working recently. The Titans present a tough problem defensively, too, and on offense they sport Amos Lawrence at halfback. The Cavaliers will have to weary the Titan defense with their ball-control game plan and key on Lawrence to stop Lake Taylor's attack.

Kellam at Granby (Met Park)

The Knights travel to Norfolk to battle the Comets, certainly an emotional letdown after being televised last week when they hosted Cox. The Comets have the offensive potential in back Len Tatum, but the offensive line is young and not used to moving out people the size of the Kellam line. The Knights will not have a hard time rolling up the yardage, but their defense will effectively stop any uppity Comet surges.

Indian River at Kempsville

The Chiefs have a relative breather before meeting Norview next week. But they had better be wary of the Braves' defense, a unit that has harried good offensive teams in the Southeastern District all season. But size is an important factor here, and the Braves' biggest player is 210-pound Corey Cummings who goes both ways. The huge Chiefs should have no trouble opening the holes or stopping the weak Indian River attack. Mistakes, however, could even things up considerably.

Norview at Bayside

Morton's Marlins are getting tougher as the season progresses, and that is well because their schedule has no softness in its tail-end. The Marlins take on a Pilot team that has upset Princess Anne and tied Lake Taylor in two defensive battles. Bayside's defense has been tenacious against powerful Maury and others, but the offense has been inconsistent, scoring little more than one touchdown a game. Butch Butler and Artie Bueche are one of the best passing combinations around, but moving against the Pilots will be tough. A defensive battle for sure.

Booker T. Washington at Cox

The Falcons will be going for their second win of the season against a Booker squad that has shown flashes of offense but little else. The intimidating Cox defense, led by line stalwarts Bobby Stubbs, Bill Barnett and linebacker Derek Canaan, will have little trouble stopping the Bookers. Quarterbacks Blaine Cipriano and Art Motley, along with backs Mike Cuffee and Larry Goffigan, should have a field day. A good time for Cox to flex a few offensive muscles.

Bayside's Ed Olszak likes it just fine on defensive line

By STEVE BIONDO
Sun Staff Writer

Ask a football player which he prefers playing, offense or defense, and the answer almost always will be, "Defense."

If you're a lineman, that is. Those who are smaller, but have the hands and moves and speed a back needs, will prefer to run with the ball and get the yardage and points and - inevitably - the glory.

But defense appeals to the rest, and the appeal is not hard to understand, particularly for someone like Ed Olszak, who plays defensive tackle for the Bayside Marlins.

"I like the hitting," he says. "The Marlins are a team beset with youth and inexperience, and Ed Olszak is one of the few seniors on the squad. On the Marlin team, that's a prerequisite for the title of team captain, which Olszak shares with quarterback Butch Butler and linebacker John Wynn, also seniors.

Terry Morton's team this season has had its problems, and one is not having Roscoe Coles in the backfield. Coles was graduated last year and now plays at Virginia Tech. As a senior he led the Marlins to an 8-2 season and the top of the total offense standings. Bayside was the leading rushing team in the Eastern District in 1973, averaging 298 yards total offense per game. Their defense allowed just 192 yards per game.

But now the school's grid team has fallen on hard times. Their record so far this year reads 2-5-1, and Bayside has yet to meet Norview and Princess Anne.

Olszak's optimism has not diminished, though. "We still have a great team," he says. "Our trouble is we just don't score. But we have a good time. I'd like to win more, but as long as you're out there enjoying it, that's what counts."

At 6-1 and weighing 195, Olszak is not the biggest defensive lineman in the district, or even on his own team. Huge Renard Hines plays the other tackle spot (and at fullback on offense in certain situations) and his 245 pounds is spread over a 6-2 frame. Hines has received much publicity because of his size and quickness, but Coach Morton has some good words for Olszak.

Thus far this season Morton cites Olszak and linebacker Wynn as the big defensive performers for Bayside this season.

Ed went through the usual one year of junior varsity ball, and spent his last two years on varsity as a starter. He's never played anything else but the line, and he likes it that way. Particularly on defense.

"Defensive tackle is fun," he says. "You get more initial contact, you can stunt and all that. You have to read the guy in front of you and try to tell which way he's going to go."

Olszak says his best game was against Granby, but then he thinks the defense has played well throughout the season.

Until last week against Lake Taylor.

"It wasn't too good. Our defense really let down, making a lot of big mistakes," says Olszak. "It used to be that the defense played real well and the offense couldn't do anything. But that turned right around in that game."

Bayside was down at half-time against Lake Taylor, 24-12. Says Olszak, "It looked like we could really pull it out if we tried. We came out pretty fired up. But then Lake Taylor came right out and scored. It was just a bad night."

The Titans rolled it up on Bayside, beating them 44-18.

The Marlin defense has been tough this year in a district that is one of the most competitive in the state. As Olszak says, "They're just all good."

"We still have a great team...I'd like to play here another four years."

There are no really bad teams around here," And the key to winning, he says, is the team effort. That's what happened against Lake Taylor, says Olszak. "We had a lot of individual efforts, but no real team effort."

But Olszak will leave the team at the end of the season with no regrets. Head coach Terry Morton's first season at Bayside has been no disappointment to Olszak. "The coaches are all great," he says. "I'd like to play here for another four years." Terry Morton wishes Olszak could.

Beach student stars at Chowan

Princess Anne High School alumnus Randy Michaelson, who plays defensive tackle for the Chowan, N.C., College Braves, turned in his finest performance of the season Oct. 18 as Chowan defeated Hudson Valley Community College 15-7 in Troy, N.Y.

Michaelson came off the bench to make nine individual tackles and four assists, as well as sacking the Hudson Valley quarterback two times, reported Braves head coach Jim Garrison.

Other Beach players on the Chowan squad include tight end Sonny Blackmon, a graduate of Kellam High School, and defensive back Larry Holbert of First Colonial. Chowan's football record so far this season is 5-1, and 3-1 in the Coastal Conference.

Club funds scholarship

A scholarship fund grant of $13,928.10 has been jointly awarded by the Virginia Beach Sports Club and the Virginia All-Star Foundation to Virginia Wesleyan College. It was announced Oct. 23.

The endowed fund will establish a yearly scholarship for a Virginia Beach student. Involvement in athletics is not a prerequisite for receiving the scholarship.

Contest winner

The winners of last week's football games were: James L. Alonzo, Virginia Beach, first; Fred Martin, Va. Beach, second; and Felix A. Joyner of Chesapeake took third.

Amendment

"I don't think it's a very well-understood amendment," he remarked, and he thinks many voters will get their first look at it in the voting booth. Hopefully, he added, "they'll think it's a good idea."

But then, McClanan admitted, "there is the possibility of people voting 'no' on everything in sight" because they may think it is simply a "giveaway of public funds."

Unlike the other legislators, Rhodes said he's "done some soul searching" on the proposed amendment, but in the final analysis decided that it is needed.

"I was torn between the idea of separation of church and state," he explained, while realizing that private colleges, which supplement public higher education, need help. Many private colleges are affiliated with religious organizations.

Giving the grant to students instead of the universities themselves, Rhodes said, would leave the Assembly on "much sounder ground."

Any implementation of the constitutional amendment would be left up to the Assembly, he added, "and we're the ones who have to stand the test of election."

"If we were talking about a situation of state aid to private institutions (instead of to students)," Rhodes observed, "then philosophically I'd have to oppose it."

He said he does not think most voters realize the amendment will be on Tuesday's ballot. He added, "It hasn't had the amount of publicity it should have had."

Opponents of the constitutional change are concerned that it will divert money from public higher education.

Some also object to state aid to private institutions, especially if they are operated by a religious organization, as many of Virginia's private colleges are.

Without private colleges, Rhodes said, "public institutions would be much more overcrowded than they are currently. Certainly private schools do contribute, and they do have a place in the system."

Private institutions are "all part of a big, well-coordinated program" throughout Virginia, Rhodes said, "and I'm quite obviously concerned that independent schools are able to exist."

But Rhodes said he had to resolve the separation between church and state in his own mind, "and frankly, I wavered to some degree."

"The key to the amendment in my view," the legislator said, "is that it will take enabling legislation" to provide aid to private college students.

Lakes

that receives the benefit is going to pay," he said. "The most practical, workable method" would be tax assessments, he added, rather than voluntary efforts by homeowner organizations.

The Council will hold another briefing on the lakes study Dec. 2, and also will hold a public hearing on the study in the future.

City Manager Roger Scott said that the city could not print copies of the 72-page report for all homeowners adjacent to lakes, but he said copies will be available for groups to check out. The studies also will be available for reference at city libraries.

Of the 85 lakes in Virginia Beach which are five acres or more, all but 17 are privately-owned.

Virginia Beach owns 11 lakes, Norfolk owns five and the state owns one. Most of the privately-owned lakes belong to the surrounding property owners, although corporations own 19 lakes and three lakes are owned by a combination of property owners and a corporation, which usually owns the dam.

Ten lakes belong to single owners, while a civic league also holds the title to one lake.

The study showed that 36 of the 85 lakes were created by water held back by a dam, while 31 are borrow pits. The city also has eight natural lakes, five lagoons and five dug ponds.

'State schools may suffer'

McCoy opposes aid

A constitutional amendment on the Nov. 5 ballot which would allow the Virginia General Assembly to provide aid to students attending private colleges and universities is not in the best interests of Tidewater residents, according to Virginia Beach City Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy.

If the amendment passes, the General Assembly could appropriate funds to give tuition grants to students attending private colleges, and McCoy is concerned that state-supported institutions, such as Old Dominion University, Tidewater Community College and Norfolk State University, would suffer.

If no additional money is generated, McCoy said the funds most likely would come from the educational portion of the state budget, perhaps causing tuition at state institutions to rise.

McCoy pointed out that the three Tidewater area state schools have combined enrollments of more than 25,000 students.

I have nothing against Virginia Wesleyan College (a private Methodist-supported school), McCoy said, but I wouldn't want 25,000 students to pay higher tuition so that 600 or so could have financial help.

Kempsville Borough Councilman McCoy is a member of the Old Dominion University Board of Visitors and former chairman of the board of Tidewater Community College.

Club to search for 'Cutest'

The Cavalier Junior Women's Club will have an eye out for cutest cutes and curls in the organization's second annual Cutest Child Contest.

Entries may be made Nov. 1 and 14 by sending a photograph, no smaller than a wallet size and no larger than eight by ten, to Joan Ware, 2333 Kingsman Arch, Virginia Beach, 23456, or delivered to the ABC Kiddie Shop at Military Circle.

Children must be between 6 months and 5 years of age to qualify and a donation of $1 must accompany the photograph. The photos may be in black and white or color and can be candid shots or posed portraits. The child's name, address, phone number and age should be written on the back of the photograph.

First prize winner will receive a $25 gift certificate from the ABC Kiddie Shop, while the second prize winner gets an eight by ten color portrait. The place entry will win a tricycle.

Joan Ware, club project director, reported that the proceeds from the contest will be used for the organization's social programs with youngsters and elderly.

Last year, she noted, proceeds were used to purchase a horse for Camp Easter Seal.

Judging will take place Nov. 16, and the prizes will be awarded after the contest at the ABC Kiddie Shop.

Mrs. Ware said entrants do not have to be present for the judging.

Mt. Zion pastor celebrates 10th year

Rev. P.M. Caldwell, pastor of Mt. Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church, 1046 Princess Anne Road, Virginia Beach celebrated his 10th anniversary at the church this week.

Church members joined the pastor at an afternoon fellowship dinner Saturday. The church also sponsored nightly sermons featuring ministers from neighboring Virginia Beach churches.

Baptist Church and Rev. J.L. Fenner Sr. of the First Baptist Church at Lynnhaven.

Before coming to Virginia Beach, Rev. Caldwell was pastor of the Mt. Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church in Roanoke. He graduated from an Ohio seminary.

Guest sermons were given by Rev. S.S. Scott Jr. of Union Baptist Church, Rev. H. Cason of Mt. Bethel

NEW YORK — The Southern Baptists, organized during the dispute over slavery before the Civil War, elected their first black to a top denominational post.

The Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America voted to establish its first social action program in the United States and Canada.

The United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., confronted by falling income and rising costs, was forced to pare its 1975 operations budget by 25 per cent.

These were some of the principal actions of major regional meetings at which they took stock of their internal problems, made plans for the future and stated their views on national issues.

Among the subjects that came up with some frequency were the demands of women for full equality in the church, which contributes to the erasms for Vietnam War the draft dodgers and deserters, delegates approved steps to eliminate "ambiguities of generic terminology and the restriction of a masculine orientation of language."

The Unitarian Universalist Association voted to eliminate church documents and asked all groups in the denomination to "strive for necessary changes" in policies and procedures regarding men and women.

In voting to establish a social action program, representatives of the two million adherents of Greek Orthodox

The Reformed Church in America, meeting on Long Island, adopted a report requesting reaffirmation of equality for all men and women and recognizing that discrimination exists against women.

The Lutheran Church in America's seventh biennial convention passed a resolution expressing concern "over the deterioration of integrity at all levels of government which contributes to the erosion of moral standards."

The Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (South) and the United Presbyterians, both meeting at the same time in Louisville, made new moves toward a possible merger that would heal a split created in pre-Civil War days. Both voted unanimously to begin the long negotiations that could lead to reunion by 1984.

The United Presbyterians, in addition to deciding to tighten the denominational belt, "condemned "the moral bankruptcy of the American body politic" for allowing the national crisis to reach "epidemic proportions."

They reaffirmed their support of unconditional amnesty for all Vietnam War dissenters.

The purpose of the meeting is to present a yearly report on Master Parks and Recreational Programs, and to confer with the public regarding future developments. The public is invited and urged to participate in the discussions.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Oct. 30, 1974

In John I the Apostle wrote:

"In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life and the life was the life of men. And the light shined in the darkness and the darkness comprehended it not."

"Nearly everyone is in favor of going to heaven, but too many are hoping they'll live long enough to see an easing of the entrance requirements." copy A

Back to class for teachers

Sponsored by the Virginia Beach Educational Media Center, and coordinated by Sandy Linkous, curriculum specialist, the workshop was designed to familiarize participants with the ESS materials which will be used and evaluated in six elementary schools through the 1974-75 school year.

Beach nurses arm for battle

If a recommendation to eliminate school nurses in Virginia ever shows up in the form of proposed legislation, Virginia Beach school nurses won't take it sitting down.

A group of nurses and their supporters met with Del. Owen Pickett this week to emphasize their objections to a recommendation that the Department of Public Health take over duties school nurses now fulfill.

Although the proposal isn't in the form of legislation yet, a study has recommended that Virginia earmark $5 million for the program.

The idea won support from school and public health officials in Fairfax who have tried it locally, and reported that it was a success.

Supporters of the proposal say it will enable public health nurses to test children for sight and hearing defects and other problems at an earlier age, rather than waiting until children enter school.

The Virginia Beach school nurses contend that the switch would mean lower quality preventive health care.

Betty Adams, a nurse at Aragona Elementary School, told Pickett that the "nurses are not worried about themselves," but are concerned about the "quality of care the children are receiving."

Ruth Cole, principal at Aragona Elementary School, said she has seen systems when the Department of Public Health handled the school's nursing office. "We never had a nurse when we needed one, and there was no testing in schools. I'm leary of this," Pickett assured the nurses that it is unlikely that Virginia will set aside $5 million for a new program. Possibilities of such legislation being approved this year, he added, "are extremely remote, certainly not for the 1975 session."

Jody Jensen, president elect for the Virginia Educational Association Department of School Nurses, replied, "We'd like to make sure we don't have to worry about it next year when we do have money."

Mrs. Adams said Beach PTA organizations "if necessary will hire a bus and go to Richmond and picket."

Thelma Sussewind of the Center for Effective Learning said the Public Health Department "can't compare with what we're doing in Virginia Beach every child is screened on a regular basis."

She charged that in areas where the Public Health Department is responsible for screening, "it gradually pulled nurses out to a half-day, three days a week and scrapped the hearing tests altogether."

Fourteen elementary schools in Virginia Beach have their own full-time nurses.

"I like what I hear about the system in Virginia Beach," Pickett said, "and I see no reason to change it."

Pickett advised the group to ask the School Board to take a stand on the issue because its opinions would probably have the most impact on state legislators.

"Studies in and of themselves don't change the law," he added. "We'll just have to see if any serious effort comes forth."

Pickett advised the group to ask the School Board to take a stand on the issue because its opinions would probably have the most impact on state legislators.

Friends School plans festival

The Friends School of Virginia Beach is holding a fall festival Saturday on the school grounds at 1537 Laskin Road. The festival will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is open to the public.

Festival attractions include handicrafts, pony rides, baked goods, concession stands, a flea market and a space walk for the children. Headmaster Richard Lawson said that the festival's purpose is to raise funds for a gymnasium to be built on the school grounds.

Lawson said the projected cost of the gymnasium would be from $100,000 to $250,000, but that plans have not been completed because of lack of funds.

City libraries plan festivities

Have you ever seen an empty glass turn into a glass full of candy? Or a balloon that resembles a dog? Or a trophy that looks like a pumpkin? If you haven't - or even if you have - come join the fun at Pembroke Mall Thursday at 4 p.m. by the fountain.

The Virginia Beach Department of Libraries and Information and the Friends of the Library are sponsoring a children's costume contest for children ages 3 through 14. Candy the Clown will entertain with a magic show. All contestants will be divided into three age groups: 3-6 years, 7-10 years and 11-14 years. Trophies shaped like pumpkins will be awarded to first place winners in each category as well as to the most original costume of all entries. Second and third place winners will receive gift certificates for ice cream. Ribbons of recognition will be awarded to all winners in each category and to any honorable mentions that the judges may wish to present.

For further information contact Ann Scott, children's coordinator for the Beach Libraries, at 340-2987.

When 300 sophisticated bankers were asked how they invested their own money, guess what 9 out of 10 admitted?

They were asked: "How do you invest today for maximum enjoyment and return tomorrow?"

The choices ranged from real estate to coins and stamps. From stocks and bonds to pension plans.

The bankers were all executives and officers. From banking institutions in twelve of the largest cities across the country. They were all professional investment counselors, men who knew the money market and knew the best ways to get the highest yield on their money.

Yet, for their own investments, 88% chose a savings account as one of the most important investment options.

How come? Because in spite of everything (our wobbly economy, the ups and downs on Wall Street) a savings account is still the soundest and surest investment we can make.

For bankers as well as everyone else. Because on pay day, we aren't too different from you.

We have our bills to pay. We have our plans for the future, too.

With a savings account our money is always there when we need it and we can get to it any time we want it.

There's a sense of security in that.

So if you're facing a decision on how to plan for the future, don't face it alone.

At United Virginia, we can help you decide the best way to save your money. (And it will probably be very much like the way we invest our own.)

If three hundred banking executives across the country haven't convinced you, come talk to your personal banker at United Virginia.

In spite of today's economy a savings account still hasn't gone out of style.

Care for your car

What's the matter with this darn thing? Della Brod of Chesapeake looks under the hood of her stalled automobile but is not sure how to cope with the problem. Keeping all of your car's components in good working order is your best insurance against emergencies caused by equipment failure. Get ready for the rough weather ahead. See your auto service man today.

It Takes More than Anti-Freeze to . . .

Prepare Your Car for Winter

Getting your car ready for winter's severe temperatures and driving conditions should involve a lot more than just adding anti-freeze. The American Petroleum Institute has developed a check list that may help you get ready for the cold weather ahead.

But first, let's look at anti-freeze. Today's cars are designed to use the "permanent" or ethylene glycol type — not the older "alcohol" base variety. Although it is called permanent anti-freeze, it should be replaced at least once a year, or if your car is equipped with air conditioning, twice a year.

Change Anti-Freeze

Anti-freeze solutions also act as rust inhibitors and water-pump lubricants and contain additives that lose their effectiveness after a year's driving.

When changing anti-freeze, begin with a careful check of the condition of the radiator hoses, thermostat, and radiator. Have your mechanic "pressure test" your cooling system. Replace worn hoses before they leak.

If all systems check out, drain and flush the radiator. Replace the coolant liquid with a 50-50 mixture of water and ethylene glycol type anti-freeze. This will offer maximum protection. Do NOT use 100% anti-freeze, use the 50-50 mixture—it's cheaper and more efficient.

Do not overfill the radiator; fill only one or two inches from the top — if it is too full, the overflow that occurs when the engine heats up will spill the anti-freeze onto the street.

Check the tension and condition of your fan and generator belts. These are critical to proper cooling and battery charging. Check with your service station about the multi-grade oil suitable for winter use.

Remember Snow Tires

Get your snow tires put on early and avoid the long wait during the first snow fall.

Park your car in a garage, if possible, to keep the engine from getting cold.

Drive on the "top half" of the tank.

Warm-Up Vial

Be sure to give your car a moment or two to warm up properly, but don't let it idle for long periods of time. This can foul the spark plugs and also wastes gasoline. Remember, cars pollute more when first started.

Slippery Driving Hazards Come

Autumn and winter driving can hold numerous hidden hazards. Wet leaves on the road surface or patches of ice on bridges or shady pavement can be far more dangerous than driving on newly fallen snow.

If you run into icy stretches or slick pavement, reduce speed but don't slam on the brakes. If you brake too hard, you're likely to lose traction and start skidding. Also, avoid any abrupt steering movements.

Maintenance Hints For Windows, Windshields

The following suggestions for auto glass maintenance are offered by Kari K. Alberti, auto glass replacement manager for Libbey-Owens-Ford.

• KEEP WINDOWS CLEAN. A dirty windshield, rear window or sideights impairs vision. Dirt accumulation may form a grit that scratches the glass when it is wiped.

• KNOCK ICE OFF WIPER BLADES in winter, to maintain the efficiency of the wipers.

• REPLACE BROKEN OR CRACKED windshields immediately. Clear, unobstructed vision is important at all times.

• NEVER USE ABRASIVE CLEANERS such as rubbing compound on the inside of the rear window if it is the defogging type. The lines on the glass surface carry an electrical current and damaging them can break the circuit.

• DON'T USE GLASS AS A HANDLE to slam door. This undue stress may break the glass.

Bad Weather Calls for Tire Check

Condition of Treads, Maintenance Of Air Pressure Called Vtally Important Everywhere

With winter approaching motorists should check their tires and make sure their cars are prepared for the season's snow and icy conditions.

Snow tires on the rear wheels with plenty of tread or added studs give the best assurance of safety and improved car performance in cold regions of the country. For motorists in warmer climates, new tires with good tread should be sufficient.

Maintaining air pressure as recommended in the owner's manual remains vitally important everywhere. Also, it is important to remember that balding tires of any type increase the chances of skidding and cause a lack of steering and braking effectiveness.

Auto Survey Advises "Know Your Car"

If the results of a survey just released by the U.S. Department of Transportation are any indication, many motorists are deluding themselves about the safe mechanical condition of their cars.

Three quarters of the 14,500 motorists surveyed described their cars as "very safe," yet vehicle inspection reports show over half the cars on the road need repairs to restore them to safe mechanical condition.

Twelve percent of the motorists answering the D.O.T. questionnaire called their cars only "somewhat" safe.

The study, conducted by Intext, Transportation Research Division, Scranton, Pa., involved a representative sampling of car owners in 50 states. Purpose of the survey was to determine the attitudes and habits of the motorist public, as related to vehicle maintenance.

Safer Drivers Know More
Significant among the findings disclosed by DOT: people who are relatively knowledgeable about their cars report 1/3 to 1/2 fewer accidents or near-accidents due to mechanical trouble than those who are not. The report also shows that the more knowledgeable owner is more likely to be conscientious about car care.

How do people feel about car care as it relates to safety? Eighty-six percent of those surveyed believed that regular maintenance helps prevent accidents. Ninety-one percent agreed that all states should have compulsory vehicle inspection.

Women's Communications

When asked where they obtained information about keeping their cars in safe mechanical condition, 36 percent said they draw upon their own knowledge. Twenty-eight percent relied upon their mechanics for their information. Twenty-two percent said their primary source was their owners manual.

Eight out of ten correctly answered all questions related to mechanical knowledge of the car.

Women appear to be more conscientious about regular car maintenance than men, and they reflect more concern for automobile safety, according to Dr. Harold L. Henderson, Intext's Principal Investigator on the study.

"While female respondents reported having their cars checked more frequently, they did not rely on their own knowledge for these checks or for decisions on car maintenance. Their main source of expertise was service station and garage mechanics.

"If the general public could be successfully educated," he concludes, "then we could expect a considerable reduction in defect-related accidents among owners who, at present, lack adequate knowledge."

Radical Changes

Radical weather changes also affect the life and performance of an engine in other ways, Buxton said.

It can cause moisture to gather inside the engine while not running. The moisture combines with the oil to form acid and the acid eats at the metal. That's why it is better to drive a car 10 miles than two miles, Buxton said, because it gives the engine a chance to burn the moisture out.

"You take a car and don't maintain it and it might go 100,000 miles," Buxton said. "I'll take care of mine—and drive it 150,000 miles."

STOP ME IF YOU'VE HEARD THIS . . .

Stopping a car on dry pavement at 20 miles per hour requires 17 feet of distance. At the same speed on glare ice, the distance required is 149 feet with regular tires and 120 feet with studded snow tires. Slow down on ice.

A TOUGH GRIND

Do your standard transmission gears grind on a cold winter morning? The likely cause is that your gear lubricant is too heavy for the temperature, especially when starting out. Have your favorite mechanic check the condition.

Most Tire Repairs Are Temporary, Reports National Safety Council

Careful drivers have their tire pressure checked regularly, as the National Safety Council advises. However, in the event of a flat tire, do you know how to have it repaired properly? Many of the tires supposedly receiving "permanent repair" do not meet safety tests.

The Council warns that external repairs on tubeless tires are good only for up to 100 miles of travel at speeds not exceeding 50 miles per hour. It is recommended that these temporary repairs be used only in emergencies.

For safe and permanent repair, a tire must be sealed from the inside. The use of an outside plug is only a temporary repair. Unless the wheel is impossible to know if the inner layer is intact and not broken, damage which is critical to the tire.

Daytime Use of Car Lights Cuts Accidents for Drivers

Fall and winter driving means increased hours of darkness. Obviously, your car's lights will be getting more use. But do you use your lights as much as you should?

According to professional drivers, use of headlights has an effect on safety. Checker Cab Company in Chicago conducted a 12-month experiment where drivers put on their headlights during the day as well as at night.

The result was a 10 percent decrease in accidents. Bodily injury accidents were reduced 12 percent.

Why the decrease?

According to Checker, "First, by physically turning on and shutting off the headlights, the driver is reminded he is doing something for safety."

"Second, pedestrians and other drivers are constantly telling our men that their lights are on and this serves as a further reminder of safety to the driver. Also, when Checker drivers see other Checker cabs with their headlights on, they think of safety."

Keeping Warm...

With winter on its way, better make sure your car heater is functioning properly.

Often passengers in the front seat are comfortable but those in the back seat are cold. You turn up the heat, but it doesn't seem to make it to the back. The hot gets hotter and the cold stay cold.

One reason for this may be a clutter under-seat. Generally, the heat flow is designed to travel under the front seat to the rear compartment. If there are rags, papers, tools and other things in the way the heat will be prevented from reaching the back.

Best Insurance Against Emergency is Good Care

Keeping all of your car's components in good working order is your best insurance against emergencies caused by equipment failure. But should critical equipment fail, due to neglect or unforeseen circumstances, it's vital to know how to react, says the National Safety Council.

Four situations that could confront a driver and prove disastrous are:

- Stuck gas pedal
- Brake failure
- Blowout
- Fire in engine compartment

If your gas pedal becomes stuck to the floor board, simply turn off the ignition, put the car in neutral and stop. If your car has power steering and brakes, these components will work harder so be prepared for the occurrence.

IF BRAKES FAIL

Should you step on the National Safety Council Cites What Is Most Likely to Happen Unexpectedly, Offers Advice on How to Cope with the Problem...

brake and the pedal sinks to the floor, try pumping to build up pressure. If there is no pressure, coast in gear and use the hand brake. For quicker stops, shift into a lower forward gear.

If all of these precautions fail, look for something to sidewipe such as a guard rail, snow bank or parked car. Use your horn and lights to warn other motorists or pedestrians that you are out of control.

HOW TO HANDLE A BLOWOUT

If you experience a blowout, keep a firm grip on the steering wheel and avoid slamming on the brakes or you risk losing control of the car. A smooth pumping of the brakes is recommended. Then pull off the road at the nearest safe spot.

HOW TO COPE WITH FIRE

Most engine compartment fires are caused by short circuits in the electrical system. Should you experience such a fire, immediately pull the jack handle out of the trunk, wrap protective cloth around it and rip loose any burning wires.

FilterChange Can Increase Life of Car

"Should I change oil filter when I change oil?"

Typically, the $4.00 filter doubles the cost of his oil change. Is it worth it? Or should he, as some car manufacturers suggest, change oil filter with every other oil change?

Readers Digest, in a report to consumers, answered the question this way:

"To protect your engine and your warranty, changing the oil filter frequently is important. The filter removes the heavy grit and dust that your engine has sucked in; eventually it gets clogged and can take no more.

If you change oil after 4,000 to 6,000 miles, it certainly pays to install a new filter each time. If you change more frequently you may want to replace the oil filter at each second oil change."

For the experienced car buff or mechanic the answer is simple: change filter whenever you change oil without question. Why? There are three reasons:

1. A filter holds a quart of oil that does not drain with the five quart crankcase. An oil change without a filter change is thus only an 80% change, and the new oil is immediately contaminated.

2. Car manufacturers' recommendations are for ideal conditions that seldom exist — sustained turnpike driving in dust-free regions with temperate climate. Stop-and-go short hop neighborhood driving is tough on engines since they never get hot enough.
